ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 7, 1885.

Notes of the Week.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, December 19th; Madras and Allahabad, December 17th; Calcutta, December 16th; Ceylon, December 14th; Burma, December 12th.

TO-MORROW is the anniversary of the occupation of Kandahar by British troops under the orders of Lord Beaconsfield, by which Lord Lytton's wise and statesmanlike plan for the security of our North-West frontier and the peace of India was accomplished. To-day, after four-and-a-half years rule of a Radical Ministry, that frontier is in a more defenceless state than it ever was before; whilst the Russian Government is menacing us in the most insistent manner, openly in the Russian Press, and covertly in the diplomatic humiliation it is inflicting on our unfortunate Boundary Commission. All the world now sees that, if it had not been for our scuttle from Kandahar, we might at this moment be laughing at threats which, as matters actually stand, are far too serious for mirth. If war with Germany should be one of the many pleasing results of Mr. Gladstone's state-craft, it cannot be doubted that Prince Bismarck's first move would be, to let loose the Russian hordes on India. And then the British public will learn how it was gulled by the misrepresentations of Midlothian—and will find out whose advice was for the national advantage, that of the statesmen who secured for us a scientific frontier, or that of the factious deceivers who ridiculed it in order to discredit Lord Beaconsfield.

IF, as appears somewhat likely, we are to have an immediate change of Ministry, it is to be hoped that Mr. Gladstone will have the patriotism to resign before actually committing us to the European war into which we are clearly drifting. With Lord Salisbury in Downing-street and Lord Dufferin at Calcutta there would be little danger, in spite of the defenceless condition to which we have been reduced, of Russian brag being translated into Russian action. When England is to herself true—that is to say, when her affairs are managed by patriotic statesmen, and not by cosmopolitan doctrinaires—we are apt to show a front that is by no means encouraging to an enemy.

FOR the security of the Indian empire at a critical time, no combination could possibly be better than that of a Liberal Imperialist as Viceroy at Calcutta, with a Tory Ministry at home. The wise and vigorous action of Lord Dufferin will receive cordial and judicious support from Lord Salisbury, while the Viceroy's reputed Liberalism may be trusted, to some extent, to protect his policy from the factious virulence of the Radicals.

WHILE the harvest sown by Mr. Gladstone and Lord Ripon on the North-West frontier seems to be rapidly ripening another similar crop due to the same evil influences is springing up at the other extremity of the empire. Not only is the trade of Rangoon being ruined by the disturbances in Upper Burma, but the steady approach of the French towards Siam is fatally affecting British prestige, while the unrest in all directions across the frontier is naturally spreading itself within. Our recent policy has been one calculated to force on drastic changes; and the struggle at Bhamo seems likely to force us at once to pluck the remaining half of Lord Dalhousie's "cherry."

THE spirit in which Englishmen in general look on the threats of Russia is well expressed by the Times of Monday last:—

But be the road what it may the defenders of India are of different type from any encountered by Greek or Persian or Tartar, and Russia will make a ruinous mistake if she concludes from the feebleness of a passing Administration or the transient ascendancy of a doctrinaire fashion that Englishmen have lost the qualities which have made this little island the mother of nations and the mistress of an empire.

THE Moplah riots at Malliapuram may be regarded as the first instalment of Lord Ripon's legacy to his successor.

THE Noove Vremya, the organ of the Muscovite National party, warmly approves of General Soboleff's call for an invasion of India, which it calls à propos. And this paper further states that the question of delimiting the Russo-Afghan frontier is not progressing "as smoothly as the English expected"—referring, however, rather to the expectations of Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues than to those of more competent authorities on the subject.

THE "unscientific" frontier is turning out to be even more ridiculous than it was supposed to be. The chief stations on that frontier are now stated to be absolutely inaccessible to each other during a considerable portion of the year.

H.H. THE RAO of Curch has established a scholarship of Rs. 200 a month, tenable in Europe or America, for a reasonable time, to enable the holder to acquire a liberal technical education. His Highness has also founded a Destitute Fund endowed with Rs. 50,000, a Museum at a cost of Rs. 32,000, and a Sanskrit Patshala, with a capacity of Rs. 25,000, the last to commemorate the memory of the late Dowager Rani Naniba Sheba.

WE take the following items of Personal Intelligence of our Indian visitors from the Journal of the National Indian Association:—

The following gentlemen have been elected non-resident members of the Royal Asiatic Society:—Mr. S. Umar Baksh, Pandit Bis'han Narayan Dar, R. R. Vasudev Madhao Samarth, and Mr. Piyaaré Lal. Dr. C. H. F. Underwood (Bombay) has obtained the M.D. (Brussels) diploma. Arrivals.—Mr. Lakshman Gangadhar Bhadbhadi, from Bombay; Mr. S. M. Israil, from Bengal. Departures.—Raja Ram Pal Singh, for Oude; Pundit Shyamaji Krishnavarma, B.A., and his wife, for Bombay; Mr. N. N. Mitra, barrister-at-law, for Calcutta.

THE Englishman has the following account of the Calcutta Freight Market, corrected to December 16:—

Steamer rates have again been somewhat better during last week and are firm. In sailing tonnage very little business has been done, one ship took the berth for London, another for Liverpool, and one ship closed for Mauritius. Our unfixed tonnage is steadily increasing and stands at 36,000 tons to-day.

MESSERS. J. THOMAS AND Co. report as follows on the Indigo Market:—

During the week four public sales have been held, at which 4,371 chests were offered, and of these 4,073 found buyers, making the total quantity out of the market 42,750 maunds against about 80,000 maunds at the same time last year. After the issue of our last report the sales continued to pass off heavily at a further decline of about five rupees on all qualities, but the sale yesterday showed some improvement, and this decline was fully recovered. The market closes firm at about the same rates as ruled a week ago. There has been more inquiry for marks by private sales.

THE Times of India has the following obituary till the departure of the mail, December 19:—

Major A. J. Shepherd, 5th Punjab Native Infantry.

LORD RIPON.—The Marquis and Marchioness of Ripon arrived in Cairo on the 4th inst. They were met at the railway station by the Master of the Ceremonies, on behalf of the Khedive, Sir Evelyn Baring, Nubar Pasha, Generals Dornier and Davis, and their officers, and the leading members of the British Colony were also present. A guard of honour was supplied by the Princess Charlotte of Wales's (Berkshire) Regiment and the Egyptian infantry, and the escort consisted of a detachment of the 19th Hussars.

Telegraphic Intelligence.

The following extra telegrams have been received from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Dec. 31 :—

"The Duke and Duchess of Connaught are expected at Calcutta on January 14, on a visit to the Viceroy.

"The late Maharana of Udaipur having left no issue, the Maharanees have selected his cousin, Futteh Sing, as his successor, but the choice requires the approval of the Government."

"The Chinese who captured Bhamo seem to have been a band of filibusters from the Yunnan border under Kinkhueyee, a man who was formerly employed in the Chinese army against the Panthays, and who was lately fighting with the Burmese against the Kachyens. It is stated that he attacked Bhamo because the Governor refused to pay him for his services.

"The captors appear to behave in an orderly manner, and to respect the lives of British subjects. They announce their intention of taking Burmah as far as Mandalay, leaving the English to take the rest, and there seems to be some fear at Mandalay that the Chinese authorities may support Kinkhueyee in his project.

"The Bhamo garrison made but a feeble resistance."

The following is the usual weekly telegram from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Jan. 4 :—

"The Mandalay Government seems not to be disposed to submit quietly to the loss of Bhamo. A considerable force is said to have been despatched for its recapture, under a general who is described as a sort of Burmese Wolsey; and unless the Chinese are largely reinforced from Yunnan it is probable that Bhamo will soon be in the hands of its old masters.

"Burmese affairs have occupied a large share of the public attention during the past three months, and the fall of Bhamo has had the effect of bringing them still more prominently forward. It is generally agreed that the British Government has now carried its forbearance to the utmost limit, and that some steps should be taken to speedily put an end to the chronic misrule which threatens not only to paralyse the trade of Rangoon, but also to prove a source of serious danger to the Indian Empire.

"There is greater difference of opinion as to the form which our intervention should take. Public opinion in British Burmah is strongly in favour of annexation. The late Sir Henry Durand said, in 1867, "Do what we will, the day will come when the half of the cherry left unbitten by Lord Dalhousie must be swallowed too;" and many people in India, as well as in British Burmah, think that the day has now come. But perhaps the balance of opinion in India leans rather to a belief that the deposition of Theebaw, and the reduction of Burmah to the position of a feudatory State, under the rule of some other member of the Royal House, will meet the requirements of the case.

"Whatever be the course ultimately adopted, this much at least seems certain—that the question of intervention in Burmese affairs, and of the permanent or temporary occupation of Mandalay by British troops, has now come within the range of practical politics. The task of restoring order in this distracted country would probably not be a very difficult one, nor is it likely that a British force advancing up the Irrawaddy would meet with any serious opposition. On the contrary, there is good reason that the people would everywhere receive our troops as their friends and saviours.

"The early death of the Maharana of Udaipur has attracted considerable attention. At one time his reign seemed full of promise; but of late his continued illness, and the effect of the remedies to which he had resort in order to deaden his pain, prevented him from taking an active part in the government of his large territories. The Mewar dynasty is, without any comparison, the most ancient in India, and the chief representative of the ancient Sesobad race is regarded with extraordinary respect by all true Rajputs.

"The premature death of the late Maharana, without issue, has furnished another example of the continuity of the curse said to have been invoked upon the chiefs of Mewar some five generations ago owing to some informality or irregularity on the occasion of the suttee of the widows of a then recently deceased Chief. The curse was to the effect that no future Maharana should ever leave a son to succeed him; and since then the ruling Chiefs have one and all died without issue.

"The choice of the widowed Ranees and of the proud and powerful body of Mewar Sirdars—a class of nobles which has more privileges than any other in India—has unanimously fallen upon Futteh Sing, cousin of the late Maharana. The new Maharana (whose election requires the confirmation of the Government of India), is described as a fine intelligent youth, aged about 24; but, as almost invariably happens on these occasions of arbitrary adoption, he is entirely without experience or knowledge of the art of governing.

"The late Maharana will be remembered among Rajputs chiefly by the fact that during his reign the ancient feud between Udaipur and Jodhpur was brought to an end. The reconciliation of the two Chiefs of these States first took place at the Imperial assemblage at Delhi, in 1877, and was to have been cemented, much against the wishes of the Mewar Sirdars, by the marriage of the Maharana to a sister of the Maharaja of Jodhpur. This, however, had to be postponed from time to time, owing to the state of the Maharana's health; and it never took place.

"A somewhat serious riot, the first disturbance of the new Viceroyalty, occurred on Monday last at Mallapuram, near Calicut, in Madras. A party of Moplahs entrenched themselves in the temple, and the Collector of Malabar was obliged to invoke the aid of the military. A company of the Oxfordshire Light Infantry proceeded to the spot. At first it was thought that this force was not sufficient, and the collector telegraphed for a mountain battery. Before its arrival, however, the gates of the temple were blown open. The rioters resisted stoutly, and did not surrender until nine had been killed and one wounded. The soldiers lost one private killed, while Lieutenant Day and one private were wounded.

"The Moplahs are Hindoo converts to Mahomedanism, and are said to have been settled in Malabar since the ninth century. They have long been notorious for fanaticism and lawlessness, and have frequently given trouble to the British authorities. Serious outbreaks on their part occurred in 1850, when sixty-four fanatics were killed; in 1855, when they murdered Mr. Conolly, Collector of Calicut; and again in 1873, when nine Moplahs charged a detachment of the 43rd Regiment, and were all shot down. Their disorderly conduct led to the passing, in 1853, of the Moplah Outrage Act, by which all Moplahs of the locality wherein an outbreak occurs are made liable to a fine.

"Full details have now been received of the recent destructive storms in Southern India. The damage done in Pondicherry is said to be enough to absorb the entire revenue of French India for a whole year. The Appellate Court-house was destroyed, the bridge over the Chunambur entirely disappeared, and several houses were blown down or reduced to ruins. The water rose to the altar in the church of the village of Villenoor, and 300 persons were obliged to take refuge in the steeple of the village pagoda. Fifty-three lives were lost by the bursting forth of the Red Hill Lakes in Malras, while 222 houses were swept away, 730 more were injured, and 962 head of cattle were lost. The damage occasioned is estimated at 2,29,032 rupees.

"The members of the Madras native community have lately been showing an example to their countrymen, by holding conferences in order to discuss various topics of social and political interest. One of these conferences assembled to consider the question of the re-marriage of widows, and after a session of four days decided to petition the Government for the appointment of a commission charged to inquire into the Hindoo law on the subject. Another conference held under the auspices of the Maharana Sabha, or People's Association, took a wider range, and discussed, first, the constitution of the Legislative Councils; secondly, the question of judicial reform, and especially the separation of judicial from executive functions; thirdly, whether and how far the intentions of the Government of India Act of 1858 and of the Queen's Proclamation have been carried out; and, fourthly, the condition of the agricultural classes. It seems to have come to a conclusion only on the second of these questions, on which it recorded an opinion that the separation of judicial from executive functions was desirable.

"The Tarkeswar Railway, a short line extending from the Scorafully station of the East Indian Railway, near Serampore, to Tarkeswar, will be formerly opened by the Viceroy and the Lieutenant-Governor to-morrow. The line is remarkable as being the first railway constructed by a local company, with capital raised entirely in India. Its terminus is a Hindoo shrine of great sanctity, and it will depend chiefly on the pilgrim traffic; but at some future day it may become a link in a direct Calcutta-Bombay railway.

"An up-country newspaper has done good service by calling attention to the state of the military roads along the North-Western frontier. It appears that from Peshawar to Derajat, a distance of from 400 to 500 miles, including several important passes, there is not a single road which can be said to be bridged, far less metalled throughout. The rivers Indus and Chenab, both unbridged, lie between Mooltan and Dera Ghazi Khan. Bunnu is separated from the railway by the Indus, Kurrum, and several minor streams which are often impassable. Hazara is cut off from Rawul Pindie by two unbridged rivers; and so on through a long list. The result is, that the transport of troops and stores to most of the frontier stations is effected with difficulty at all times, and sometimes in the flood season it is rendered absolutely impossible. So long as this important matter is neglected, the Indian frontier cannot be said to be adequately protected.

"An unusual number of distinguished visitors have lately arrived in India. Two Swedish Princes are now in Calcutta, as guests of the Viceroy. The Duke and Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin are in Bombay, whence they will go to Meerut to visit the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. Don Carlos is staying with the Governor of Bombay. Lord Randolph Churchill arrived by the last mail packet. He has gone to Poona, but will return to Bombay this week. He has been invited by the Sylhet tea-planters to visit their district, with a view of making himself acquainted with their wants in order to represent their interests in England.

"The news of the promotion of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal to the knighthood of the Star of India has been received with the liveliest satisfaction by all classes. It is universally admitted that the honour is well deserved, and surprise is expressed that it has been delayed so long."

CALCUTTA, JAN. 6.—"The Pioneer states that about the end of November last Colonel Alikhanoff attempted to seize Penjdeh, and that the place was only saved by the determined attitude of the Afghan Governor, Aminullah Khan, who at once sent for reinforcements, and declared his intention to resist the attempt by force, whereupon Colonel Alikhanoff withdrew."

"It is understood that the Viceroy has resolved to make some important modifications in the Bengal Tenancy Bill. Their nature has not yet transpired, but they will probably be found to include provisions declaring that occupancy rights shall not be transferable, and giving a wider latitude for the enhancement of rents by private contract. The twenty years' presumption rule will probably be retained, and the entire measure is likely to be extended to Government estates."

"A Bombay newspaper states that Professor Forrest, while examining the records in the local Secretariat, has discovered several original autograph despatches of Sir Arthur Wellesley, afterwards Duke of Wellington. They are said to be in a beautifully clear handwriting, without corrections or interlineations, and to describe, with simplicity and brevity, events and victories of the highest importance. The Governor intends to publish facsimiles of them in the coming volume of selections from the Government records."

Selected Articles.

MR. C. P. BROWN.

(From the Athenæum)

Mr. C. P. Brown, whose death at the advanced age of eighty-six has been recently announced in the papers, was one of the most distinguished Oriental scholars in Southern India. He was the son of the Rev. David Brown of Calcutta, and entered the Madras Civil Service in 1817. Much of his early service was spent in Telugu districts, especially at Masulipatam, where he laid the foundation of that profound acquaintance with Telugu literature for which he became so famous. He made a large collection of Telugu and Sanskrit manuscripts, and employed a staff of pundits in preparing editions of many works for the press, several of which were eventually printed, accompanied in some cases by Telugu prose commentaries.

In 1827 he published, at the request of the College Board, his "Prosody of the Telugu and Sanskrit Languages," no copies of which have been procurable for many years. This was followed in 1829 by an incomplete edition of the verses of Vemana, with an English translation and notes. Vemana's sayings have attracted considerable attention from the deep religious tone and pure morality which pervade many of them; but the portions judiciously suppressed by Mr. Brown contain verses as remarkable for their extreme licentiousness. Vemana's writings as a whole have, I believe, never been printed, and are imperfectly known to European scholars. A much fuller copy of them, with a complete translation, mainly in English, but partly in Latin, exists at Madras among the manuscripts presented by Mr. Brown to the Madras Literary Society and now forming part of the Government Library of Oriental Manuscripts.

Mr. Brown proceeded on furlough to Europe in 1836 and 1837, and undertook at Professor Wilson's request to collect some information regarding the doctrines and customs of the Saivites on his return to India. It was at this period that he discovered a collection of manuscripts chiefly in the Telugu, Tamil, and Canarese characters which had been lying at the India House for many years unnoticed and uncared for. These manuscripts had originally formed a part of Dr. Layden's library, and had been purchased by the East India Company on his death. They were sent out to Madras at the suggestion of Mr. Brown, and in 1845 he presented his own collection of manuscripts to the Madras Literary Society. It consisted of 1,273 Sanskrit works in the Telugu character; 1,176 Telugu works; a few Sanskrit works in the Devanāgarī, Malayālam, and Bengali characters; and a small number of Canarese, Malayālam and Burmese works.

Brown's "Analysis of Sanskrit Prosody" was published in 1837. In 1839 and 1840 his essays on the language and literature of the Telugus, and on the creed, customs, and literature of the Jangams, appeared in the Madras Journal of Literature and Science. These papers embodied the results of the studies and researches of many years. In 1840 the first edition of his "Telugu Grammar" was published. It differed very much in its plan and treatment of the subject from the learned work on the same subject by Mr. A. D. Campbell. Mr. Brown's "Grammar" was, perhaps, better suited for beginners, but it has generally been considered somewhat wanting in order and method. On certain points Mr. Brown emancipated himself from what he considered the pedantic yoke of the native grammarians, and laid down canons which are not accepted by many learned Hindus.

Mr. Brown's opus magnum was his "Dictionary, Telugu-English, English-Telugu, and Mixed Dialects and Foreign Words used in Telugu," which appeared in 1852, 1853, and 1854, at the expense of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. A. D. Campbell and Morris had previously published dictionaries of considerable merit, but far inferior to Brown's. The "Telugu-English Dictionary" contains a long array of quotations from the Telugu classics in support of the various meanings of each word; but, as these quotations are not translated, they are hardly appreciated by the majority of the students who use the volume. One peculiarity is the intermingling of words beginning with certain letters—such as K, Kh, G, Gh—which are liable under circumstances to be interchanged. This innovation, which must have cost the author an immense deal of trouble, for his work was half done when he resolved on adopting it, has, of course, some advantages, but its expediency is not generally admitted. The "English-Telugu Dictionary" is invaluable to English students from the idiomatic illustrations with which it abounds, and it is also written with special views to the needs of Hindus. Among other books written by Mr. Brown for students may be mentioned his "Telugu Reader," "Telugu and English Dialogues," "English Irregular Verbs explained by Idiomatic Sentences in English and Telugu," the "Vakyāvali, or Exercises in Idioms English and Telugu," the "Wars of the Rajahs," and "Disputations on Village Business" in English and Telugu. Some of these were translated into Tamil, Canarese, and Hindustani. The most important of his other works were the "Zillah Dictionary," "Cyclic Tables of Hindu and Mussulman Chronology," an "Ephemeris showing the Corresponding Dates according to the English, Telugu, Malayālam, and Mahomedan Calendars from A.D. 1751 until 1850," and memoirs of Hyder Ali and Tippoo Sultan, translated from Mahratta, and the "Tātachāri Tales."

Mr. Brown was employed for upwards of twelve years in revenue, magisterial, and judicial work in the Telugu districts. In 1838 he was appointed Persian translator to Government, and in 1846 he became Postmaster-General and Telugu translator to Government. He resigned the service in 1855, and afterwards accepted a professorship of Telugu in London.

Few literary men have derived less pecuniary advantage from their labours. He told me a few months before his death that what he had received represented about a fifteenth part of what he had spent. He was then completing, or had completed, a revised edition of an autobiography, printed for private circulation on his retirement from the Service. R. M. MACDONALD.

ENCOURAGING THE STUDY OF NATIVE LANGUAGES.

It is sometimes said that an officer has only thoroughly to master a southern language to ensure his being sent north, and that the proficient in Canarese is sure to be sent to a Tamil district. Now, without going quite as far as this, and allowing also for the cases that must sometimes happen, when it is impossible, in justice to himself or others, to avoid sending an officer to a district the language of which he does not know, we think that more care might be exercised when making transfers, and that the question of the acquaintance of an officer with the language of the district to which it is proposed to move him is one that might receive more consideration than it apparently does at present. As regards examinations. Covenanted Civilians have alone to pass two standards in any language; in all other Departments there is only one compulsory lingual test, in one language, and that is a very elementary one; so that we not infrequently hear of "passed" officers who know very little more than the man did, who, when he wanted his horse taken into the shade of a tree, was obliged to go there himself, and say "idhar ao," that being the whole extent of his available vocabulary. Now we would not burden the young officer with more examinations during the first year or two of his service, when he has to learn many things, and is bothered sufficiently; but we would insist on his acquiring a good colloquial knowledge of the language of his district by the end of his third year. Means should be taken to prevent what now sometimes happens, when an indolent officer who has had the good luck to "scrape" through his one simple examination, shuts up his books, dismisses his Munshi, and never thereafter tries to speak or understand a word of any language but his own, thus remaining for the rest of his service dependent on some English-speaking clerk or peon, for the transaction of all his business with the natives of the country which he is taking a part in ruling. Poor country! There would be no great hardship in enforcing a higher, and chiefly colloquial test after about three years' service. Where local Committees do the duty the candidate who passes must at that time possess some little knowledge of the language, too little to be of much service to him if he gives up all further effort from that date, but yet enough to ensure a good colloquial knowledge afterwards, if only he tries to utilise what he has gained, and to increase his knowledge by doing some of his daily office work in the vernacular, listening to his reports instead of having them translated for him, and trying to give his orders direct to men who do not understand English. He will blunder, and bungle, and stammer, no doubt, at first, and cause a little confusion by using a word or phrase in the wrong place; but he has only to say to himself "I will" and the difficulties are half overcome. He has only to make up his mind that he will not be beaten in a struggle where so many have been victorious before him, and that he will make himself efficient and fit to do his duty, and he will soon find that the trouble, which loomed so large in the vague distance is, in reality, of very ordinary dimensions. We think, then, that the Government should at once take the necessary steps to ensure every officer of theirs (not excluding the "Doctors," whose knowledge is sometimes limited by the phrase "Show your tongue") attaining a thorough colloquial knowledge of one native language by the end of the third year of service; and that if it can possibly be avoided an officer should never be sent to a District of which he does not know the local language. As regards the somewhat complicated rules that have been laid down for standards, and rewards for the higher examinations, we cannot see why there should be a different set of rules for Civilians, Military, Educational, Forest, etc. The rules might with advantage be assimilated, and one set made to apply to all Departments alike. It would suffice to have a first elementary examination, with a Munshi allowance allotted; a second higher standard compulsory also, and to test colloquial knowledge chiefly, with a small reward attached; and a third, or honour standard, which should be in every branch be a very searching examination, and the successful candidate should receive a handsome reward. It would be easy to modify some of the details of each test, according to the branch of the service to which the candidate belonged.—Madras Times.

THE ARRIVAL OF LORD DUFFERIN.

Lord Dufferin arrives in the capital of India to-day, and it may be safely predicted that he will receive a public welcome of the most enthusiastic character. The selection of his Lordship for the high office of Viceroy has been a matter of cordial congratulation throughout India, and in the short period which has elapsed since his nomination was made known, he has done much to strengthen the bonds of his popularity by his eloquent allusions to the land over which he has been called to rule. It is impossible to set aside Lord Dufferin's recent speeches as so much mere conventional oratory; for although, no doubt, they are an inevitable part of the ceremonial of induction, it can be said with perfect truth that they display a clear perception of the duties of a Viceroy, and of the manifold and peculiar difficulties of the present situation, while they are inspired with the highest sense of the dignity and responsibility of the Viceregal office. Perhaps no Viceroy ever landed in India under more favourable auspices, and yet nothing is more striking in Lord Dufferin's public utterances than the personal modesty of the speaker, the absence of any word or sentiment betraying self-glorification, the freedom from all prejudice and theoretical opinion, the attitude of watchful diffidence with which questions of policy are approached. Lord Dufferin has a becoming regard for the high traditions which still surround the office of Viceroy and Governor-General, and he looks back with almost exaggerated feelings of respect and admiration upon his predecessors. "These illustrious persons," to quote his own ardent words, "have greatly differed from each other in their antecedents, their dispositions, their attainments, and their intellectual idiosyncracies, but there is one quality which all of them have possessed in common—a deep-rooted and unswerving determination to sacrifice ease, health, and leisure—nay, as some of them have done, even life itself at the welcome and spirit-stirring call of duty. It is this characteristic which has impressed the Government of India from its foundation to the present day with loftiness of aim and intention, and an energy in execution which I believe to be the unparalleled in the history of the world." In speaking thus of former Viceroys Lord Dufferin unconsciously gives us an insight into his own exalted sense of duty, and after these words we hardly require his assurance that whatever criticism may in the future be passed upon his administration, "it shall be in the power of no man to allege that either from fear or favour, or any personal consideration," he has turned aside from whatever course was conducive to the happiness of the people of India or the dignity and honour of the Empire. But his first speech at Bombay, in which this declaration was made, was not entirely devoted to matters of imperial consideration. Lord Dufferin was not merely occupied with thoughts of the greatness of the Viceregal office; he was keenly alive to the more immediate conditions of time and place. He spoke of the city of Bombay as "veing in its prosperity and wealth with any capital that was ever called into existence by Caliph or Mogul," and he added that "should opportunities present themselves to my Government of still further promoting your welfare, stimulating your trade, increasing the security or enlarging the scope of your municipal activity you may rest assured that it will be my most anxious desire to take advantage of them." In Canada Lord Dufferin took a deep concern in all that affected the material and industrial prosperity of the country, and we may take it as a good augury that at the outset of his Indian career he should have manifested a desire to promote the interests of commerce and the proper management of municipal affairs. Lord Dufferin said that on landing in India he felt as if he were "coming to a home already rendered bright and attractive by hosts of fellow-workers, well-wishers, and friends;" and we are certain that we only echo the sentiment which will rise to the mind of all those who hear these words when we express a sincere hope that our new Viceroy will find India to be a home indeed, and that the friendship which is now extended to him on all sides will strengthen and grow warmer with the lapse of time.

While Lord Dufferin is thus preparing to make India his home, our present Viceroy is on the eve of leaving the country, and it must be admitted that he carries with him at least the highest regard of the native community, and, as far as the European classes are concerned, the respect which is due to conscientious zeal and philanthropic purpose. It would serve no good end to disguise the fact that the present régime has given at best only partial satisfaction; but apart from all consideration of the tendencies of Lord Ripon's policy, the time has come when differences of opinion may be dropped, and when we may bid farewell to the departing Viceroy without any thought of the past. In replying yesterday to the deputation representing the Native Press, Lord Ripon delivered probably the last speech which he will make in Calcutta, and it is gratifying to us to be able to say that we heartily agree with all that the speaker said on that occasion. The relations of the Government and the Press in a country like India are very different from those which exist in England, and there can be little doubt that much of the extravagance of the Native Press is due to the fact that native writers do not recognise this difference. They take the English party papers as their model, and, as Lord Ripon remarked "it is the special function of the journals of the Opposition at home to criticise the conduct of the Government, and to pick every hole that they possibly could in their proceedings—a function which they discharge with great zeal if not always with great justice." This function is certainly not neglected in India, and it is to be hoped that Lord Ripon's advice to the representatives of the Native Press will lead them in future to preserve greater moderation of tone. Nothing, indeed, could have been better or truer than his Excellency's definition of the genuine scope of journalism. Lord Ripon has a high opinion of the position and duties of the Press, but, as he observed, the higher that position is, and the more important the duties, the greater the responsibility. "The first aim of Press criticism should not be to be smart or brilliant or incisive, but to be just. I agree with you when you say in your address that it is your function to criticise, and I hold that it is your duty honestly and fearlessly to criticise the march of public affairs, and the conduct of public men. But you seem to me—if you will pardon me for saying so—to lower your true position when you seem to imply that the criticism which you are to exercise is to be mainly a criticism of censure. You are entitled and you are bound to censure what is blameworthy, but you are, in my judgment, no less bound to accord your praise where praise is due." This is sound and excellent teaching, and by way of practical comment upon it, we must accord to Lord Ripon the praise which is due to the good sense and discernment by which this valedictory speech is characterised, as well as to the excellent intentions and benevolent motives by which he has been guided throughout his administration.—Englishman.

THE SAME.

The warmth and heartiness with which Lord Dufferin was received in Calcutta seem to have been altogether unexampled. The whole city was en fête. The great mercantile houses and the leading tradesmen decorated their offices and shops, and all the ships in the harbour were dressed to their utmost. The approach to Calcutta over a river crowded with ships is peculiarly adapted to a grand display, and the loyal citizens made the most of the occasion. Lord Ripon had been welcomed by the natives a short time before, and it is clear from our account that the welcome accorded to his successor was emphatically that of the non-official Europeans. Never before, says our correspondent significantly, has there been such a strong muster of Volunteers. The steps of Government House were densely crowded, and the English cheering such as has not been heard in Calcutta for long. It is impossible to avoid, however desirable it may be, contrasting the scene as it is described to us now with another historical reception, not many months ago. Lord Ripon, however, seems to have performed the somewhat difficult part he had to play in the triumph of his successor with the same tact, courtesy, and good humour that has distinguished all his recent appearances in public. The extraordinary circumstance of the case lent a new interest to the formal ceremony of installation. The ladies of the two households graced the scene with their presence, and when the Members of Council had assembled round their table, Lord Dufferin stood before the vacant Viceregal chair and remained standing until Mr. Mackenzie had read out the full text of the Queen's Commission. By this it will be seen that the Viceroy is now appointed in full charge of the East Indies, its territories and revenues, its civil and military government, its Governors and its Councils, "subject, nevertheless, to such instruction as may be from time to time received from the hand of one of the Queen's principal Secretaries of State." The Commission was dated as far back as the 1st October last, and its public delivery in Council constitutes the formal act of installation, for the oath of office that the former Governors-General used to take has latterly been abolished. Lord Dufferin, now the formal Governor-General of India, then seated himself in the Viceregal chair, and amid the booming of guns from the ramparts of the Fort proceeded to the transaction of business in a form to which he has already been accustomed in Bombay—the reception of a deputation and address. There is at least one significant sentence in Lord Dufferin's reply to the address. "The Marquis of Ripon and his predecessors have," he said, "prepared the soil, delved and planted; it will be my more humble duty to watch, water, prune and train." Lord Dufferin is so uniformly guarded in his utterances that the employment of the cautious words "watch" and "prune" can scarcely be accidental. In the evening a hundred gentlemen were entertained at dinner at Government House, and thus a day that will long be historical as marking an era in Indian history was auspiciously closed. Lord Ripon must have much to say to Lord Dufferin, especially concerning his views upon the education of the masses and the furtherance of local self-government. But it had been arranged that they should spend only one day together and as that day was fortunately Sunday, they were not interrupted by public duties.—Times of India.

NOTICES, MEETINGS, DIVIDENDS, &c.

THE BORELLI TEA COMPANY (LIMITED) have declared an interim dividend of 2½ per cent. on the current season's working, payable on the 1st prox.

JOKAI (ASSAM) TEA COMPANY.—An interim dividend of 2½ per cent. is declared.

ORIENTAL BANK.—Subjoined is a complaint to the Times as to the way in which liquidation of the affairs of the Oriental Bank is being carried on, from a creditor of the estate:—"77 and 78, St. Martin's-lane, January 3.—Sir,—It is now eight months since the Oriental Bank stopped, and not a farthing has been paid to those who, like myself, held bills sent from abroad, the money having been paid for them to the bank at the other end.—Your faithfully, JAMES PLATT."

MERSINA ADANA CONSTRUCTION COMPANY.—This company has been formed for the purpose of constructing and working a line of railway in Asia Minor, between the port of Mersina, in the Mediterranean Sea, to the important inland towns of Tarsus (population, 10,000) and Adana (population, 70,000). The requisite Imperial Firman was granted by the Sultan in January 1883, and the works have already been commenced. It has been incorporated as a limited company, with the following capital and borrowing powers, viz.:—4,750 "A" shares of £20 each, without voting powers, to be issued (except as to those taken by the subscribers to the memorandum of association) as fully paid; 1,650 "B" shares of £5 each, to be issued as fully paid, with one vote for each share; and 1,650 six per cent. first mortgage bonds of £100 each. The "B" shares and the six per cent. first mortgage bonds closed yesterday (Tuesday).

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.—The thirty-seventh half-yearly meeting of the above company was held on the 1st inst. at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr. R. W. Crawford presided, and, in moving the adoption of the report, observed that in the half-year which ended on the 31st ult. there had been a remarkable falling-off in their traffic. The cause of the falling-off in their receipts was simply the want of a market in this country for the main article carried by them—wheat. It was of no use sending wheat to be sold here for 29s. per quarter which cost the shipper 31s. The company charged for transporting the wheat from Cawnpore to Howrah about 6s. a quarter, and, therefore, practically speaking, if they charged nothing for its conveyance, the shipper could not send it to this country and sell it at a profit. It was a curious fact that whereas during the half-year ended June 30 1st they had lost, as compared with the corresponding period of 1883, no less than £195,000 by the diminished quantity of wheat carried, the loss upon the whole of the traffic (including wheat) had been only £175,000. This was explained by the increase which had taken place in what he might call their local and domestic business, especially coal. He ventured to predict that the time would come when coal would be the largest source of the company's profit. He wished to make a few other remarks with regard to the falling-off in the wheat trade. He was one of those who differed from the majority of the witnesses—in fact, he believed he stood alone—who appeared before the Parliamentary Committee in the spring of last year to protest against the haste with which the public in this country and in India were disposed to carry the construction of railways. He was asked his opinion as to the demand for railways in India, and in reply he said he thought the demand on the part of the commercial public of this country, and especially of India—where they advocated an annual expenditure of £20,000,000 for ten years—had no substantial foundation, and that it proceeded from a mistaken view of the circumstances which had led to the large exports of grain and other commodities in the last year or two. Instead of such a state of things being normal, he had expressed his opinion that it was abnormal; and he considered that the change which occurred a few months afterwards had justified his view. He, for one, was not in the least astonished at the great depression which had taken place in the export trade of India. While they had been doing what they could, both in this country and in India, to attract trade, they had not forgotten the importance of watching their expenditure closely. During the half-year under consideration the expenditure had increased to 38·59 per cent. of their receipts. They had had to make up for the very heavy traffic of the previous year, and to effect repairs of stock and improvements and additions to their stations; and beyond this they had had to pay in the half-year out of the revenue the cost of replacing no fewer than twenty-five locomotives which had been worn out in their service. He next referred to the projected line between the Great Indian Peninsula Company's Railway and the East Indian Company's basis—Cawnpore—and said it would compete with their system. They would, however, still have an immense advantage over the new line in connection with the port of shipment, as Calcutta was only 684 miles from Cawnpore, while Bombay was 850 miles from that place. As to the remarks of Mr. Pender at the meeting of the Oude and Rohilkund Company when people made a railway or system of railways with no outlet of their own, they must take things as they found them, and not ask other persons—this company, for instance—to help them by denuding themselves. Alluding to the Hooghly Bridge, he stated that all the principal difficulties in connection with its construction had now been overcome. The work was of no ordinary kind, and he congratulated them on the progress which had been made. With respect to the construction of a branch of about forty miles to connect some large coal deposits in the Shagpore district with the company's Katni station, on the Jubbulpore line, the Government, in the first place, suggested that the company should make it. To this the directors had consented; but the Government had desired to impose conditions on them to which they could not accede; and finally it had been arranged that the branch should be constructed by the Government. As to the results of the working of the half-year which ended on the 31st ult., the gross receipts were estimated at £1,819,766, the expenses at £632,916, and the net revenue at £1,186,850. This would have to be subjected to the usual treatment, and he was almost afraid to say what dividend beyond the guaranteed interest it would give them. They would, however, get something—say, 8s. per cent. Sir R. Macdonald Stephenson having seconded the motion, a brief discussion followed, and in answer to questions the Chairman said they advertised for their engines, and took the best they could obtain at the lowest price. For some time past the skill of the Scotch had predominated over English manufacturers. The Government found all the capital necessary for the construction of any new works. The motion was adopted, and a resolution was afterwards passed declaring a dividend for the half-year, in addition to the guaranteed interest, at the rate of £1 2s. 8d. per cent.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL KENNEDY, Commanding the Punjab Frontier Force, will inspect the forts at Kohat, Bannu, and Dera Ismail Khan in January and February next.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

It is announced that Mr. Primrose rejoins his appointment in the Treasury on his arrival in England.

THE whole of the Jaintpore indigo out-turn has been sold at Rs. 237-8, with the usual rejections.

THE Earl and Countess of Dufferin arrived in Calcutta on the 13th ult., and met with a very enthusiastic reception from all classes of the community.

ON Dec. 12th his lordship was present at a brilliant entertainment given in his honour at Bellgatchia Villa, the princely resident of Kumar Indur Chunder Singh of Paikpara.

A CALCUTTA contemporary hears from Jummoo that his Highness the Maharajah of Cashmere is greatly improved in health. Hopes are entertained of his perfect recovery.

DR. ANDERSON will, according to present arrangements, accompany the Viceroy home, Captains Rochford and St Quintin being the aides-de-camp in attendance on the voyage.

ACCORDING to a native news-writer a jirga of the Kohat Pass tribes have been waiting in the Pass to pay their respects to Mr. Tucker, C.S., and to accompany him to Peshawur, to which place he has been transferred as Deputy Commissioner.

THE Marquis of Ripon left Calcutta on the 15th by special train for Bombay, the closing days of his stay in the Eastern capital being marked by the demonstrations expressive of the esteem in which he is held by the natives.

MR. A. J. HUGHES, Executive Engineer, South-Western Circle, Calcutta, has been ordered to proceed on special duty to Jummoo to inspect and report on the Akroor Canal from the Chenab River in the Maharajah of Cashmere's territory.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal will probably visit Mozufferpore before going up to the opening of the Bengal North-Western Railway next month. The race meeting, the annual inspection of the Behar Light Horse, and the presence of one if not two Lieutenant-Governors, will keep Mozufferpore full and busy for the first week of the year.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces has directed that from the 1st of April, 1885, district boards in the North-West Provinces shall be relieved of all concern with lunatic asylums, and that both the administrative control and the financial responsibility of these institutions shall be provincial.

THE Pioneer says:—"A question, the coming forward of which we foreshadowed some months ago—whether a legal remembrancer to Government, if not a barrister, should be permitted to plead in the provincial High Court—is now in full swing. It naturally creates some commotion among the Bar proper; and they are not likely, without a strong protest, to acquiesce in an arrangement which cuts at the root of one of their traditional privileges.

IMMEDIATELY on arrival at Government House, Lord Dufferin formally took charge of his office, and subsequently received an address from the Calcutta Municipality, in replying to which he said that the Marquis of Ripon and his predecessors having prepared the soil, delved and planted, it would be his more humble duty to watch, water, prune and train.

AMONGST the numerous addresses presented to Lord Ripon at Calcutta was one in Sanskrit from the Bengal Academy of Music. It opened as follows:—"May that adored Divinity, the left side of whose body glitters with golden radiance and the right with the lustre of silver, whose left eye laughs like the cerulean lotus in full bloom, and the right half closed shows meditative depth and earnestness"—and so on.

THE following guests are expected in Tirhoot during next month, Lord Randolph, Don Carlos, and Lord Radstock. Lord Randolph will address the planting community on matters political. Don Carlos will review the Behar Light Horse, and probably induce that gallant regiment to aid in reinstating him on the Spanish throne; while Lord Radstock will go round the factories on a preaching tour.—Planters' Gazette.

THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.—A very large and influential meeting was held on December 14th, at the premises of Nawab Syed Waliyet Ali Khan, C.I.E., in Bankepur, when speeches were delivered by Mulvi Khoda Buksh Khan Bahadoor, Munshi Hussan Ali, and Baboo Girjaput Sahai condemning the Bengal Tenancy Bill, and resolutions were passed expressing entire sympathy with the meeting about to be held in Calcutta, on the 19th. Many Zemindars volunteered to attend the meeting at Calcutta. Great enthusiasm prevailed.

REPLYING to an address presented to him on this occasion Lord Ripon made a conciliatory speech, expressing a hope that the "controversies which, amidst unusual misconception, and not a little misrepresentation," had sprung up with regard to some measures of his administration would be laid at rest, and that when the dust which these controversies had stirred up should have subsided, and the eyes of men were able to see the facts of the case more clearly than they could do now, even his opponents might not be unwilling to judge his administration more justly than they had sometimes done.

HIS HONOUR the Lieutenant-Governor will leave Calcutta on January 11th by the night train, and meet his fellow Satrap Sir Alfred Lyall on the 12th at Bankipore. Sonapore will be reached the same day, and the first stone of the Gunduck bridge laid, after which the party will adjourn to Mozufferpore. Next day, the 13th, both Lieutenant-Governors will return to Sonapore, and journey by the Bengal and North-West Railway to the frontiers of Bengal and the North-West, and the ceremony of driving silver spikes and other valuable paraphernalia will be gone through. Chupra will then be visited, where the Maharajah of Hutwa will play the host. On the 14th, Mozufferpore will be the rendezvous, and the capital of Tirhoot will be en fete with the Behar Light Horse camp and races. On the 15th will be performed the saddest ceremony of all—the parting—which, however, it is to be hoped will only be an au revoir.

PUNJAB MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.—No doubt the rules for the election for the municipalities in the Punjab will be carefully revised before the next elections come on; not only to bring them into harmony with the new Punjab Municipality Act, but also with the dictates of common-sense. As regards Lahore, there is one clause in the rules, as they stand, which evidently needs modification. Under Rule V. no one can vote or stand for election unless he has, “for the twelve months next preceding the election, ordinarily resided or carried on business within the limits of the Municipality;” but there is a proviso which states that “in estimating the period of ordinary residence within municipal limits, any period of temporary absence spent in the hills shall be included.” It is the European section of the community, of course, which is mainly affected by this arrangement. The result of the rule is that—while persons who reside in Lahore for only five months or even less in the year, are eligible for election a man who may have lived in Lahore for the last ten years all the year round, till he went home the other day on three months’ leave, is ineligible. Most likely the rule was copied from the Simla rule, where, of course—reading “plains” for “hills”—a provision of the kind is really required.—C. M. Gazette.

MADRAS.

THE Maharajah of Mysore has deferred his visit to Calcutta for the present.

SIR FREDERICK AND LADY ROBERTS left Secunderabad on the 13th ult. for Madras, the Madras headquarters staff returning by the same train.

THE services of Surgeon R. E. Stewart Davis, M.B., have been placed at the disposal of the President of the Madras Municipality for employment as Health Officer of Madras.

OWING to the threatened scarcity in some of the taluks of the Bellary district, the Madras Government has ordered that three bodies of Sappers and Miners be sent there at once to sink wells. Rs. 5,000 has been placed at the disposal of the Revenue Department for relief, and instructions have been issued to afford relief labour as much as possible in railway works.

PROPOSED ANNUAL NATIVE CONFERENCE.—In order to “secure an interchange of thought between Madras and the Mofussil, and that public opinion may be developed, strengthened, and brought to a focus,” there will be in the future an Annual Native Conference held in Madras in December. The programme for the first Conference, which is to occupy four days, is published; it is a long one, and is prepared with much ability.

AN interesting ceremony was performed on the 12th ult. at Madras by the Bishop of Madras, assisted by several of the clergy in the presence of the Governor, Mrs. Grant-Duff, and others. The ceremony consisted of the licensing and dedicating of the Chapel of the Blessed Virgin Mary, recently completed by the authorities of the Military Female Orphan Asylum. The chapel is a pretty structure, designed by Mr. Chisholm, and erected at a cost of Rs. 16,500. It was nicely decorated for the occasion, and the ceremony was impressively conducted.

AN INDIAN CENTENARIAN.—S. Pudmanabha Sing Takoor, late Cavalry supplier, &c., Centenarian of India, attained his 101st year on Monday the 29th of September, 1884, and has entered his 102nd year. His general appearance continues to display the same vigour as such of the aged and respectable native gentlemen as are now living in Madras. He continues to walk long distances, takes only one meal a day. He speaks several languages freely and with ease. In his prime of life he was the master of a large fortune, which he spent in feeding to poor of all classes and castes. He is known to several leading European gentlemen, whom he visits occasionally.—Hindu.

ARRIVAL OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—His Excellency General Sir F. S. Roberts, V.C., G.C.B., C.I.E., Commander-in-Chief, Madras, accompanied by Colonel Tiliard, Military Secretary, Captain Chamberlain, Aide-de-camp, and Brigadier-General Stewart, Quartermaster-General, arrived at the Central Station from Secunderabad on Monday morning by the North west mail train. The train arrived an hour and five minutes late. Fifty rank and file with band and colours of the

South Wales Borderers formed the guard of honour. There were several officers present on the platform to meet his Excellency, among whom were Brigadier-General Johnson, Colonel Galloway, Colonel Atkinson, Venerable Archdeacon Brown, Colonel Clerk, Colonel Hawks, Major Awdsey, Colonel McGrath, Colonel Waters, Captain Williams, Major Skinner, Captain Caldwell, and the two native Aides-de-Camps to his Excellency the Governor and Commander-in-Chief. On arrival of the train, a salute of fifteen guns was fired from the battery, Fort St. George.

MRS. GRANT-DUFF ON ROMAN CATHOLICISM.—Mrs. Grant-Duff delivered a short speech at the annual distribution of prizes at the Convent in Madras on Dec. 18th. She said:—“I profess a different creed from yours, but I have the deepest respect for that old historic faith which has preserved culture and intellect for mankind through ages of darkness and turmoil—to which we owe nearly all that is most beautiful in literature and art—and which now at every risk is disseminating the noblest truths of Christianity through India, China, and many other countries. I am speaking my husband’s feelings as well as my own when I say that his thanks, and the thanks of all who govern India, are due to those who assist the cause of good government by spreading the holiest truths and illustrating them by the most pure and blameless of lives.”

HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP OF GOA is expected to arrive in Bombay about the end of this month to visit the churches belonging to the Portuguese jurisdiction.

LORD RIPON arrived in Bombay on the 17th Dec. On the 18th he was presented with numerous addresses at the Town Hall, after which the degree of LL.D. of the Bombay University was conferred on him.

IN the course of his speech at the Town Hall on the 18th, Lord Ripon said that to-morrow’s Gazette of India while increasing the number of guaranteed appointments in connection with the Roorkee Engineering College, would once more throw open the appointments to statutory natives of India.

THE Government Gazette of the 18th ult. notifies the appointment of Mr. H. M. Birdwood to act as a Judge of the Bombay High Court during the absence of Mr. Justice West, who has been allowed furlough for six months from January 8th. Mr. G. M. Macpherson will succeed Mr. Birdwood as Judicial Commissioner and Judge of the Saddar (?) Court in Sind.

THE Bombay Town Council on the 17th ult. concluded their consideration of the budget estimates for the year 1885-6. The total of income estimated to be derived from all sources was put down at Rs. 43,81,750, as against Rs. 41,40,550 fixed in the last budget.

BURMA.

CHOLERA has broken out at Prome, and several cases have proved fatal.

THE Customs collections at Akyab during November amounted to eight annas! Well done the “Liverpool of the East!”

THE Akyab municipal election resulted in the return of two of the old members and a new one. The gentlemen are Messrs. Duncan, Mollaston, and Bridge.

THE Maulmain municipal election was as tame and uninteresting as it could well be. The Europeans could only manage to nominate one candidate for five seats, and there was no opposition to the return of the Burmese and Hindoo nominees.

A RANGOON telegram says that the steamer Cornelia, with a cargo of rice from Moulemein to the Straits, has gone ashore at the mouth of the Salween River. The coast is very irregular and rocky, and fears are entertained that she will become a total wreck.

THE Buddhist Archbishop of Upper Burma has arrived on a visit to British Burma. He was received at the frontier stations in semi-regal style by the Burmese populace. His reception at Henzada was arranged on a grand scale.

ANOTHER VERSION OF THE ANDAMAN TRAGEDY.—A painful case of running amuck is reported from the Andamans. A Punjabi policeman shot dead an European Inspector and wounded a Native Constable. He contrived by firing rapidly all round to keep the police at bay for a considerable time, but was finally killed by a lucky shot from one of his own comrades.

CEYLON.

PUBLIC attention has principally been centred on discussions in the Legislative Council bearing on new taxation projects.

UVA has, by this storm, been cut off from communication with the Eastern seaboard, and, if the rain extends south-westwards there will be serious risk of an interruption on the main or Haldummulla-Ratnapura-road.

Mr. BOSANQUET gave notice that he would ask what steps the Government propose to take to provide for Ceylon being properly represented at the Colonial Exhibition to be held in London in 1886, and to move for any correspondence on the subject which may have taken place with the Home Government.

CEYLON has been visited by Mr. Arthur Thompson, of the well-known Mincing lane firm, who came for the special purpose of visiting some of the tea estates on the island. Before departing for Europe he expressed his opinion that Ceylon estates and Ceylon planters have a hopeful future before them.

At the last meeting of Council on Dec. 10th, a petition against the proposed Stamp Ordinance was presented by the mercantile representative: the petition was from the inhabitants of Kandy, who at a largely-attended meeting protested against the proposed Ordinance. The petition was read and laid on the table. A third petition on the same subject from certain inhabitants of Matara was also presented. The hon. member presenting it did not insist on this memorial being read, but was content with laying it on the table.

THE present north-east monsoon has been distinguished by a succession of cyclonic storms in Ceylon. In the Northern Province, the Jaffna district suffered greatly from the tail-end of a cyclone. On the 9th ult. a similar whirlwind and burst of rain occurred in the neighbourhood of Nuwara Eliya, and thirty-six hours after at Colombo, where the thunderstorm threatened very serious consequences for a few minutes. The lightning struck the Colombo Club-house, causing some injury to the walls, and played freely on the telephone wires in the Fort. In the Eastern Province the downpour was so great that a serious flood threatened. The Devilana tank burst its banks, and the Badulla-Batticala-road, has been rendered impassable at several points. At Hewa Eliya, a district of Eastern Uva, during the storm a set of coolie huts gave way before the wind, burying a number of the inmates in the ruins, some of whom (ten) are reported to be killed.

Major Gasler, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General to the Zhob Expeditionary Force, arrived at Sibi on the 7th ultimo, and proceeds to Mooltan to rejoin his appointment.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

INDIAN TEA.—Messrs. G. White and Co. report as follows on the Market, from Dec. 18 to Jan. 1:—Since Dec. 18 business has been almost entirely suspended, as there have been no public sales until to-day, and less private inquiry in the interval than is usual, so that it would appear that buyers are waiting to see how the market will open before adding to their stocks. The sales to-day have comprised 4,322 packages, of which 3,788 packages were sold without reserve. Prices though somewhat irregular appear about on a par with those ruling before the holidays, but these quotations are not much guide, as it is too early to judge of the country demand, which nowadays, to a great extent, influence the operations of London dealers. During the past six months there have been 374,000 packages of this season's crop offered at public auction, against 350,000 during the same period last year, or about 33 million pounds against 31 millions in 1883, so that taking the crop including Ceylon growths at 66 millions there has been about half of it sold, though latest telegrams report that the total available from India to Great Britain will not exceed 62 millions. Ceylon.—There have been no sales, and nothing of interest to report.

TALK about the higher education of the native; here's one of the results of our high system of education which costs us an increasing sum every year. A youth, passing his examination for some standard or other, contributes the following interesting essay on "The Horse":—"The horse is a noble animal, but when irritated he will not do so." To an Anglo-Indian the picture of a fat pony, bestridden by a travelling native, with his toes well thrown out, the fat's neck bent double, his nose in close proximity to his master's, and his eyes as white as an egg—all these picturesque details could not be more graphically rendered than by the simple words, "he will not do so." However, the Ceylonese youth is not singular. The following is the idea about Ceylon held by an English youth:—"Ceylon, belonging to England, is governed distinct, and has a Government of its own. It consists of a House of Commons and a series of Republics"!!! The italics are mine—pity we have not one or the other, in lieu of our burlesque Council.—Ceylon Times.

Miscellaneous.

CHARACTERISTIC.—We notice that the Amrita Bazar Patrika, in noticing that Laluram Panray's case was to come on in Mozufferpore, indulges in a characteristic and ungenerous insinuation:—"A good many Europeans have gone to Mozufferpore, surely not with a view to overawe the Court." A Bengalee idea!

—Bengal Times.

THE C. and M. Gazette says:—"In some unaccountable manner, the amount of reserve small-arm ammunition in this country has been allowed to fall below the regulated standard. The various manufactories are working night and day to make up the deficiency, and no doubt will soon do so; but at the same time, such a state of things shows carelessness somewhere."

PRODIGIOUS!—In noticing Lord Ripon's reception in Calcutta the Indian Spectator says:—"Non-official Europeans are said to have been absent, which was a mistake, as these gentlemen may soon find out." Oh! Indian Spectator, what frightful threat is this? What awful calamity is to befall the mistaken? Is there no hope for the misguided? Are they to be cursed by bell and book?—Bengal Times.

HERE'S an incident of railway travelling. Tommy Atkins had got into a carriage with some wealthy natives, and, being annoyed by the "odour of garlic, drawn through a veil of assafœtida," which distinguishes them, gave the word to his well-entered bull-terrier that at once pinned one through the calf. At the next station the patent-leathered native yelled, "Mr. Stationmaster, please, Mr. Stationmaster, let us out—biting dogs are here; we suffer bitter inconvenience!"

The appointment of Jai Pershad Bahadur, Dewan of the Maharaja of Dumraon to the Bengal Legislative Council, is just matter of public congratulation. This gentleman has the most perfect mastery of English, and abilities of a very high order. The Liberal writes:—"It is a matter of rejoicing that Behar, which has hitherto been considered as a very Boetia, has been able to show in succession such a number of talented representatives as the Hon. Harbans Sahai, Rai Jaiprakash Lal Bahadur, and Moulvie Abdool Jubber. All have made their mark upon the province, and each of them deserve the highest honours which Government may confer upon them. We accord a cordial welcome to the Dewan of Dumraon." We should have been better pleased if the Dewan had been appointed at this juncture to the Supreme Legislative Council, but we trust his present nomination to the lower Council will be but a stepping-stone in due time to the higher.

THE NEW ENGLISH OFFICIAL IN EGYPT.—The Hon. Mr. Raymond West, Judge of the Bombay High Court, who has just been appointed on one year's leave, to fill the office of Procureur-General in Egypt, was one of the first Competition Wallahs to enter the Indian Civil Service. He passed the competitive examinations with credit and arrived in India in 1856, when for some years he filled various acting judicial appointments, gaining more experience than actual solid advancement in the service. For more than twenty years his official work partook of this character, and it was not until 1880, after he had officiated for some time as the acting judge of the Bombay Court, that he was summoned more to the front. In that year he was called to Simla to assist in revising and settling the Indian Code. He had before this turned his attention specially to Hindoo matters, and in conjunction with Dr. J. G. Bühler, some time Professor of Sanscrit at Bombay, had compiled about the same date as his being summoned to Simla, "A Digest of the Hindoo Law of Inheritance, Partition, and Adoption," which is recognised as a standard work on the subject. Those who know Mr. West best are most disposed to augur happy results from his appointment to the present Egyptian post, for his experience in Eastern jurisprudence is wide and varied. At the same time his nomination is only adding another name to those of the many remarkable Englishmen and experienced administrators who have been selected for work in Egypt, and whose efforts have been rendered unavailing by the want of a clear and consistent policy. It is to be hoped that Mr. West may prove more fortunate in the circumstances of his tenure of office than some of his predecessors have been.

THE SHRIEVALTY.—In these dreadfully degenerate days, of rank red-headed Republicanism it would be strange if many of our readers were unacquainted with the old riddle, "What is Majesty stripped of its externals?" and its answer, "A jest." Quite as essential as its externals are to Majesty is the sheriff's dress to his office. Indeed, it would be impossible to conceive of a sheriff without the dress. For the office is almost purely ornamental; and if the knee-breeches and stockings, the coat with tags and sword, and, above all, the cocked hat were abolished, how is it possible there could be a sheriff? This being the state of affairs, we confess to have read with considerable misgivings and bewilderment the demand, indeed, the prediction, of some of our contemporaries, that the next sheriff was to be a native. We doubted whether a native would invest his person in such habiliments; we wondered how they would set on him if he did; and we were appalled at the idea of his being appointed and not wearing the appropriate costume. The appointment of Captain Taylor has set our apprehensions at rest. He will "mak' a braw sherra." He will not find the "hose a world too wide for his shrunk shank," there is no fear of the court sword tripping him up, or of the coat and tags hanging clumsily or loosely about his shoulders. And as to the cocked hat, its use is already to him a second nature. He'll do; and do very well indeed.—Madras Mail.

GOLD MINING IN MYSORE.—During the five months from July to November Madras shipments to London of gold from the Mysore Gold-mining Company were valued at forty thousand rupees. The latest crushing included seventy tons of unpicked stone, which yielded five ounces per ton.

WELL DONE.—A Eurasian youth at Madras has applied to be admitted as a candidate for the Statutory Civil Service, and the Eastern Guardian, a special organ of the local Eurasian Association, says:—"The reply of the Government does not debar Eurasians and the children of domiciled Europeans from going up for any future examination, should such be held. It is of very great importance that the question has been decided, and next year, perhaps, a Eurasian or Anglo-Indian may pass into the Civil Service."

THE NEW VICEROY.—Lord Dufferin, the Bombay Chronicle thinks, has assumed the reins of the Government of India under very auspicious circumstances. "The country is peaceful from one end to the other. The seasons are fairly propitious and the prospects of trade and manufacturing industries sufficiently good. The public exchequer is in a satisfactory condition, and taxes are being willingly paid as usual. The people, while busy with their ordinary avocations, earnestly mean to support the legitimate endeavours of the new Viceroy to conduct smoothly the administration of their public affairs, so as to maintain order at home and good understanding with foreign Governments, and to advance the material prosperity and general progress of the country. If his lordship will strive to do his duty in his wonted manner, regardless of the flattery of friends, and the strictures of opponents, he will stand, judging by the light of present circumstances, a very good chance of being as successful in India as he has been anywhere else. So long as his lordship will stick to the principles enunciated in the Acts of Parliament and Royal Proclamations for the groundwork of the administration of the affairs of India and the guidance of the representatives of the British raj holding sway over the country, the people will have no reason to complain of his proceedings."

TRADE AND RESOURCES OF THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—A report recently received from the secretary in the Agricultural Department of the Central Provinces of India gives a full account of the railway-borne traffic of those provinces during the year ending last April, the latest date to which any official statistics come down. In previous years the statistics of road and town traffic were also taken into consideration, but, no doubt for valid reasons, these are discontinued in the present report, which treats exclusively of the railway traffic, which is estimated by the returns of the Examiners of Railway Accounts. Mr. Nethersole has prepared this report, which is addressed to the Director of Agriculture. The results are in the highest degree satisfactory, as both imports and exports show a considerable increase. In quantity the exports are four times as large as the imports, but the value of the latter is intrinsically higher, so that the ratio between them in value is only as 27 to 20. The principal imports are salt, coal, railway material, sugar, metals, &c. The exports consist of grain, oilseeds, and coal. Wheat and oilseeds form the staple articles of wealth in these provinces. The population of the Khalsa part of the provinces is 9,850,000, and it is stated that they require at the lowest computation 68,950,000 maunds of grain for their support, and after deducting the amount exported it is found that the total production does not exceed 41,305,000 maunds. The deficiency is made up of jowar, kodo, and other inferior grains, that cannot be measured with any degree of accuracy. The quantity of wheat and rice exported is not more than one-eighth of the total production of those grains of superior kind. As the monsoon of the year in question was characterised by a long break in July and August, the conditions of the trade reported upon in this return were manifestly unfavourable; but the main results are officially reported as satisfactory. One of the minor points of interest is the development of the coal industry, which in two years has nearly doubled. The Warora mines are the principal source of supply. It would be curious to watch whether, if this new industry and source of wealth continued to increase, the export of grain would show any falling off. Were it to do so, it would be hard to prove that the people under existing conditions do not stint themselves in the necessities of life. But if the export of grain goes on at the same time that other sources of material well-being are developed and come into effect, there can be little doubt that the producers are well supplied, according to their own views, in everything they require. In all Indian problems we should be most anxious to accumulate facts, and cautious in drawing any general conclusions from isolated instances.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 7, 1885.

STRIKING AT THE HEART OF ENGLAND.

"WE can only defeat the enemy by striking at his very heart, which in the case of England means India." These are the words of General Soboleff, in the long and significant letter just published in M. Aksakoff's organ at Moscow, and telegraphed to the Times on Saturday last. "Our latest acquisition of 'mud' (as M. Makoff calls it) in the Transcaspian, and our close proximity to Herat and Balkh will probably be of enormous advantage to us in the very near future. We already occupy a threatening position on the confines of Afghanistan." These two sentences contain the pith of one of the most insolent and astounding manifestos that have ever insulted the majesty of the British nation—one that would have been absolutely impossible under any other régime than that of the miserable jelly-fishes who, in their insane hatred of Lord Beaconsfield's memory, have deliberately trailed British honour in the dirt in every part of the world.

For the significance of this Russian defiance lies in the notorious fact that no such manifesto could possibly have appeared in Moscow without having first been approved by the censorship of the Czar's Government. It is simply trifling with the intelligence of the British public for the Radical Press to ignore the working of the most rigorous censorship ever known in history, and to pretend to look on General Soboleff's menace as the chatter of irresponsible frivolity. The Times does not give a column and a half of its telegraphic page to unauthorised frivolity. But to any one who has the smallest acquaintance with the circumstances of the Russian Press, the authority of the Times is not required to mark the immense importance of the fact that such a truculent manifesto has passed the St. Petersburg censorship, and been published in the ancient capital of Russia. The whole letter is nothing less than a stirring call to arms, addressed by the Russian Government under a thin diplomatic veil, to the passions of the Russian people and army; and marks both the contempt of St. Petersburg for the Government that has been systematically befooled by Russian protestations, and also the belief now universal throughout the world that England under Mr. Gladstone can be insulted and injured with impunity and success.

And, as if purposely to give additional emphasis to this declaration, it is simultaneously announced in St. Petersburg that the Czar is about to assume the title of "Emperor of Central Asia," and that the proclamation of the Imperial title will be celebrated at Samarkhand with a pomp and magnificence that will fire the imagination of the whole of the Eastern world.

General Soboleff states his belief that the failure of Lord Beaconsfield's plans for the permanent security of our Indian Empire from Russian aggression was due to Sher Ali's opposition, caused by the overwhelming strength of the Russian position on his frontier. What will our Radical friends say to this? Above all, what will the British nation say to it? We in England, at least, know full well that not all the might of Russia in Central Asia could have caused those plans to miscarry, had not our real foes been those of our own household. Whose doing was it, if England's arm was shortened and her hand palsied at the supreme hour of her need? Why, if we look back to the political literature of that time, we find that any expression of the slightest doubt of the spotless purity and hearty friendliness of Russia's intentions was received with howls of execration from Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Grant-Duff, and the rest of those "statesmen," whose fatal power of blinding and beguiling the credulous masses has brought England to her present position of imminent peril in every quarter of the globe. And we all know, too, that when, in spite of domestic factiousness almost amounting to treason, Lord Beaconsfield had succeeded in ejecting the Russian mission from Afghanistan—so much for General Soboleff's empty boast about the might of Russia!—and when English soldiers and Indian-sepoys had actually won for us an impregnable frontier against Muscovite attack, it was a "campaign," not in Central Asia, but in Midlothian, that brought about the Kandahar scuttles and the consequent dangers that now environ us. It was at the foot of Pompey's pillar that great Cæsar fell—"when you, and I, and all of us fell down, and bloody treason vanquished over us." And it was at the polling-booths of the election of 1880, and subsequently in the council-chambers of Downing-street, that those blows were struck at the power of England, which have produced such disastrous consequences. Quousque tandem, Catilina—the historic denunciation, hurled by a Roman patriot against a Roman traitor, expresses the sentiments of every English patriot, at this moment, in regard to the worst and most incompetent Ministry that ever disgraced the English name.

EMPRESS-DAY HONOURS.

THE "Empress-day" honours are gazetted, and the lists will be read by Anglo-Indians with singularly mixed feelings. With regard to one name there will be absolute unanimity. In heartily congratulating Sir Rivers Thompson on his well-won spurs, we only inadequately re-echo a sentiment that will be universal; the wonder is, that it has been possible for the Government of India so long to stand between the Queen and her able Lieutenant-Governor in this matter. And no one, we are sure, will be disposed to grudge to Mr. H. W. Primrose an honour that he has fairly earned, by an unobtrusive devotion to duty, an unfailing urbanity of manner and kindness of feeling, and a high-minded conscientiousness that must have often exercised an influence for good over the less scrupulous members of the late Viceroy's entourage. Among the newly-created Companions of the Indian Empire there are several who have well deserved this honour and the Royal favour. Mr. Panioty has for many years past ably and faithfully maintained, under many and diverse chiefs, the continuity of the important office of Private Secretary to the Viceroy. He has occupied with signal credit a unique position, in which it will be exceedingly difficult to place a competent successor; and will do honour to the Order of which he has been created a Companion. Mr. Griffith's magnificent translation of the "Rámáyana" into English verse constitutes in itself an ample claim for a decoration, not to mention his long and distinguished service as the chief of the Education Department of the North-West Provinces; and the nomination of Dr. K. M. Banerjea, as at once a Brahman of high descent, a Christian missionary of blameless life, and a Sanskrit and vernacular scholar of no mean attainments, will commend itself to every one.

For many of the other nominations, however, it will be sufficient to say that they have been made by the Simla Foreign Office, at once the most incompetent and the most bureaucratic of all the Indian Departments. That Mr. Charles Grant, the Foreign Secretary himself, who has made himself a K.C.S.I., is a distinguished scholar and administrator well-deserving of such a reward, goes without saying—for if he had not been so he would not have been Foreign Secretary, and certainly could not have compiled the excellent Gazetteer of the Central Provinces by which he is best known. But it seems an incongruity, to say the least of it, that a Secretary to Government, whose chief merit quá Foreign Secretary has been amiably to register the decrees of a Government determined to have no foreign policy at all, should get this most coveted of all distinctions before the untitled Members of Council, as well as before many other officers whose exploits are before the world. The bad precedent of a Foreign Secretary recommending himself for honours—of course, the actual appointments to the Star of India are made by the Secretary of State—was established by Mr. (now Sir Alfred) Lyall; who carried it further than many of his successors are likely to have a chance of doing, for he was able to turn the Afghan War to account, first in the shape of a C.B., and then in that of a K.C.B.

For the nominations to the Order of the Indian Empire the Viceroy—that is, the Simla Foreign Office—is alone responsible; and of late no pains have been spared to cheapen this honour, and to make the yearly list as ridiculous as possible. Whilst there are so many English and Indian officers yearly retiring from the various branches of Her Majesty's Service in India, whose careers have richly deserved the Royal recognition, and whose retirement would be immensely brightened by this mark of the Queen's favour, the list of C.I.E.'s this year is headed by two French gentlemen, Professors in the Nancy school of forestry! Absurdity could go no further than this. And there is more than one other name in the list absolutely unknown to fame until thus dragged out of obscurity by Lord Ripon and Mr. Grant. The abuse of the power thus confided to the Viceroy has long ago become scandalous. We trust that Lord Dufferin will look into this matter for himself.

LORD DUFFERIN'S VISIT TO A NATIVE VILLAGE.—We hope the visit which Lord Dufferin paid, in the middle of his journey to Calcutta, to a native village to see the villagers in their primitive dress and their huts, augurs an anxiety on his Lordship's part to acquaint himself with the real condition and wants of the masses of India.—Hindu Prakash.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 13, 1885.

Notes of the Week.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, December 26th; Madras and Allahabad, December 24th; Calcutta, December 23rd; Ceylon, December 23rd; Burma, December 19th.

WE are rapidly becoming the laughing-stock of Asia in the matter of the ridiculous Afghan Boundary Commission—which happy consummation (as we have throughout maintained) was doubtless the object of Russia from the first. It might have been supposed that our Foreign Office had arrived at some definite understanding with Russia before Sir Peter Lumsden started from England, or at least, before Colonel Ridgeway and his little army left India. But since then days and weeks have run on to months. Sir Peter Lumsden has “joined hands” with Colonel Ridgeway in the wild inhospitable Turkoman country; and a Times correspondent with the force, breaking through the manly and independent traditions of other Times correspondents, hastened obsequiously to declare that the event marked “the triumph of Lord Ripon’s Afghan policy.”

AFTER this cheap “triumph”—the one little chick hatched out of so many eggs, after so much clucking—there came a pause. It was supposed in India that this was arranged to give Lord Ripon time to compose his mind after the unwonted sensation of a “triumph;” and Sir Peter Lumsden and Colonel Ridgeway began to play cards at Murghab, to pass the time until the arrival of their Russian colleague.

BY-AND-BY there came doubts, and whisperings, and rumours. It was officially hinted, in excuse, that one Russian envoy had been taken ill. And presently, now that we were fairly in the trap, the Russian Press began more openly to put the tongue in the cheek at us. It was publicly stated in St. Petersburg that the so-called Chief of the Russian Mission had gone away on a holiday!

So there was nothing for it; and Lord Granville, “done again, as usual,” instructed poor Sir Peter and his lieutenant to “go into winter quarters”—at Murghab!

AND now comes a communiqué, apparently official, in the Standard, which informs a gaping world of certain hitches in “the preliminary negotiations!” A pretty time this for “preliminary” negotiations—when our Envoys, with horse, foot, and artillery, and all the paraphernalia of an important mission on which the eyes of Asia are fixed, have already well-nigh exhausted their patience in kicking their heels about in a wild desert in the most dangerous part of the world!

THIS is what the inspired writer in the Standard has to tell us:—

With reference to the preliminary negotiations between the English and Russian Governments on the subject of the Afghan frontier, pending the commencement of the labours of the Delimitation Commission, we are informed that the Russian Foreign Office made certain representations to ours in the beginning of November last, deprecating the strength of the escort sent from India to accompany Sir Peter Lumsden. The next stage in the negotiations was marked by the formal protest of the English Government to the Russian advance to Pul-i-Khatun, and more recently there have been representations on the subject of Penjdeh. With regard to the last-named place, the Foreign Office has the strongest proof that the Ameer’s garrison was in military occupation of it before even the Russians had taken Merv.

EVEN before this last ‘amazing disclosure, and before it had become so evident that Russia had once more made a fool of Lord Granville, an Afghan correspondent had written to the Civil and Military Gazette to say that “the Boundary Commission and its circuitous and stealthy route is ridiculed, and great doubts are expressed in regard to its ultimate safe return to India.”

A CORRESPONDENT of the Civil and Military Gazette, who has special opportunities of ascertaining what is believed by natives in Afghanistan, writes:—

Merchants from Afghanistan, both Hindus and Mahomedans, agree in saying that extensive military preparations continue there, on the ostensible plea of apprehension of Russian aggression. But the popular conviction inclines to the belief that this is a mere ruse; and that the Ameer has neither the will nor the power to stem the tide of the Russian advance, which will overwhelm everything that comes before it. Also that recent Russian successes and conquests have strongly impressed the people of Afghanistan with the dread of her irresistible military power and resources and the wisdom of seeking her alliance and friendship. The common bazar talk gleefully alludes to the prospect of the Afghans again enriching themselves with the rich plunder of India, as their forefathers used to do during the decline and fall of the Mogul Empire, and before the rising power of the Sikhs checked their periodical raids.

THE particulars of the fall of Bhamo, with an account of the disgraceful conduct of the Burmese troops and of the outrages on British subjects, are given in graphic language in the Times telegram of this week. And the concluding words of the lengthy communication give the usual moral of the whole business—“The Indian Government . . . will probably await the further development of the situation.” We never do anything else nowadays.

LORD DUFFERIN is reported—so the Calcutta correspondent of the Times informs us—to have suggested some “modifications” in the Bengal Tenancy Bill. We very much doubt Lord Dufferin doing anything so hasty and premature so shortly after his arrival. The “report” bears every mark of having been put about by the faction in the Indian Government that favours spoliation—with the view of entrapping both the zemindars and Lord Dufferin into a most dangerous compromise.

FOR instance, it is stated (to frighten the zemindars) that “the Government seems determined to dispose of the measure before adjourning to Simla”; and further (to flatter the Viceroy) that “he (Lord Dufferin) has already completely mastered it in all its details.” Both of these statements are absurd. The “Government” can hardly be determined to rush the measure through without the approval of the Viceroy; and Lord Dufferin is pledged to the eyes to give the matter the fullest consideration and study—and even if he were not, his Excellency is the last man in the world to allow himself thus to be “run in” by a clique of fanatical Radicals. On the other hand, it is absurd on the face of it to pretend that Lord Dufferin, in the hurry and bustle of the first few days of his Viceroyalty, in a new and most strange land, in the midst of a thousand distractions, and without stirring from Calcutta, can by any possibility have already acquired any personal knowledge of the details of such a vastly complex and difficult question worth mentioning—let alone such a complete knowledge as, we are confident, would alone satisfy the Viceroy as to the justice of his momentous decision.

THE suggested modifications, as will be seen from the telegrams, are not unimportant: and are all in the direction certain to be taken by a statesman of Lord Dufferin’s character. The proposed abandonment of the iniquitous and most perilous “Free Sale” clause is especially valuable. But the parts that are left untouched are to the full as fatal as those which are now reluctantly withdrawn. We seldom differ from the exceedingly able and far-sighted Calcutta correspondent of the Times. But we altogether repudiate the suggestion that the zemindars “still profess themselves dissatisfied” as the “best means of obtaining further concessions.” They could do nothing else; for what is proposed to be left in the Bill will still have the effect of leaving them mere rent-chargers on their own estates. The proposed modifications—whether really emanating from Lord Dufferin, or put about (as is more likely) by Mr. Ilbert and his accomplices—do not affect the principles of the Bill, which we discuss to-day in our leading columns; they do not even touch its confiscatory effect.

WELL may the Calcutta correspondent of the Times say, in regard to the enhancement cases (only 120 per cent!) on the estates of the Government of Bengal in Midnapore, "It is much to be regretted that the Bengal Government should have persisted in carrying on this battle to the bitter end." And the "battle" was between the most powerful Government in the world and 75,000 of its unhappy tenants on the Midnapore Khas mehals, of whom all except about 100 were too poor to "carry on the battle to the bitter end!"

WE are exceedingly glad to hear of the signal success of the meeting called to do honour to the memory of Kristodas Pal. We shall reproduce the speeches when the mail brings the full report; and we trust that the whole English Press will unite with us in doing honour to the memory of a great Indian, a true patriot, and a singularly gifted and estimable man.

WE are very sorry to learn that Sir William Muir was thrown from his horse whilst riding to the India-office on Tuesday morning, and was somewhat severely shaken. He has since been confined to his bed.

THE cosmopolitan benevolence of the Gladstone Government has secured for us neighbours all along our road to India, who may one day become troublesome rivals. The Italian settlement at Assab Bay on the Red Sea was originally, so we were most carefully taught, nothing but a small trading-station, and a port of call for the Italian steamers trading with the East. Now it is evidently to be turned into a military fortress, and will doubtless serve as a fortified coaling-station. A telegram from Rome, dated Jan. 10, runs as follows:—

The Italia Militare to-day gives full details of the Expeditionary Corps destined to occupy Assab. It will be composed of four companies of Bersaglieri of 200 men each, one company of Artillery with six guns, and half a company of Engineers. The expedition will be commanded by Colonel Tancredi Staletta, of the Staff Corps. The corvettes Garibaldi and Amerigo Vespucci, which now will not proceed to the Congo, the ironclad Castelfidardo, and the despatch boats Messagiero and Vedetta, will also be ordered to the Red Sea.

THE Englishman has the following account of the Calcutta Freight Market, corrected to December 23:—

We have to report a fair amount of business in our freight market since last mail both in steam and sailing tonnage. Steamer rates have further improved for early shipment of light freight, and are very firm for rough cargo. Sailors have moved off freely both for home and country employment. Two ships have fixed for London, three for Dundee, and three for America at former rates, and four vessels have gone in for country employ at a slight improvement on last quotations. Our unfixed tonnage now amounts to 39,000 tons.

THE following on the Calcutta Indigo Market is taken from Messrs. W. Moran and Co.'s Market Report:—

During the past week four public sales have been held, at which 4,709 chests were offered, and 4,340 chests sold, bringing the quantity out of the market, including the private sales noted below, to about 63,500 maunds as against 95,000 at same date last year. Up to date 12,250 maunds Bengal, 31,750 Tirhoot, 6,000 Benares, and 13,500 Oudes have been disposed of. The Market has been decidedly quiet, and prices generally are about Rs. 5 lower than they were, a few exceptional lots only realising rates that were current last week.

THE same firm gives the following account of the Calcutta Tea Market:—

Since the 11th inst. the market has remained closed until yesterday, when about 15,000 chests were offered, and of these 14,500 changed hands. Bidding was brisk, and the auctions passed off with considerable animation.

THE Times of India has the following obituary till the departure of the mail, December 26:—

Mr. Maurice Cross, Subordinate Judge of Kumbaconum, Madras, the Rev. D. J. French, Chaplain of Berhampore; and Dr. Kenneth Bruce Stuart, of Calcutta.

Telegraphic Intelligence.

The following is the usual weekly telegram from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Jan. 11:—

"The following account of the capture of Bhamo has been extracted from the longer statements published in the Rangoon newspapers. About two o'clock on the morning of Monday, Dec. 8, a small party of armed Chinese suddenly entered the town by an unguarded gate, and rushed to the palace of the Woon, or Governor, yelling and firing guns. The Woon and his guard of 150 Mandalay soldiers, alarmed by the noise, ran away at once. The Chinese then opened the large eastern gate of the town and let in the main body, consisting of 200 Chinese and 100 Kachyens. These men began to burn and loot the town, but killed very few of the inhabitants, the latter having fled precipitately to their boats.

"Another body of Burmese soldiers set to work looting on their own account, and having placed the plunder in a Burmese gunboat near the town returned and attacked the invaders, but without success. By the evening the greater part of the town was in the hands of the Chinese. One act of cruelty which they committed was the firing on some persons who were making for the boats. Two or three women are also said to have been shot. Next day about 1,000 Kachyens arrived, and many of the Chinese left with their spoil. The Burmese troops still held a position near the British Residency, but were driven out of it during the day. They alleged that Mr. Roberts, an English missionary, had opened the gates to the Kachyens, and they fired at him three times, but without effect.

"On Wednesday the Irrawaddy Flotilla Company's steamer Kahbyor (Captain Terndrup) arrived from Mandalay, and was immediately boarded by a crowd of refugees. As fighting was still proceeding and any communication with the shore was impossible, the Kahbyor dropped down the river to Sanaddee, but returned to Bhamo on Friday, the object being to bring away the missionaries. She anchored alongside of the Burmese steamer on board of which was the fugitive Woon. Captain Terndrup asked the Woon to help him to save the missionaries, but the Woon rudely refused. During the interview Mr. Roberts was seen approaching the steamer, accompanied by some of the Burmese. Captain Terndrup and a passenger named Soltan rowed out in the steamer's gig to meet him, when they were suddenly fired upon by the Burmese soldiers. They succeeded in getting Mr. Roberts safely on board of the British steamer, but his servants were seized and murdered, the Woon refusing to interfere.

"With great difficulty Captain Terndrup then obtained permission to go and save two ladies and a missionary named Freiday, but the Woon added, "If you bring any but foreigners we will fire into your boat." Thereupon Captain Terndrup and Mr. Roberts went in the gig to Bhamo, and got the ladies and Mr. Freiday safely away. Next day the Woon was more courteous, and allowed them to go and rescue the native servants of the mission, with their wives and children.

"The Chinese showed great civility to them, and placed no obstacle in the way of rescuing any of the party. They also refused the money that was offered, and, apparently, whatever danger was incurred was from the Burmese officials and troops. Mr. Soltan went to thank the Chinese Commander, King Kuch Yee, who replied:—

"You need not fear. Stay; we will respect your property and yourselves. We will not fight with the English. But we cannot stand Burmese oppression any longer, and we intend to hold the country. Two thousand more soldiers will soon be here, and after you leave we shall attack the Burmese steamers. The English are good traders; they can take the country up to Mandalay and we will hold the rest. Their steamers can come and go, and trade will prosper."

"The losses of natives of India in the affair are estimated at 100,000 rupees, but the Chinese traders lost more. The refugees bitterly lament the treachery of the Burmese soldiers, who, instead of defending the town, looted and burnt it. They say, 'If only the English had held the country we should never have suffered thus.'

"The loss of Bhamo is said to have been carefully concealed from Theebaw. According to an unconfirmed report, the Burmese troops sent to recapture the place have been defeated.

"The Indian Government has given no indication of its intentions, and will probably await the further development of the situation."

"The proposed modifications of the Bengal Tenancy Bill, a summary of which I have already telegraphed, have been much discussed; and the general opinion would seem to be that they will remove of the most objectionable features of the measure. The Zemindars, however, still profess themselves dissatisfied—perhaps thinking that a profession of dissatisfaction is the best means of obtaining further concessions. The Select Committee continues to sit three days in the week; but the magnitude of its task is such that there is no immediate prospect of finishing the work, and it will probably be the end of March or the beginning of April before the Bill reaches its final stage.

"The Government seems determined to dispose of the measure before adjourning to Simla—a wise resolve; as a delay until next winter would be an unmixed evil, and would have the effect of further unsettling and embittering the relations of landlords and tenants. Lord Dufferin is greatly to be pitied in having a measure of such complexity and difficulty thrown on his shoulders at the beginning of his Viceroyalty. But it is stated that he has already completely mastered it in all its details, and he may certainly be trusted to see the fullest justice done to all the interests affected.

"Yesterday, in the Calcutta High Court, Justices Tottenham and Norris delivered judgment in an appeal which has peculiar interest at the present moment, when the land question is so prominently before the public. Some years ago a new assessment was made on the tenants of one of the Khas mehals, or Government estates, in the Midnapore district. The Settlement Officer fixed the rents of 75,000 Ryots, and it appears from the proceedings that while the average rate of enhancement of rent was about 48 per cent., the enhancement amounted in some cases to about 120 per cent. The settlement was effected under a special Act, which provides that the assessment shall be final unless it be proved that the rent has not been assessed in accordance with the provisions of the Act. The Ryots declared the assessment excessive, and refused to pay the enhanced rates, and at one time there was some fear of disturbances. Eventually 2,600 of them instituted legal proceedings to contest the validity of the assessment. The Government contested the case in the two lower Courts, and the greater number of the Ryots were unable by reason of their poverty to carry on the fight. About 100, however, carried the cases to the High Court.

"That tribunal has now decided that the assessment was not made in accordance with the provisions of the Act, and that it is, therefore, illegal and void ab initio; and that the notice of assessment published was inaccurate and unfair to the Ryots. The Settlement Officer was blamed for having dealt with the Ryots en bloc, instead of considering the individual cases. A remand to the lower appellate Court was ordered, with a view of determining, upon further evidence, what was a "fair rent;" but on the application of the appellants' counsel the Court deferred drawing up the decree for one month in order to give the Government an opportunity of doing what was right, instead of compelling the Ryots to carry this ruinous litigation further. The Government was ordered to pay the costs of the appeal.

"It is much to be regretted that the Bengal Government should have persisted in carrying on this battle to the bitter end. It was fully warned of the probable result, but, unfortunately, unwise counsels prevailed, and it now finds its treatment of its tenants declared to be absolutely illegal. It is to be hoped that it will recognise its error, even at the eleventh hour, and not force the unhappy Ryots to continue a struggle which has already cost them so much.

"A crowded meeting, called to do honour to the memory of the late Bahoo Kristodass Pal, was held in Calcutta yesterday. The Lieutenant-Governor, who presided, said that there was not an administrative or legislative measure of importance passed during the last fifteen years in which the Government had not been assisted by the independent, unbiassed opinion of Kristodass Pal, whose great influence had done much for the education of the public mind. Resolutions were passed recording the sorrow felt at the untimely death of Kristodass Pal, and appointing a committee to raise subscriptions for a public memorial to him. Among the speakers were Chief Justice Garth, Sir Stewart Bayley, the Maharajah of Durbungab, and several other prominent Europeans and natives.

"The recent Moplah riot in Malabar appears to have originated in an event which occurred six months ago, when a band of Moplah fanatics attempted to murder a Hindoo named Ramen, who, after having become a Mahomedan, had reverted to Hindooism. They failed in their purpose, and were sentenced to imprisonment. On the morning of December 27, seven armed Moplahs went to Ramen's house, set it on fire, and shot several of his relations. They next went to the house of a rich Brahmin and shot him, and then entrenched themselves in a Hindoo temple. The Collector tried to induce them to surrender, but they refused, saying that they were prepared to die for their religion. In the evening some troops arrived. Next morning the gates of the temple were blown open with dynamite and the troops entered. The Moplahs fought to the last, refused to surrender, and when resistance was hopeless, exposed themselves at the windows and were shot. Eleven dead bodies and several wounded men were found in the temple.

"The Bombay Factory Commission has submitted its report. It urges that if the law is to be amended, it should be assimilated throughout India, and that by further restrictions on the cotton industry Bombay will only handicap her trade. It found the sanitary condition of the mills much better than was expected; but it makes some recommendations. It thinks that no interference is necessary as to the hours of work of adult males, but would restrict the hours for women and children. The Medical Committee reported to the Commission that there had been no special deterioration of health among the operatives, as compared with other labourers."

The following extra telegrams have been received from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Jan. 12:—

"The surveys are being pushed on for the construction of an important strategic line, called the Sind-Sagur-Doab Railway. The existing narrow-gauge line from Lalamusa, on the Punjab Northern Railway, to Pind-Dadun-Khan, will be converted into a broad-gauge one, and continued to a point opposite to Dera-Ismael-Khan, and thence southward to the Indusvalley line at Mozuffergurh, with a branch to a point opposite to Dera-Ghazi-Khan.

"Professor Forrest's researches at the Bombay Secretariat have resulted in a further important discovery, besides that of the Wellington despatches mentioned last week. Certain bundles of records brought from the Poona Residency after the fall of the Peishwa have now been found. They include the draft, in French, of a projected treaty between Tippoo Sultan and the French Republic, stipulating that from 10,000 to 15,000 Frenchmen, supported by an adequate naval force, should be sent to the coast near Mysore, where Tippoo's army would meet them, for combined operations against the English.

"There is also a considerable amount of correspondence between Tippoo and the Marquis Wellesley. In one letter Tippoo thanks Lord Wellesley for sending him news of the destruction of the French fleet off the coast of Egypt, and goes on to describe the French nation in very disparaging terms."

THE 17th Regiment Bengal Infantry proceeds to Benares via Barackpore, crossing the Hooghly at Gyretty Ghaut by ferry, owing to the prevalence of cholera in the village of Rishra, between Gyretty Ghaut and Kotrung, on the Grand Trunk-road.

THE RIVER-BORNE TRADE OF ASSAM.—The annual report of the river-borne trade of Assam has been issued. This is the fourth that has been issued since steps were first taken towards permanently recording the details of the trade carried by the two great rivers of Assam, the Brahmapootra and the Surma. The traffic conveyed by the boats and steamers on those streams is by far the most important part of the trade of this province, into which railways have not yet penetrated, and in which roads are periodically destroyed by the rains or rendered almost impassable by unbridged and unfordable rivers. The total value of the trade of Assam with external States amounts to only 10½ lakhs, whereas the river-borne trade reaches the large total of 600 lakhs, or more than fifty-five times greater. Mr. Darrah, the author of this report, shows that the difference in the relative speed of the currents of the two rivers affects the traffic by country boats. Twenty per cent. of the total imports of twist and yarn in Sylhet are carried by country boats, but only five per cent. of that which reached the Brahmapootra Valley was conveyed by the same agency. The progress of the tea trade, which alone constitutes seventy per cent. of the whole trade of the province, is well described in a special paragraph, which shows that the export has greatly increased in quantity, but that the value has rather tended to diminish. The uncertainty felt as to what is a fair average price per maund tends, however, to shake very much one's belief in the accuracy or value of these deductions. Mr. Darrah's concluding reflections are of interest. "It is worthy of notice," he says, "how materially the trade of the Surma Valley differs from that carried by the Brahmapootra. The former consumes three times the quantity of European cotton goods, five times the amount of ganja, ten times the supply of mineral oils, twice as much sugar, four times as much tobacco, and considerably more salt, gram, and pulse than is required by the latter. Oil and tea seeds are imported into the Surma Valley in considerable quantities, whereas they are among the exports of the Brahmapootra trade. Among exports we find that nearly the whole of the lime, oranges, potatoes, rice, hides, and dry fish exported from Assam are sent out from the Surma Valley, and that it has the exclusive monopoly of the trade in ghi, linseed, and bamboos. On the other hand, the Brahmapootra Valley exports largely commodities that practically find no place in the trade that makes its exit by the Megna—viz., oil seeds (especially mustard and rape), raw cotton, rubber, jute, lac, and tea seed. It exports also six times as much wax, five times as much ivory, and considerably more tea. Among imports we find that the Brahmapootra Valley takes twelve times as much potatoes, fourteen times as much opium, seven times as much husked rice, four times as much coal and coke, and considerably more metals, liquor, and ghi. It is probable that the construction of the railway across the Cachar Hills will considerably modify the details of this trade, largely diminishing that of the Brahmapootra and increasing that of the Surma Valley.

THE "INDIAN STATESMAN" ON [THE PRESENT QUESTION.

It is desirable we think to keep the history of the Tenancy Bill before the public mind, that the force of the objections to it may be more and more generally understood. The Bill had its first origin in the distinct and repeated promises of the Government, during several years, that it would certainly bring in a Bill to give the zemindar proper facilities for the recovery of his rents. The Government knew well what difficulty the zemindar experienced in obtaining these rents. It knew the fact from its own experience as landlord, and when in 1870 it made the zemindar liable for the "cesses" that began to be imposed in that year, it renewed the promise in a very express way. The zemindar is allowed no "grace" whatever, either in the payment of the original assessment upon him, or of these new local cesses. He must pay them the very day they become due, or make himself liable to the immediate sale of his estate at public auction, under what is known as the sunset law. The promise of relief was renewed again and again, from 1870 down to 1876-77, and always deferred, the zemindar remaining all these years—as he still does to this hour—without proper legal facilities to enable him to recover what is due to him. In 1876-77 a Bill was at last brought into Council, with a very strong statement of its necessity, but now—and for the first time so far as this history is concerned—the Government declared that there was a difficulty in the way of giving these facilities, because the zemindar was in the habit of oppressing the ryot, by undue enhancements of his rental, and by evicting his tenantry when they refused to pay. It was somewhat late in the day to bring these charges forward, when the long-deferred promise was apparently about to be fulfilled, but the zemindars' complaint is that the charges should have been assumed to be true, without the slightest inquiry into the facts. The Bill proceeds upon the assumption that the zemindar's enhancements of his rents have been oppressive, and that they have been followed by what Mr. Mackenzie calls "the horrors of eviction." It is in vain that the zemindar asks for the evidence on which these charges rest. There is none, for the simple reason that no inquiry has been instituted, and no evidence taken, as to whether the charges are true or not.

Now we ask every candid and reasonable man what he thinks of legislation—of so sweeping an order as this measure, that there is not a right or usage in the province concerning the land, that will not be affected thereby—preceded by no inquiry of any kind into the facts. When the zemindars naturally and instantly complained that they were being condemned unheard, the Government brought forward as evidence a string of extracts from the annual administration reports, which they do not permit the public to see, but in which it seems desultory and casual complaints have been made of the unsatisfactory relations between the zemindar and ryot, but which extracts, as a whole, leave on the mind the impression that let those relations be what they may, the tendency has long been to a quiet settling down of the two classes into more or less friendly relations with each other. As "suggestions" of the sort of inquiry that would be necessary in any attempt to recast the relations between the two classes, they have their value, but as "evidence" they are not worth the paper they are written upon. The Government nevertheless proceeded straightway, in the fulness of its knowledge thus acquired, to appoint a Commission to report upon the subject. If it had stopped there no great harm would have been done. The report is a very able one, as might have been expected from the names associated therewith, and the recommendations of its authors possess of course a certain value as suggestions. But the extraordinary error was made of deputing this Commission to draft a Bill, which the Government straightway brought forward as its solution of the whole question. If we say that the Commission was so defectively constituted that it was not competent to solve the question, we do not say it disrespectfully, but from absolute conviction of its truth. Where yet in the world was it ever regarded as safe, or where would it be safe now, to entrust a Commission of three or four gentlemen, holding conflicting opinions about this difficult subject of the land, to draft a measure of such proportions as this Land Bill? As we so often complain, no one in India seems able to "count." Practically, what the Government did was to depute two gentlemen who held somewhat advanced Radical views concerning tenant-right, to devise an entirely new land settlement for sixty millions of people. The people are of several distinct nationalities, with innumerable customs, usages, privileges, and rights, that have been the slow growth of ages. The existing tenures amongst them and their incidents are inexhaustible in their peculiarities, while the Bill sweeps the whole of them away, and remoulds and resettles everything anew, upon certain lines which, theoretically, these two gentlemen think to be sound and desirable everywhere. It has been complained that they were both young and inexperienced, and the statement is true, and must be insisted upon, for the great element of safe legislation everywhere consists in the preponderance of age in the national councils which determine it. Many years ago (1866), when addressing the united Chambers of Commerce at Manchester and Liverpool on this very question of the land, we pointed out that we laboured under a great disadvantage in India, from the fact that there was so few "old men" amongst us. We reminded the Chambers that they must not expect to find much matured wisdom, or safe guidance in India, because of this peculiarity. We called their attention to the fact that the average age of members of the Commons at that time was fifty-four years, and of the Lords fifty-seven, and we added—"Can anyone doubt that it is because of this preponderance of age in the national councils that so much practical wisdom guides them, and that so seldom is any step taken in either House, which comes afterwards to be regretted?" It is proverbial, as we all know, that there is nothing in which the old feel such confidence as "age." A man must live to be fifty, sixty, seventy years old, rightly to understand what this advantage of age really means. We have constantly seen in India how disastrously the comparative youthfulness of our merchants, lawyers, and civilians, affects the country. It is because there are so few old men in India that we so frequently see folly mistaken amongst us for wisdom. It is no reflection upon the two gentlemen who drafted this radical Land Bill to point out that they were both so young as to be, on that ground alone, unequal to such a task as that entrusted to them. It is only when age has chastened, enthusiasm, and repeated disappointments and failure have made men circumspect and cautious, that you find the practical wisdom which is so conspicuously wanting in India, and of which this Bill is the latest expression. Sir Richard Garth did not intend to be rude when he spoke of the comparative youthfulness of the gentlemen who had drafted it. The sure instinct of danger which age brings with it is not timidity, but the result of experience; and it is an instinct of this kind that tells the elder amongst us that there is danger in the Bill. Is it really a light matter to revolutionize by legislation the innumerable relations that have grown up in these provinces, amidst sixty or seventy millions of people, on the vital subject of the land, when the rights, the usages, the customs, the privileges concerning it, are practically innumerable, while the Bill, directly or indirectly, destroys them all.

If it could be truthfully affirmed that in spite of all this the measure was necessary, and that the Government must risk all chances, we could understand the determination to carry it. But the Bill is very wantonness itself. So far from any class desiring it, all classes are in alarm about it; for it raises questions that would never arise at all but for its provisions. Without any exaggeration, we say that it will unsettle the relations of every man with his fellow all over the provinces, should it become law. The fear of it is rapidly spreading from the zemindar class to the tenure-holder, and even to the cultivator. Nothing, therefore, could justify such a measure but proof of its necessity. While abolishing all freedom of contract it leaves literally nothing alone. Everything is to be determined by a new law. Neither zemindar, nor tenure-holder, nor ryot, nor tenant-at-will, is henceforward to have any discretion whatever. It is, in particular, a heavy blow at the zemindar, and it aims this blow at him at the very time when alarm is justly being awakened at the general attitude of the cultivator, not towards the zemindar only, but towards the State itself. No attempt whatever does the Bill make to distinguish between old and distinguished families who have been looked up to by the people for ages as their princes and national leaders, and the mere money-lending usurer, or the vile, intriguing vakil, who has obtained his land by fraud. The Maharaja of an ancient principality is henceforward to stand upon his own estates and territories, in the same position as the very mhar or mhang who has contrived to become a "landholder," under the fatal levelling of all classes by our laws. Hindoo society is not being disintegrated quickly enough, nor the old Mahomedan aristocracy decaying rapidly enough, but we must give both a downward impetus to accelerate their extinction. We have not brought the former rulers of the people as yet low enough. It is advisable to help them downstairs a little faster, and to lift the mahajun and the bunnia into fellowship with them, and equality. Everything that yet lingers amongst the people of a graceful or gentlemanly order is to be stamped out, by putting everything under a cast-iron system of law. In place of living human relations, and institutions wisely left to adjust themselves by the force of old traditions and old customs, we are to have a new social fabric altogether, a glass and iron structure of the Radical kind that commends itself so much to the Sheffield mind. The warnings of age and experience count for nothing. Two or three young Secretaries, full of enthusiasm for tenant-right, are commissioned to pull down the old fabric, and put up a new cast-iron one in its room, without a thought of its fitness for the people who are to find their future dwelling place therein, and accommodate themselves to the new order as they can.

When we think of the sweeping nature of this Bill, that it literally leaves nothing alone, but recasts everything in new and rigid moulds prescribed by law; that it refuses to allow the people any freedom of contract whatever, or any exercise of their own will or judgment, in their dealings with each other; that it pulls down old families held in respect for ages, that it may elevate the bunnia and the mahajun to the same level with them; that it sweeps away at a stroke countless customs, usages, rights, and privileges, to which the people cling and will ever cling; that it ignores all sympathies, and defies all prejudices, treating the people precisely as if they were an inorganic mass of stone, to be made to assume any shape we please—we cannot speak the sense we have of its transcendent folly. Instead of restricting our legislation to the narrowest possible necessities of the position, we make a dash at the moon, and determine to change all things, because it is desirable to change some. Under such rules as this, the people never know what rest means. One long period of bitter conflict, created by law, succeeds another, between all classes who unfortunately have any connection with the land. The Government meanwhile remains absolutely blind to the revolution it is preparing. It honestly believes it to be nothing more than a troublesome and intricate business that it has to deal with, and that the sooner it is over the better. The difficulty which it finds at every step in drafting the measure but faintly forecasts what will follow when its provisions have to be applied in practice; but the fact enters the mind of no one connected with it. It really seems to be thought that because Mr. Gladstone has given "tenant-right" to some two or three millions of starving cottiers in Ireland, in sheer despair of what else to do, that it can do no possible harm to sweep away the existing land tenures of sixty millions of people, mostly in a state of great poverty, in these provinces. It is legislation gone mad.

FRENCH POLICY IN THE EAST.

Considering the strained attention which is bestowed by the Press generally, both in England and in India, on the progress of Russian aggression in Central Asia, it is strange that only a fitful regard is occasionally cast upon the proceedings of France in the Far East. The pretensions of the French and the unexpected tenacity of the Chinese have led the French Republic and the Celestial Empire step by step into a war which both Powers protested with apparent sincerity that they were most anxious to avoid. The fiction that the hostilities which marked the progress of negotiations did not constitute a state of war may now be regarded as abandoned. The French Chambers have voted the largest sum—nearly two millions sterling—which M. Ferry has ventured to ask for, and he has promised in return that he will now carry on operations with activity. Two millions of money, as Sir John Strachey and Lord Lytton could testify, do not go far in a war with an Asiatic Power, even when its subjects do not amount to more than four or five millions. What impression may be made with the thunderbolts of war which can be purchased for forty-three million francs, upon an Empire whose subjects are reckoned by hundreds of millions three or four times repeated, we have yet to see. General Millot, who has had some experience in campaigning against the Chinese, has given it as his opinion that no French general ought to lead an army of less than a hundred thousand men into China. It cannot be said that the estimate of the force requisite is at all extravagant, though it is wholly out of keeping with the dribblets of troops hitherto sent out of France to make head against the endless levies of the most populous empire that ever existed. To hold our position in India we employ fifty or sixty thousand British troops even in a period of profound peace. When the leaderless sepoys had to be crushed it was deemed prudent, if not necessary, to accumulate a hundred and ten thousand white soldiers in the country. It may be doubted whether General Millot's hundred thousand troops would be all that would be required in these days to bring China on her knees. When the Anglo-French Expedition forced its way to Peking, and burned the Summer Palace, the operation was by no means as free from peril as it seemed. Had the forces at the disposal of the Chinese Government been handled with ordinary skill the allied army would have found it very difficult to reach the capital, and still more difficult to return to the fleet.

In their last struggle with Europeans the Chinese were undoubtedly depressed and cowed by the formidable alliance of the two Western Powers; besides, at that time the improvement of their military organisation had only proceeded sufficiently to enable them to inflict a defeat on a squadron which assailed the forts guarding the approach to the capital, and at a subsequent period to defend those forts for a moment with some prospect of success—a success which, if attained, would have brought the invasion to a stand at once. Since that time considerable progress has been made in organising the means of offering a long resistance to a hostile army. General Gordon, when he left Bombay for China after resigning the Private Secretaryship to Lord Ripon, very disinterestedly drew up a plan of defence, of which the chief feature was that no tangible front should be offered to a foreign enemy, who would naturally be anxious above all things to come to a pitched battle, so that the superiority of European drill and tactics might make itself felt at once and decisively. The Chinese were instructed by Gordon to keep away from the enemy, to out-march him, to threaten his flanks, to harass him by night attacks, to cut off his supplies, to give him no rest, to avoid battles or any decisive operations. If this plan of resistance, which must be in an honoured place in the Perkin War Office, be now put to use it will doubtless prove as effective against a French general, even if he had a hundred thousand troops behind him, as it would have done against a Russian army, for whose benefit it was specially drawn up by Chinese Gordon. Still, when all is said, China is China, and France is a great European military Power. M. Ferry has given evidence of a stubborn resolution which will not suffer him to turn aside from a course to which he stands committed for Europe. The French Chambers have allowed themselves, though with evident reluctance and misgiving, to be committed to M. Ferry's great project. The Republic cannot afford to accept defeat or failure in an enterprise of such magnitude. The withdrawal of the French forces from Mexico, and the abandonment of Maximilian to the vengeance of Juarez, led fatally to the misfortunes which culminated in Sedan. The French Government of Tuesday must at all hazards avoid incurring a forfeiture of prestige which might produce equally disastrous results. We must, therefore, be prepared to hear that the Chambers have been asked for a credit far exceeding any of those yet devoted to the purpose, and that the war will be carried on on the scale which can promise a decisive and, for French purposes, a useful result. There seems to be no military reason why a force of a hundred or a hundred and fifty thousand men could not hope to bear down all resistance and make China cede Yunnan, which is contiguous to Canton, or even the province of Quangtung itself, as the price of peace. If events take the course just indicated we shall be compelled to take stock of the effect upon our own position as the dominant Power in the East. Mr. Colquhoun, the Times correspondent in China, has we learn, a book in the press bearing the title of "Asiatic France." This new France includes already Tongking, Annam, Cochinchina, Cambodia, and Hainan. If it should come to include Yunnan, or any other province giving a fulcrum on Chinese ground, we shall have a new political factor of great importance adjacent to our south-western frontier, precisely as we have the Russians established within inconvenient propinquity to our north-western frontier. We know pretty well, from the tenor of Mr. Colquhoun's contributions to the Times, that in his view the establishment of a new French Asiatic Empire to the south-west of China is a very serious portent which requires to be carefully watched. He considers that a great deal will depend on the attitude which the British Government takes up in Indo-China. Not only France, but Russia and Germany, will watch our policy closely. If we are weak or wavering we shall, in his opinion, have France in force on the eastern Indian frontier, and Russia closing in upon the north and west. Such a development of diverse interests in our neighbourhood would, of course, be a matter of grave concern, not only with regard to Burma and Afghanistan, but to India and our national interests.

Lord Dufferin will certainly find in the remoter East full scope for the exercise of the high qualities of statesmanship of which he has given so many proofs. According to the authority to which we have just referred, the annexation or "protection" of the kingdom of Siam is regarded as a settled principle of policy at Saigon, and it would probably have been effected ere now but for the protracted resistance of China to the absorption of Tongking. The supremacy of the French in Siam would involve independent Burma in inextricable difficulties, and if we annex King Theebaw's kingdom or leave the French to take that course—which may be set aside as impossible—we should have in either case the French in contact with our Indian frontier. It ought not to be above the resources of British diplomacy to give another direction to French expansion. If a choice is to be made it would be better to acquiesce in the annexation of Formosa, and to see her established in strength in a position less disquieting to our immediate interests. It is conceivable that the growth of French power in the north of China might be advantageous rather than otherwise, inasmuch as we should then have a second great European Power as interested as ourselves in restraining within reasonable limits the encroachments of Russia which threaten the existing equilibrium in Asia. On the other hand, France would find it, perhaps, eventually to her interest not to place her new basket of colonial eggs within too easy reach of the strong foot which kicked over her former ventures.—Bombay Gazette.

RETURNS OF THE RAIL-BORNE TRAFFIC OF BENGAL.—A return just received from India shows the results of the railway traffic for the quarter ending the 30th of June last and compares them with those of the corresponding quarter of the year 1883. The results are especially striking in the import trade, wherein has to be recorded a remarkable and almost marvellous decrease. The falling off in the import trade during the quarter was as much as 4,043,315 maunds, or 58·12 per cent., compared with the corresponding quarter of the previous year. The bulk of this decrease was due to the decline in the trade in wheat, of which only 1,380,881 maunds were despatched to Calcutta, against 3,868,360 maunds in the first quarter of 1883-4. The export trade, however, showed a trifling increase of 21,320 maunds, or 0·63 per cent., over the returns of the quarter ending the 30th of June, 1883, notwithstanding that there was a decrease of 136,798 maunds in iron, 129,006 maunds in rice, 118,374 maunds in drained and undrained sugar, 74,803 maunds in gunny bags and cloth, and 21,744 maunds in tobacco. No general deductions are attempted in these returns, which show that so far as Bengal and Calcutta are concerned, the wheat trade passed through an unfavourable revolution in the spring of last year.

GEOGRAPHY.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—Edward Thornton's "Gazetteer of India," published by Messrs. Allen and Co. in 1857, was a very useful book, but it is now out of date. Bradshaw gives the railway stations in India, but not alphabetically.

A second edition of Thornton's work in one convenient volume, giving a description of all mountain ranges and rivers, of all towns with populations exceeding 10,000, and of all railway stations, would be far more practically useful than Dr. Hunter's ponderous volumes.—Your obedient servant,

Jan. 5, 1885.

The amounts allotted were—in bills on Calcutta, Rs.5,91,300, average rate ls. 7-156d.; Bombay, Rs.17,83,000, average rate ls. 7-16d.; and Madras, Rs.1,00,000, average rate ls. 7-1,875d.; in telegraphic transfers, Calcutta, Rs.8,00,000, average rate ls. 7-1,875d.; making a total of Rs.32,74,300. Tenders for bills on all presidencies at ls. 7 5-32d. and above will receive in full, and for telegraphic transfers on Calcutta at ls. 7 3-16d. in full. Thirty-five lakhs are to be offered next Wednesday. From the beginning of the financial year to the evening of the 6th inst., remittances for Rs.10,91,87,418 were sold, realising £8,876,556.

THE INDIAN AND COLONIAL EXHIBITION OF 1886.—The Home authorities have accepted the proposals of the Government of India on the subject of the Exhibition of India and the Colonies, to be held at South Kensington in 1886. This decision practically means that India will be worthily represented on that occasion, for while the Government of India may only incur the risk of a possible loss of ten thousand pounds, it can accept a nominal liability up to sixty or seventy thousand pounds. The contention of the Government of India throughout has been clear and consistent. It is to the effect that if India is to be represented at all at the London Exhibition of 1886, it should be in a manner worthy of the occasion. The decision just arrived at practically ensures that result.

THE AGRICULTURAL RESOURCES OF INDIA.—Sir James Caird, K.C.B., will take the chair at the meeting of the Indian Section of the Society of Art, on Friday, the 23rd inst., when Mr. E. C. Buck, Secretary to the Government of India in the Finance and Agricultural Department, is to read a paper on the agricultural resources of India.

SILVER.—Very little business was done in bars, or Mexican dollars during the week. On Thursday the market was so bare that little could be obtained at 50d. per ounce, which price has been retained during the week. The scarcity of Mexican dollars has enabled the quotation to advance to 48 13-16d. per ounce.

NOTICES, MEETINGS, DIVIDENDS, &c.

BANK OF BENGALE.—The dividend for the past half-year has been declared at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum, being the same as for the corresponding half of 1883. A telegram received by Messrs. Coutts and Co. states that the net profits for the half-year amount to Rs.10,60,000; of this, 9,00,000 are appropriated to the dividend, Rs.25,000 are set aside as a provision for bad and doubtful debts, and Rs.1,35,000 are carried forward. For the second half of 1883 the profits were Rs.14,40,000, Rs.5,00,000 were carried to the reserve, Rs.15,000 were set aside for bad and doubtful debts, and the sum of Rs.25,000 was carried forward.

OBITUARY.

THE LATE MR. J. W. POWER, OF THE BENGAL CIVIL SERVICE.—This gentleman was the younger of the two brothers Power who distinguished themselves at Mynpooree during the mutiny, as related in the histories of those days, and in Mr. Keene's "Fifty Seven." He was present at Cawnpore and at Calpee, and with General Wetherall in Oudh. Later on he was Judge of Ghazipur. He had recently retired, and his loss will be felt by a large circle of friends.

FROM Umballa comes the news that Colonel Bushman, C.B., gave up his command of the 9th Lancers, on becoming Assistant Adjutant-General, on the 13th ult., to Colonel Abadie. Colonel Abadie has proceeded on a year's leave to England, leaving Major the Hon. H. Legge in command.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

THE Calcutta Trades Association and the British India Association presented addresses to the Viceroy on Monday, to which his Excellency made suitable replies.

THE Duke and Duchess of Connaught arrived at Lahore on a visit on Saturday. Their Royal Highnesses left again on Tuesday for Umritsur, where they spent the day in sightseeing, leaving in the evening for Meerut.

SIR DONALD STEWART distributed the prizes at St. Xavier's College, Calcutta, on Thursday, and drew attention to Lord Ripon's laudable efforts to extend education among all classes.

THE Kapurthalla State has sent a deputation to Calcutta, headed by his Highness Kuar Hinnam (Singh Badahur, to present an address of welcome to the Earl of Dufferin.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, after consulting with Judge's Romesh Chunder Mitter and Norris, has been pleased to commute the sentence of death passed on Mr. Eddis's khidmaighar at Purneah to one of transportation for life.

THE Government of the North-Western Provinces has decided to introduce trial by jury tentatively in the districts of Allahabad, Benares and Lucknow.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, accompanied by his Personal Staff, arrived at Allahabad on Thursday evening, the 18th ult. from Lucknow.

MR. R. GRIFFITH, Director of Public Instruction in the North-Western Provinces, has taken six months' leave, preparatory to retiring, making over the duties of his office to Mr. E. White, C.S., his destined successor in the substantive appointment.

THE VICEROY'S LEVEE.—There was a great crowd at Lord Dufferin's first levée on the 21st ult. It is supposed that upwards of 2,000 gentlemen attended. Elaborate arrangements were made to prevent crushing. The consequence was that although the approach was rather tedious everything passed off in a most orderly fashion.

THE VICEROYAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—At the meeting of the Viceroyal Council on the 19th ult. the Viceroy said:—"Your Honour and Gentlemen,—I cannot take my seat for the first time at this Council Board without desiring to express to you the extreme satisfaction I feel in being assisted by so many distinguished persons in the Government of this great dependency. I feel that for a very long time I must be little more than a learner in the details of many of the important questions which will come up before us from time to time, but it is on that very account that it makes me so happy to think that I shall have for my colleagues and advisers men so thoroughly acquainted as yourselves with everything connected with the administration of India, and in whose persons both Her Majesty's Government and the public possess such confidence. I only hope that on my side I shall be able to do what is incumbent upon me in expediting public business to your satisfaction." The business of the day was then proceeded with.

THE CALCUTTA EXHIBITION.—The following resolution of the Government of India appears in the last Gazette of India:—"At the request of the Government of Bengal, the Government of India in the Revenue and Agricultural Department undertook to form a collection of the economic products of India for the Calcutta International Exhibition of 1883-84, and the list read in the preamble shows the character and scope of the collection, and the extent to which it may be held to represent the raw resources of the country. The Government of India desires to record its appreciation of the help afforded to it by the officers and private gentlemen named in the appended list, without whose cordial co-operation it would have been impossible in the very limited time allowed to have accomplished the work with any measure of success. More particularly the Government of India would desire to acknowledge the services of the following gentlemen:—1. Forest officers of Madras, Bengal, Burma, Assam, and the Central Provinces. 2. F. Duthie, Esq., Superintendent, Botanical Gardens, Saharanpur. 3. J. B. Fuller, Esq., Director of the Agricultural Department, Central Provinces. 4. Babu Lachman Prosad Barman, Superintendent, Government Farm, Cawnpore. 5. Babu Amba Datt Joshi, of Almora. 6. Babu Mahendra Nath Battacharjya, M.A., B.L., Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector of Bogra. 7. Dr. Mudin Sharif of Madras. 8. J. Murray, Esq., Curator, Municipal Museum, Karachi. 9. Dr. MacDonald, Curator, Victoria and Albert Museum, Bombay. 10. Babu Ajodhya Prosad, Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector, Shahjehanpur. 11. Major D. G. Pitcher, Assistant Director of the Department of Agriculture, N. W. Provinces and Oudh.

MOFUSSIL NOTES.

MR. MUSPRATT, A. D. S. Police, has been transferred to Sassamam.

THE station of Motihari, like sweet Auburn, is deserted, every one, with the exception of the Civil Surgeon, being out in camp.

MR. H. W. GORDON, Judge of Sarun, has lately visited Motihari and the sessions are over.

Mr. C. W. WORSLEY, Collector of Chumparun, has left Motihari, and Mr. Henry reigns in his stead.

On dit that instead of a breakfast at Sonapore on the occasion of the Gunduck bridge ceremony, a breakfast and ball will be given at Chupra as being more central.

PACKING is now finished throughout Chumparun, but very little Indigo of the good marks has been despatched to Calcutta, and the agents do not seem to be in a hurry to get it.

THE Maharajah of Durbungah with his usual generosity has subscribed liberally to the fund for sending an Indian team to Wimbledon next year.

WE regret to hear of the death of Mr. R. Boyd Lamb, of the Bannockburn Tea Estate, Darjeeling, which took place on the 8th ult.

It is contemplated giving up Dinapore as a military station on account of its unhealthiness, cholera being an annual institution. The troops will probably be moved to Bankipore. A new site for cantonments, south of the Bankipore Railway Station, is being surveyed with that object.

COLONEL RIVETT-CARNAC'S prize of a handsome shield with Rs. 125 in cash to the half-battalion Ghazipur Volunteers has been fired for by the Benares company, and Sergeant H. Decastro, the winner of last year's prize, is again leading with ninety-three points out of a possible 112. The Ghazipur, Jaunpur, Chunar, and Mirzapur companies have, we are told, yet to fire.

ASSAM is gradually been brought within the pale of civilisation. The Jorehaut Railway is now open, placing that station in direct communication with the Brahmaputra, 32½ miles distant. This line is designed to serve as a feeder to the great main line to the future, which is to pass through Sylhet and Cachar, to cross the North Cachar Hills, and, coming out at Golaghat, to follow the line of the Dhodarali to Dibrugarh, throwing out the same time a branch westward through Nowgong and Gowhattie to Dhubri and thus serving as a main artery of communication through the entire length of the valley of the Brahmaputra.

MADRAS.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS left Madras for Ooty on December 20th.

THE SHOOTING OF A COMRADE.—Private McCormack, of the 23rd Regiment, who was tried by court-martial for shooting Corporal Ford, has been sentenced to penal servitude for life.

MRS. GRANT DUFF presided at the distribution of prizes to the pupils of the Presentation Convent, Madras, on December 23rd, and in reply to a vote of thanks delivered a short address eulogising Roman Catholic priests and nuns for the excellent work they do in India.

THE FIRST PRINCE OF TRAVANCORE AT THE SCHOOL OF ARTS.—His Highness Keerala Varma, the Prince of Travancore, accompanied by his private secretary, and two other members of his suite, paid a visit to the School of Arts on December 17th, and was received by Lieutenant R. H. C. Tufnell, the Officiating Superintendent. Being an artist himself, His Highness was very much interested in what he saw.

ON the proposition in Council of H.E. the Commander-in-Chief of Madras it has been resolved by the Madras Government to appoint a committee of outsiders to inquire into the system of education at the Madras Military Female Orphan Asylum, and to report upon the disposal of the considerable grant of public money that is annually made to meet the expenses of the institution.

THE SCOTS FUSILIERS.—The Left Wing of the Scots Fusiliers Regiment left Madras to-day for Rangoon in the Indian Marine steamer Tenasserim. The band of the South Wales Borderer Regiment played the Wing out from their tents on the fort glacis to the pier. The Tenasserim is expected back at Madras early in January next to convey the 26th Regiment Native Infantry from Madras to Rangoon.

THREATENED SCARCITY AT TUMKUR.—A correspondent who recently visited Tumkur writes to a Bangalore paper that scarcity there to a somewhat severe extent seems inevitable. The raggi fields present a withered-up appearance, and the harvest of what there is must prove very nominal indeed. The magnificent large tank in Tumkur is about three parts empty, and matters are worse in the district itself. The adoption of relief measures, on a small scale at least, will probably be found necessary in Tumkur and other districts in the province where the crops have failed.

LORD RADSTOCK AT THE EVANGELISTIC HALL.—On December 20th a large number of educated Hindus assembled in the Evangelistic Hall to hear Lord Radstock. There was a sprinkling of European ladies and gentlemen; among those present being the Rev. W. Miller, M.A., C.I.E., Major Luxmoore, Rev. C. Cooper, M.A., Mr. C. M. Barrow, Mr. E. J. Firth, Rev. P. Rajagopaul, and Rev. A. Theophilus.

THE LATE DISASTER AT THE RED HILLS.—A correspondent writes:—Among the many houses that suffered by the breach of the Red Hills tank was one appertaining to the late Cumbum Ramasawmy, father of Etherajulu Dasudu. This bungalow, which was pukka built, cost Rs. 1,500, and was situated nearly opposite the bund, and consequently was the first to perish. The number of occupants at the time of the disaster was six, five having been washed away, one only surviving to tell the doleful tale. The estimated loss is calculated to be as follows:—House, Rs. 1,500; cattle, Rs. 200; "ready paddy," Rs. 400; straw, Rs. 100; utensils, Rs. 200; two carts, Rs. 100; the whole aggregating Rs. 2,500.—Mail.

BOMBAY.

CAPTAIN DOWLING, I.M., has been appointed Staff Officer in Calcutta, and left Bombay on December 22nd to take up his new duties.

DURING his stay in Bombay Lord Randolph Churchill will be the guest of H.E. the Governor.

MR. RAHIMTOOLA MAHOMED SAYANI, the Sheriff of Bombay, took charge of his office on December 20th.

THE Goa Commission will hold its first meeting on the 10th of January. The President, who was chosen by the drawing of lots, is Senhor Larcher, Judge of the High Court at Goa.

HIS HIGHNESS THE REGENT OF KOLHAPORE, accompanied by his attendants, left Bombay for his territory on December 20th. Seventeen guns were fired from the saluting battery on account of the departure of his Highness.

MR. A. L. P. LARKEN, Bombay Civil Service, has been placed on the retired list with effect from the 18th July. Mr. Larken was a comparatively junior officer, having joined the service in 1873. He was granted sick leave to Europe for two years and three months in July, 1881. For the performance of famine duty in the Bombay Presidency during the years 1867 and 1877 he was allowed eleven months and fourteen days as extra service for pension.

ENCOURAGING VOLUNTEERS.—We are glad to hear that Lieutenant Thompson, of the Poona Detachment, B.V.R. Corps, has offered another prize—this time a money prize of Rs. 25—to be competed for exclusively by the non-commissioned officers of the detachment. The competition will be made compulsory on all sergeants and corporals, and they will be required to display their intelligence in commanding a company, i.e., putting the men through their facings, manual firing, and bayonet exercises and other company movements. The non-commissioned officer who passes the most creditable examination in these duties will be awarded the prize.—Deccan Herald.

THE Pioneer referring to the demonstrations in Lord Ripon's honour in Bombay says:—On the 31st May, 1880, with little ceremony and less enthusiasm, Lord Ripon landed in India—his arrival was witnessed with languid curiosity by a few idlers who had collected round the Apollo Bunder. On Saturday he left it from the same spot amidst a farewell demonstration that must have been impressive even after all the demonstrations and farewells that have preceded it. A Viceroy does not really put off his public character until he leaves the country, and business pressed upon Lord Ripon to the last. On Friday he laid the foundation-stone of the Town Hall that is to be, afterwards visited St. Xavier's College, speaking at length on each occasion, and finished a Midlothian day at a public reception in the evening.

At the annual meeting of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce on December 22nd a very satisfactory report of the working of the Association during the past year was presented and adopted, together with a recommendation to make a grant of Rs. 5,000 to the widow of the late secretary (Mr. Gordon), whose loss the committee deplored. The chairman, the Hon. Forbes Adam, in reviewing the year's operations, expressed surprise that the native Press attached comparatively such little weight to the effect of railways in India's intended development. The Chamber must regard with pleasure the care that was being bestowed on wheat cultivation in the country. With enlarged sources of supply, improved cultivation, goods, and cheaper railway carriage they could confidently anticipate a gradually expanding trade. Exceptional causes made 1882-3 a specially good year; as exceptional causes have made this a bad one; but for the future they need not fear. In America, their chief rivals, the demand for local requirements and the cost of production must both augment. India, presumably, in that respect would not change. He also drew attention to America's great flour trade. America, by saving land and sea carriage on the bulkier article, has a pull over them that should be looked to. Why should India not export flour? There was lots of water power throughout the country. It only needs capital and enterprise to develop an industry that in magnitude he ventured to think might become a rival to their cotton manufactures.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL HAVELOCK, Commandant of Aurungabad and 1st Infantry Hyderabad Contingent, has been appointed lay trustee of Holy Trinity Church, vice Captain Selfe, R.A., left the station.

BURMA.

A GRAND wedding took place in Prome, on the 4th ult., between Count Calderarj and Miss Richardson, the daughter of the Assistant-Commissioner.

AKYAB, as well as Rangoon, is agitated at the prospect of a fancy ball to be held about the end of the month.

COLONEL LOWNDES, Inspector-General of Police, returned to Rangoon on the 18th ult. from his visit to the Arakan Division.

THE new Deputy Commissioner of Henzada was unanimously elected President of the Municipality at a meeting of the Commissioners on the 8th ult.

THE Mandalay High Priest arrived at Henzada on Dec. 7.

THE Municipal Elections at Bassein have resulted in the return of two new members for the European community, and the defeat of Messrs. Rees, Nichols, and D'Altaides. The old members sought re-election, and vigorous canvassing on their behalf was carried on by a party headed by Mr. Wilcox, the Municipal Engineer. The result of the voting, in regard to the successful candidates, was declared to be Mr. Carrapiett, 55 votes; Eugene Badelier, 41 votes; J. Daniell, 28 votes.

THE jail at Kyouktan, about twenty miles from Maulmain, near the marble quarries on the Ataran river, is nearly finished now. It will be able to accommodate some five hundred convicts, who will be employed as labourers in the quarries.

THE Maulmain Advertiser announces that the nominated members of the Maulmain Municipal Committee are to be Messrs. Richard, Executive Engineer, F. H. Dobson, Superintendent of the Jail, Herries, Superintendent of Police, and Colonel Prendergast, Assistant Commissioner.

THE Chetties of Rangoon are apparently becoming more enterprising year by year. They have now commenced trading with Penang. One Chetty received Rs. 30,000 on December 18th for the export of grain to that Settlement, while another has just shipped seventeen ponies to the same place.]

CEYLON.

THE prizes for shooting were presented by Lady MacLeod to the Ceylon Volunteers in the Racquet Court on the 18th, when over 200 Volunteers were on parade.

A LOCAL Company for the cultivation of tea in the Yatiantota district has been floated, with a capital of Rs. 10,000; it is called the Yatiantota Tea Company.

A MEETING of the Planters' Association of Kandy will be held early in January to take into consideration the contemplated Ordinance re prœdial products.

A FAREWELL breakfast has been given to Mr. R. E. Pineo on his departure from the Haputale district by his brother planters. Mr. Pineo is shortly quitting Ceylon for good, after a long residence in the island, the greater part of which has been spent in planting in Haputale.

THE Legislative Council has been busily engaged during the past week, both in Council and Sub-committee, two full sittings on the 17th and 19th of the former having taken place, and an additional day has been devoted to second and third readings of Bills yesterday. The subjects of largest public interest at these were the system under which our arrack revenue is collected, the Postal Amendment Ordinance, the bill for the Protection of Prædial Products, and incidentally the appointment of a Commissioner for the London Exhibition of 1886, and the Cart Registration scheme.

At the meeting of Council on Dec. 17, the Hon. R. A. Besanquet rose to ask what steps the Government proposes to take to provide for the colony being properly represented at the Colonial Exhibition to be held in London in 1886, and to move for any correspondence that may have taken place with the Home Government in reference thereto. He called attention to the importance of having the interests of the colony properly cared for on the occasion of the approaching exhibition in London, and said that a notice having appeared in the public prints of the appointment of a Royal Commission, there should be no time lost in taking steps for securing proper contributions for this island. He considered that if Sir W. Gregory could be induced to act on our behalf he would be a most fitting representative. The Hon. the Acting Colonial Secretary replied that there were no papers on the subject beyond a letter from Mr. Birch, who had very kindly offered to act as Commissioner for Ceylon. Sir Wm. Gregory being one of the Royal Commissioners could not be asked to act as our representative. The Hon. the Acting Colonial Secretary subsequently laid on the table a circular despatch received from the Secretary of State regarding the London Colonial Exhibition of 1886.

THE detachment 7th Bengal Cavalry on the march from Allahabad to Calcutta made a détour by crossing the Hooghly at Pultah Ghaut, and proceeded thence viâ Barrackpore, owing to sickness on the original line of route.

Miscellaneous.

THE RETIRING VICEROY.—The Bangabasi says:—"Lord Ripon is going away, going to leave us untimely, before his term is out. The joy of the herds of the selfish, anti-English, and Fringees whose ways and means are despicable, and who are devoted to the mischief of India, knows no bounds to-day. Nocturnal animals are ever glad at sunset. The day may be cloudy, with an obscure sun, but yet it is day; and when the day endeth vultures, jackals, and dogs, which haunt cremation ghats and live on rotten flesh, leap with joy at the prospect of their Thyestean banquet. The day may be succeeded by a beautiful night with a glorious full-moon; but it is still night, for night follows day, whether moonlit or dark. Hence are the nocturnal creatures so glad, so elated, so full of high hopes."

WELCOME TO THE VICEROY.—The Surabhi says:—"Come Dufferin, India greets thee with a joyful heart. She will forget her Ripon's loss, if you walk in his footsteps and prove yourself to be his worthy successor. You have made fair promises, and it remains only to be seen that you are anxious to be true to them. You have heard, and we hope you will find it too true, that your countrymen in India are extremely narrow-minded, full of false ideas about political rights, anxious to establish absolute sway over the conquered, always opposing their political progress. Whenever you step forth to do good in India, the Anglo-Indians will cry out that they are going to be ruined. The glaring defects in the system of administration, laws, and proceeding bristling with injustice and partiality that are in vogue in the country will perhaps astound you. To preserve peace cannot be the duty of the Indian Viceroy, for we are a law-abiding people. Administrative reform is his great task."

The personal staff of His Excellency the Viceroy, as it exists at present, is as follows:—Private Secretary, Mr. Mackenzie Wallace; Military Secretary, Major Lord William Beresford, V.C.; Aides-de-camp:—Major H. Cooper, North Lancashire Regiment; Lieut. the Hon. C. Harbord, Scots Guards; Lieut. Lord Herbrand A. Russell, Grenadier Guards; Lieut. A. Balfour, 1st Highland Light Infantry; Lieut. C. Burn, 8th Hussars; and Lieut. Leonard Gordon, King's Own Borderers (extra); Subadar Major Nutha Sing, Sirdar Bahadoor; and Subadar Major Bulbudder Sing, Naique Bahadoor. Surgeon A. W. D. Leahy, of the 33rd Allahabad N.I., has been temporarily appointed to act as Surgeon to His Excellency.

LORD RIPON'S ADVICE TO THE NATIVE PRESS.—The Indian Chronicle (Bankipore) says:—"As there cannot be even the smallest suspicion of Lord Ripon's unfriendliness to the Native Press, his advice is all the more valuable and sincere, and its wisdom and truth and the necessity of its adoption must impress themselves on the mind of every native of India who has or may have hereafter the charge of a newspaper. We have ourselves more than once pointed out that it is a mistake on our part to put ourselves in perpetual opposition to the Government of the country, and to regard every thought or act of our rulers from the standpoint of an adverse critic. In the special circumstances of India it is highly desirable that the Native Press should understand the Government, and separating men from measures and good measures from bad, pass its criticism of praise or censure, as the case might be, fearlessly yet temperately. We are obliged to Lord Ripon for his advice."

A GALLANT rescue of two drowning men by a lad of eighteen is reported from Roorkee. It seems that a few days ago, while the guns of 9-1 battery R.A. were being taken over the Ganges canal on a pontoon bridge three of the gunners were accidentally knocked into the water. Two of them clung to the ropes of the pontoons, and struggled out in a few minutes, none the worse for their ducking. The third, however, was swept by the canal current down stream. Lieutenant-Colonel Hart, V.C., R.E., who was standing near the bank at the time, plunged in at once to the rescue, but being encumbered with heavy boots and uniform, sank at once. A gentleman, named Macleod, a resident of the station, next went to the rescue; and, after an immense amount of exertion, succeeded in reaching and supporting not only Colonel Hart, but the gunner as well, who had first fallen in. Eventually a life-buoy was thrown to Mr. Macleod's aid, and a native sepoys assisted in keeping Colonel Hart's head above water. Neither Mr. Macleod nor the gunner appeared to be any the worse for their prolonged immersion, but Colonel Hart was utterly exhausted. This officer has on two previous occasions distinguished himself by saving human life from drowning.

THE EXTERNAL AND INTERNAL LAND TRADE OF SCINDE.—A report prepared in the office of the Collector of Customs at Kurrachee, and just received from India, shows the figures relating to the whole of the land trade of the province of Scinde for the official year 1883-4. The external traffic, that is to say with Beloochistan and Afghanistan, shows an increase over the previous year of Rs.18,46,918; and it is noteworthy that the whole of this increase is under the head of rail-borne traffic. Trade borne by road is practically stationary, for the increase in imports is more than counterbalanced by the decrease in exports. Again, the increase occurs entirely under the head of trade with Beloochistan for that with Afghanistan shows a falling off in most of its branches. Much of the trade has arisen through the increasing importance of Quetta as a military station, but it is satisfactory to learn that "the Afghans are generally in favour of strong Europe made boots." The second portions of this report deals with the internal trade, or that with the States and Districts which are outside Scinde but within the British borders. Of these the principal are Guzerat, Jesalmir, Cutch, and Bahawalpore. This portion of the commerce of Scinde has increased to the extent of Rs.1,17,045. Most of the States show a falling off, but the improvement in the case of Cutch is so marked as to more than compensate for the deficiency in all the other States. It is probable that the explanation of the decline in their trade, and particularly in the case of Guzerat, is to be found in the internal condition of these States. Bad seasons and great dearth are stated to have exercised an adverse influence on trade, but it is singular that Cutch, which suffered equally with the rest, does not seem to have been affected at all, for its trade developed in the twelve months under review by not less than one-third of the amount of the preceding year.

THE ROORKEE RESOLUTION.

The rules regulating the admission of students to the Indian engineering colleges, and the manner in which appointments in the engineering branch of the Public Works Department may be obtained by the students of these colleges are contained in the resolutions of the Government of India, in the Public Works Department of Nov. 11, 1882, and Feb. 14, 1883. These resolutions modified the previously existing rules in several respects, and notably in giving to students of pure Indian descent a preference over all other students for guaranteed appointments in the Public Works Department. As long ago as 1876 it had been remarked by the Secretary of State that very few persons of pure Indian origin succeeded in obtaining appointments in the public service through the engineering class of the Thomason College, and between that time and the year 1882 he had repeatedly urged on the Government of India the advisability of giving to pure natives a preferential claim to such appointments. The Government of India, while recognising the desirableness of attracting natives of India to the Engineer Department, hesitated to give an exclusive preference to one class of natives of India as defined by Statute, and the discussions on this point ranged over a considerable period. Ultimately the Governor-General in Council acquiesced in the proposals of the Secretary of State, being influenced mainly by the consideration that owing to reductions in the Public Works Department the numbers of appointments available for pupils of the Indian colleges had become so small that in no other way could the object in view be attained. The number of appointments guaranteed to the four Indian colleges was no more than six for the year 1885 and seven for 1886, and under these circumstances almost the only way of facilitating the candidature of pure natives seemed to be to give them a preference over other students. Shortly after the issue of the resolutions in question memorials were received from various associations of domiciled European and Eurasians in India, remonstrating against the disadvantage at which persons of their class were placed by the new rules. These memorials were forwarded to the Secretary of State with the despatch from the Government of India of July 28, 1883, in which the Governor-General in Council remarked that, although, looking to the small number of appointments involved, the memorialists appear to exaggerate somewhat the practical effect of the rules upon their interests, he could not but think that "they had a certain solid foundation for their dissatisfaction, and that their representations deserved attention." The Governor-General in Council accordingly recommended that arrangements should be made in regard to the recruiting of the Public Works Department, which would have the effect of increasing the number of appointments available for the Indian colleges to eleven, and that with this extension of the field of employment the area of competition might again be widened so as to include all persons coming under the statutory definition of natives of India. Considerable correspondence has since taken place upon various points of detail in this scheme, and the Secretary of State has now decided that the annual recruitment from the Indian colleges shall be fixed at nine. Although somewhat smaller than what they had recommended, the Government of India believe that this increase in the number of appointments, taken in connection with the changes made in other respects in the rules of admission to the college, renders it unnecessary to maintain a preference in favour of students of pure Indian descent, and that the object with which that preference was given may now be sufficiently attained without it. In future, therefore, all students coming under the statutory definition of natives of India will be eligible to compete for the guaranteed appointments in the Public Works Department.

The appointments will, for the present, be allotted as follows:—

To Thomason College, Rurki	4 and 5 alternately
Seepore College	2 and 1 "
Madras Civil Engineering College	1 and 3 "
Poona College of Science	2 "

THE AUTHORS OF THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL AS PHILANTHROPISTS.

THE disgraceful oppression of the ryots in the estates of the Bengal Government in Midnapore, as disclosed in the appeal case just decided against the Government in the Calcutta High Court, is a sad commentary on the sincerity of the chief promoters of this wretched Tenancy Bill. Mr. Macdonnell, the present Secretary to the Bengal Government, and Mr. Mackenzie, the late Secretary to that Government (now Home Secretary to the Government of India), may fairly claim to share with Mr. Ilbert the paternity of the Bengal Tenancy Bill; and during the time that they have been in the Bengal Secretariat, these horrible Settlement operations, of which the Times' telegrams tells us this week, have been going on in Midnapore, or their results have been under review in the superior Courts. In the case of no less than 75,000 tenants of the Bengal Government in Midnapore, the enhancements of rents have been enforced under a special Bengal Act, passed pro hac vice; and the enhancements have been, on the average all round, 48 per cent., while some enhancements have reached the outrageous amount of 120 per cent. And, further, the Bengal Government—with Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Macdonnell successively as its Secretaries—have pursued these unhappy ryots from court to court, until at last the poverty of all, except a few, forced them to give up their resistance of despair, and to submit to the extortionate demands of Mr. Mackenzie and his colleagues. Fortunately for the cause of humanity, about 100 out of the 75,000 managed to carry their case up to the High Court; and now we learn that the extortion has been “illegal ab initio,” that the notice of assessment was “inaccurate and unfair to the ryots!” and that the Settlement officer is “blamed for having dealt with the ryots en bloc, instead of considering the individual cases!” Mr. Macdonnell's Government is “ordered to pay the costs of the appeal”—is it possible that he could have suggested that his unhappy victims should pay those costs?—and the High Court has “deferred drawing up the decree for one month, in order to give the Government an opportunity of doing what was right, instead of compelling the ryots to carry this ruinous litigation further!”

Of course we do not mean to assert that Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Macdonnell were personally responsible for this most cruel business: for, until further details reach this country, it is impossible exactly to assign such personal responsibility to any one. But this much is absolutely certain, that, merely from their position as Secretaries to the Bengal Government, they must have been fully cognizant of all that was going on in Midnapore; and so, too, in all probability was Mr. Ilbert. And all the time, these gentlemen have been “shedding the bitter tear”—like the walrus and the carpenter weeping over the fate of the oysters they were devouring—over the wickedness of the zemindars in enhancing their ryots' rents, and over the sorrows of “the poor ryots”! They have sat down quickly and written out this Bengal Tenancy Bill, ordaining that no zemindar shall enhance any ryot's rent, except with the sanction of the civil officers, by ridiculously small instalments at intervals of long years; and then, “wiping their streaming eyes,” they have cheerfully read in the reports of their subordinates how that 120 per cent. has been suddenly clapped on to the Government rental of some of the unhappy Midnapore ryots! A more shameless inconsistency has never been made public. And, further, while guilty of this terrible oppression in the Government's own estates, they cynically exempt all Government estates from the operation of their pseudo-philanthropic Bill!—and resolutely refuse to grant to the justly indignant zemindars any public inquiry by which the latter may be enabled to prove that the charges against the Bengal zemindars as a body are utterly false and groundless.

We shall return to the consideration of this shocking affair before long. Meanwhile we heartily commend it to the interest of Lord Stanley of Alderley and other peers and members of Parliament, who ought to insist on a Parliamentary investigation of the whole business.

THE DUKE OF ARGYLL ON THE PRINCIPLES OF THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

ONE of the most masterly expositions of the laws of political economy that ought to regulate any legislative interference in the relations between landlord and tenant is contained in a treatise by the Duke of Argyll, published by the Cobden Club in 1877. His Grace's able monograph is entitled an “Essay on the Commercial Principles applicable to Contracts for the Hire of Land.” Written by a Liberal ex-Secretary of State for India, and brought out under the auspices of an ultra-Liberal Club, its authority on the Indian land question can hardly be denied by a Liberal Government; and we regard this fact as even more important at the present juncture than the remarkable intrinsic merit of the work—for experience teaches that the great Liberal party will accept as gospel, from the lips of a supporter of Mr. Gladstone's Ministry, arguments which they would scout as heresy if put forward by an unspeakable Tory. It may be hoped that the Government will listen to words of wisdom and warning from a quondam colleague, which otherwise would obtain no chance of a hearing, even if uttered by the tongues of men and of angels.

The whole of the Duke's Essay is one crushing exposure of the cynical inconsistency of a faction that can preach up Free-trade, or even a miserable simulacrum of Free-trade, in matters where Protection is supposed to be for the benefit of Her Majesty's subjects against foreigners, and that can, in the same breath, advocate the most extreme and unwarrantable interference of the State in contracts between various classes of Her Majesty's subjects—an interference, too, that is admitted by all to be injurious to one side, and that is believed by many to be injurious to both sides! The relations between landlords and tenants in Ireland furnish, of course, the immediate text for his Grace's arguments; but the principles which he sets forth and illustrates with so much power are of universal application. And, moreover, where modifications may be produced by the special circumstances of a particular case, it must be admitted by every honest observer that in Bengal it is impossible to allege those excuses for the breach of the laws of political economy that were successfully alleged in the case of Ireland.

We earnestly hope that this admirable publication of the Cobden Club will be carefully studied, if it has not already been studied, by everyone who takes any interest in the one great question on which depends all the future peace and prosperity of Bengal. It is impossible for us in this place to do more than indicate the general bearing of the treatise on the vital question which now agitates our most thriving Indian province. "Prices are to be artificially cheapened," says the Duke, at page 65, "to the present holders only, in order that they may be artificially aggravated to all holders coming after them. Freedom of trade in the hire of farms is to be jealously guarded where it tells in favour of those now in possession, and to be as jealously excluded where it tells against them. It is assumed that the general interests of the community are bound up in their holding on the lowest terms possible; and in everybody else, not now belonging to the fraternity, paying as high a premium as possible for the privilege of entering it."

We would commend to Mr. Ilbert—when he thrusts down our throats the very visionary "rights" which he believes to have appertained to the Bengal ryots in the old anarchical times before 1793—a careful perusal of the Duke of Argyll's introduction. Rights, the Duke of Argyll points out, "are what they are defined to be, not by the antiquarian, but by the judge." And elsewhere he aptly remarks, "We should not think of arguing on proposed amendments of the law of marriage, by going back to the times when women, we are told, were objects of the chase, and when marriage is said to have consisted in 'capture.'"

For nearly every one of the mischievous and iniquitous provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Bill, the student of the Duke of Argyll's treatise will find illustrations as felicitous as the one we have here quoted, to prove the short-sighted folly of the measure. "Every new right," says the Duke, "given to the existing tenants will simply be sold by them, when convenient, to the very highest bidders. The whole benefit will be discounted in the market by the fortunate individuals who are occupiers when these new rights are first conferred. All future occupiers will have to pay the most extravagant price for occupation which the state of the market and the pressure of competition may determine. In short, such an act of attainder against the present owners would only substitute in their stead a new set of owners far more exacting, because far more necessitous." It would be difficult to set forth in clearer language the disastrous effect on the condition both of landlord and of tenant of Mr. Ilbert's Bill, as well as the ridiculous absurdity of attempting to regulate prices in Bengal by an Act of the Viceroy's Legislative Council.

We cannot conclude this article better than by quoting the Duke of Argyll's epigrammatic summary of the "Three F's":—

The demand for what is called "fair rents" is a demand that prices shall be cheapened by Act of Parliament in favour of the particular individuals who now hold farms in Ireland. The demand for "fixity of tenure" is a demand that all other Irishmen shall be prohibited from dealing with owners for these coveted possessions. The demand for the right of "free sale" by the present holders is a demand that no part of those parliamentary privileges shall be passed on to any farmers coming after them.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

REVIEW OF THE RICE TRADE FOR 1884.—Messrs. Fraser and Co., of Mincing-lane, have just issued their annual return of the Rice Trade for the past year, which was very unsatisfactory to all concerned. They say:—"To review the rice trade for the past year is but to recount an almost unbroken record of unsatisfactory business from its opening to its close. In common with other articles of produce the value of rice deteriorated to such an extent that it finally reached the lowest point ever known in the history of the trade, and, with the exception of some slight fluctuations in the early part of the season, this point was arrived at by a gradual but persistent decline. At one time, it is true, it was thought that the short supply, which was pretty general in Burmah, would tend in some measure to counteract the effects of the general commercial depression, but almost before this expectation had had time to develop itself, a conviction began to gain ground that any deficiency in the exports from Burmah would be more than counterbalanced by the projected shipment from Saigon, Siam, and Japan.

BURMAH RICE.—In the matter of quality Moulmein was decidedly the best of the past season's crop, Bassein next, and Rangoon third; Ngatsein being again much mixed, Necransie last. The great proportion of the arrivals turning out heavily-heated and in bad condition. The shipment to Europe from the four parts for the years 1883-4 were as follows:—

Akyab.	Rangoon.	Bassein.	Moulmein.	Total.
Tons.	Tons.	Tons.	Tons.	Tons.
1884.....87,400 ...	363,500 ...	117,800 ...	37,000 ...	605,700
1883 ... 165,600 ...	370,200 ...	154,200 ...	42,300 ...	732,300

BENGAL RICE.—The quality may be described as fair in most cases. Exports from Calcutta, Bombay, and Chittagong to Europe:—

46,770 tons.	148,434 tons.

MADRAS RICE.—Shipments, which were all directed to London, amount to 11,327 tons, against 21,430 tons in 1883, and 8,511 tons in 1882.

INDIAN TEA.—Messrs. G. White and Co. report as follows on the Tea Market, from the 1st to the 8th inst.:—The sales have been heavy, consisting of 24,900 packages, and have passed with considerable irregularity. The bulk is still poor in quality, and prices are consequently depressed, but anything with special point is comparatively scarce, and the few lots have commanded high rates notably tippy Pekoes and Broken Pekoes. The deliveries of Indian and Ceylon for the past month are satisfactory, being 5,416,000 lbs. against 4,806,000 lbs. for Dec. 1883, whilst for the six months they are 3,232,000 lbs. (or at the rate of about 6½ millions per annum) in excess of the same period last year. Ceylon.—There has been a fair selection on offer, but a large proportion of small breaks, which were more or less neglected. An invoice from the Rookwood estate possessing fine flavour, met with attention and commanded full prices. The quality of other marks was as a rule disappointing and in sympathy with Indian growths; common descriptions have sold in favour of buyers.

BENGAL TENANCY BILL.—The Liberal of the 7th instant asks why the Government does not try the Tenancy Bill as an experiment, first of all, in its own Khas Mehal estates. We suggested this at a very early stage of our references to the Bill, but the measure is radically bad, and admits of no adoption anywhere with advantage. It proceeds upon wrong lines altogether, having been drafted under a delusion as to the facts with which it professes to deal. The Khas Mehal estates are no more rack-rented than the zemindars', while the public interests peremptorily forbid the settlement of the assessments with any view to permanency, at such rates as have hitherto obtained. The land revenue is the one main source of the national income, and it is plainly in its infancy, when we view the rapid extension of the export trade, and the great works of improvement that are being made on the land. The people owe it entirely to ourselves, that the madness of a universal Permanent Settlement was abandoned in 1866; and this Tenancy Bill, under all its forms, is practically but a new attempt to fix the land revenue in perpetuity, while the land itself is at its lowest value, and the State committed to an indefinite and enormous expenditure thereon. The Bill should be withdrawn, for it does not admit of being amended into proper form. —Statesman.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1885.

Notes of the Week.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, January 2nd; Madras and Allahabad, December 31st; Calcutta, December 30th; Ceylon, December 28th; Burma, December 26th.

ACCORDING to the telegram of the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, the Indian Press strongly urges the Government "to lose no time in sending to Herat engineer officers to strengthen the defences, so as to render it capable of resisting a long siege." If the home Government alone were concerned, the advice to "lose no time" about doing anything at all would sound like a mockery; for the one point in which Mr. Gladstone's Government is absolutely unrivalled is their faculty for "losing time" in everything, until it is too late. To quote Lord Granville's own words, they never have "any idea" that there is any necessity for action until the possibility of effective action is already gone. But we cannot help hoping that Lord Dufferin may be strong enough to force this action on his colleagues at home, and also that his Excellency may be supported by Lord Kimberley and the India Office. And if Mr. Gladstone will only give Lord Dufferin a free hand, we are very confident that Herat will be strengthened before it is "too late."

THE Times correspondent points out that at present the only way by which a British merchant can obtain access to our Tibetan neighbours' territory for British goods is by declaring himself a Russian subject! This is not quite Lord Palmerston's rendering of Civis Romanus Sum; but then Mr. Gladstone is not Lord Palmerston.

WE regret to learn that a vigorous attempt is being made to utilise the natural and proper feelings of respect, on the part of leading Liberal politicians, for a returned Liberal Viceroy, for the purpose of making a demonstration to coerce Lord Dufferin into passing the Bengal Tenancy Bill. It is rumoured that Mr. Chamberlain, at the banquet to be given to Lord Ripon by the National Liberal Club, will follow up his famous "natural rights" and "three F's" speeches by an intimation to Lord Dufferin that he must make short work of the "unearned increment" in Bengal. We deal with this very serious matter in our leading columns to-day. Mr. Chamberlain is undoubtedly a dangerous man to resist. But we are much mistaken if Lord Dufferin would not rather resign than submit to such dictation; and the President of the Board of Trade has far too much regard for place to risk the stability of the Government by guerre à outrance against such a man.

The Times on Saturday gave a sly side-glance at these rumours in the following demure little paragraph:—

The Marquis and Marchioness of Ripon are expected to arrive at their house in Carlton-gardens on or about the 22nd inst. They intend to take a few hours' rest in Paris en route from Marseilles. Mr. John Bright, M.P., has accepted the invitation of the National Liberal Club to the banquet to Lord Ripon. In a letter to the secretary (Mr. William Digby, C.I.E.) he says:—"I highly appreciate the services of Lord Ripon in India, and shall willingly join with his friends in showing our estimate of his conduct in the lofty position of Governor General of India." Mr. Childers, M.P., and Mr. Chamberlain, M.P., will also be present. The Marquis of Ripon has followed up his telegram of acceptance sent from Aden by a letter, in which he says:—"But I cannot rest content with a brief telegram as the only expression of my gratitude to the club for their invitation, and I therefore trouble you with this letter and beg you to assure the committee of the club how sensible I am of their intention to give me this welcome upon my return from India. I esteem very highly such a proof of their approval from a body so representative of the Liberal party."

WITH reference to the oppression of the Mugramoot ryots by the Bengal Government—the personal responsibility for which we declined last week, in our leading article on the subject, to attach to any one official—we have received a communication from a valued correspondent, perfectly acquainted with all the circumstances, which seems to show that the blame lies at the door of Sir George Campbell. It will be seen, however, that this fact by no means invalidates the contention of our article—that Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Macdonnell, having been the Bengal Secretaries during the whole period of these shameful oppressions, appear with very bad grace as the sole prominent allies of Mr. Ilbert in his pastime of land-lord-hunting. The communication runs as follows:—

The Government of Bengal has got into great discredit through the decision of the Calcutta High Court in the Mugramoot settlement case, which is declared to be illegal and void ab initio. It is, however, desirable that it should be known that the whole discredit of these proceedings is to be traced back to Sir George Campbell, who, as the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, insisted on having the estate resettled according to his own novel views and fantastic principles. The proprietors of the estate voluntarily offered an increase of about 20 per cent. on the Revenue demand of the previous temporary settlement, but this offer was scouted by Sir George; whilst the Divisional Commissioner, Mr. Buckland, was censured for having submitted such an offer. The proprietors were dispossessed of their estate; and for the last ten years or more the unfortunate ryots have been subjected not only to the harassment of the operations of the settlement officer and all his myrmidons, but their rents have been collected by what is known as khas management, which is usually oppressive and unsuccessful. Whilst the amount of rent has been under dispute it has been difficult to get any rents at all paid regularly, and the annual loss to Government is to be measured by many thousands of rupees, amounting in a series of years to lakhs of rupees, though the Government has all the time been bound to pay the malikana due to the dispossessed proprietors. Arbitrary legislation was carried through the Bengal Council in order to support the unconstitutional and injudicious measures projected by Sir George Campbell. And now the whole proceedings end in disgrace and discredit to Government, as the High Court has held that they are illegal and void ab initio. This is one of the blessings for which Bengal has to be grateful for the appointment of a wild theorist like Sir G. Campbell to be its Lieutenant-Governor.

WE commented last week on the absurdity committed by Lord Ripon, in giving two of this year's decorations to two French Professors at Nancy (however meritorious these gentlemen may be), while so many highly deserving civil and military officers of the Indian Government, English and Indian, have every year to retire undecorated. Cosmopolitanism of this sort may be all we have to expect from "the friends of every country but their own;" but it is hard on the Indian Services, and we now find a remarkable confirmation of our views in an article which we reproduce elsewhere from the Pioneer. Most readers will, we imagine, be surprised to find what an exceedingly small percentage of even the most distinguished Indian officers ever attain to one of these marks of Royal favour, so much valued by all loyal subjects. We cannot but hope that the "Birthday Gazette" will make some amends for the mistakes made in the Gazette of "Empress-day."

WHILST the Civil and Military Gazette of Lahore—undoubtedly the most well-informed journal on Indian frontier affairs—tells us that the "stealthy and circuitous route" of our Afghan Boundary Commission is the subject of endless laughter and ridicule in the Afghan bazars; the silly sycophant who misrepresents the Times on that Commission continues to declare that the march of the Commission, because it has not (as yet) been actually and physically kicked, is "a triumph of Lord Ripon's Afghan policy!" It is satisfactory to observe that the last letter of this funny gentleman has been carefully secreted, by the discretion of the Times authorities, in the innermost corner of the advertisement sheet.

"THE march," he says, "as a march has been very remarkable; and from a political point of view it is distinctly a triumph for Lord Ripon's policy." With the first part of this statement most of our readers will agree, when they are informed by this sagacious correspondent—

The Intelligence Department has doubtless been able to collect much valuable strategical information, at any rate as far as Lash

Jowain. Beyond that, until we reached Herat, the road was not one which any sane general would think of using. Bounded on the left by the desert, it is utterly destitute of supplies and in many places of water. All supplies must come from the Furrah and Subzawar districts which flank it on the right; but if these districts were friendly, the direct road through them to Herat, which is much shorter and abounds in water and supplies, would, of course, be taken. If Furrah and Subzawar were hostile, no sane general, I repeat, would dream of marching his force over the desert traversed by us. Nor could a railway be constructed along this route. If ever a railway is made to the Helmund, and thence to Herat, it will run from, say, Rudbar, straight across the desert to Khash and Furrah.

WE quite agree with the correspondent, that these considerations are amply sufficient to demonstrate the "remarkable" character of the route selected by Lord Ripon for this remarkable march "as a march"! But what proof does he offer of the second statement, that the march is "distinctly a triumph for Lord Ripon's policy"? We will quote his very words—

Few, if any, know that Abdurrahman Khan is the most powerful ruler Afghanistan has known for many years. His authority is absolute and unquestioned, and, so long as his vigour of mind and body lasts, no fear need be entertained as to his ability to preserve the peace and tranquillity of any frontier which is likely to be given to him. I have already explained how the prejudices of the Afghan people against us are melting away as the spectre—no, the reality—of Russian annexation advances closer to Herat, and now they begin to look to us as their guardians and protectors. In these facts there is, I think, a justification of the late Viceroy's Afghan policy.

WHAT facts? Does the correspondent mean the fact that, whilst Abdurrahman's "authority is absolute and unquestioned," still Lord Ripon was afraid to send the expedition by "the direct road to Herat"—described in the first extract given above—through the Furrah and Subzawar districts, "which is much shorter, and abounds in water and supplies"—and which would "of course be taken if these districts were friendly"? Does he mean the fact that the Commission was sent round, amid the derision of Afghanistan, by a road "bounded on the left by the desert, utterly destitute of supplies, and in many places of water"? Or does he mean the fact of "the spectre—no, the reality—of Russian annexation advancing closer to Herat"? These are the only "facts" he mentions; and to the unsophisticated mind they seem far more suggestive of the "stealthy and circuitous route" mentioned by the Afghan correspondent of the Civil and Military Gazette as the subject of laughter in Kabul, than of any "triumph" of any policy—even of that "square root of a negative quantity," Lord Ripon's Afghan policy.

As a charming illustration of this amazing statement about the "triumph" achieved by Lord Ripon's unhappy Commission, we cannot help quoting another excerpt from this same letter, an excerpt proving that "truth is great," and will leak out, even in spite of an earnest desire to whitewash Lord Ripon and earn a C.I.E. :—

Many rumours are rife regarding Russian activity on the frontier. It is said that Pul-i-Khatun is occupied, and Panjadesh is threatened by Russian troops, although both places are indisputably Afghan territory, and must remain so unless the Commission is prepared to sacrifice everything to Russia. If it be true that the Russian Commissioners are not to meet us until the spring, the idea that she has in reality no intention of arriving at a peaceful solution of the question will be more than ever firmly planted in the Afghan mind. Certainly it will be difficult for us to account for the delay and apparent want of respect to the British Commissioner. We can scarcely give the advance of the season and the probable severity of an early winter as the reason. If the inhabitants of Hindostan can march and work as our men and followers march and work, and as for some time longer I hope they will continue to march and work, surely the hardy sons of Russia cannot plead that the cold is beyond their endurance. However, we need not grumble, for, as I hope to show in a later letter, the delay is entirely to our advantage. Whether the rumours as to the aggressive action of Russia are or are not true, we owe to them the marked change in the demeanour of the Afghan officials towards us. The Amir is seriously alarmed, and his feelings, as usual, react on his officials. They see their country seriously menaced; they know that England only can save them, and in our presence here they recognise the fact—is it a fact or a mirage?—that England means to save them.

Please to observe that the "want of respect to the British Commissioner," involved in the Russian Commissioner keeping him kicking his heels about, is only called by this gentleman an "apparent want of respect!" But there are limits, after all, to the complaisance of the worthy correspondent towards Russia; and he appears to have a sort of an inkling that "the triumph of Lord Ripon's policy" may not improbably lead us to another surrender to Russia, for he adds :—

She has incurred risks and responsibilities which we would not have undertaken; so let us not grudge to her the triumph she has achieved and the doubtful material advantages which may follow it. But we should be just as well as generous, and therefore should not be tempted, in the frenzy of hysterical sentimentalism, to give Russia what belongs to Afghanistan. I would remind the more reasonable of cosmopolitan politicians—I mean those who love their country almost as much as any other—that there is no slavery in Afghanistan to be abolished; that as regards despotic rule, the advance of civilisation, &c.—well, Russia will have for a long time to come a wide field for her missionary zeal in these directions in her own Central Asian possessions.

WE, Army and Navy Gazette, believe that a reorganisation of the Royal Artillery commands in India will shortly take place. There will probably be only six Colonels' commands altogether, each of which will have a Brigade-Major. Each Lieutenant-Colonel in command of a Brigade will have an Adjutant.

WE have it on the authority of the Army and Navy Gazette that the question of increase of pay for paymasters serving in India, which has been under discussion between the India Office and the authorities in that country for eighteen months, has at last been decided. The new rates, we have reason to believe, will be as follows :—On appointment, Rs. 480 a month; after five years' service in the Department, Rs. 510 a month; after ten years' service in the Department, Rs. 700 a month. The increase on the present rates during the first ten years is a mere bagatelle, some four rupees a month; but after ten years' service, Rs. 163 a month: and it is anticipated that these new rates will come into force shortly.

THE Times of India has the following obituary till the departure of the mail, January 2 :—

The Maharana Sajjan Sinha, of Oodeypore; the Maharani of Dewas, consort of H.H. the Puar Narain Rao Dada Saheb, junior Prince of Dewas.

THE CEYLON COMMISSIONER TO THE COLONIAL EXHIBITION.—If the Government cannot without marked discourtesy to Mr. Birch refuse the offer of his services as our Commissioner, it is certainly imperative that an Assistant Commissioner should be appointed—one who is intimately acquainted with the commercial, agricultural, and industrial life of the island. If an ornamental person is actually a necessity—which we do not for a moment admit—we suppose the Hon. Mr. Birch is capable of fulfilling the slender requirements of such a position as well as most men, and the K.C.M.G.-ship which the post of Commissioner is said to carry with it will, no doubt, be looked upon by him as guerdon sufficient for the effulgence of smiles which he will be called upon to shed around him. That, however, is a matter between Mr. Birch and the home authorities, but it is imperative that the colony's interests should be placed in able hands, and, this being so, someone else must be appointed, nominally to assist, really to direct, the ornamental personage above alluded to. For this purpose we do not think a better or more fitting representative can well be found than Mr. Wall, and we trust that Government will see their way to making this appointment. Another matter should not be lost sight of, and that is the formation of a local Committee to supervise the arrangements, make collections of all articles to be exhibited, and to properly start the matter. This should not be long delayed if Ceylon is to take its proper place amongst the colonies of Great Britain. It must not be forgotten that, whatever may be the value of such Exhibitions as those of Paris in 1878, Melbourne in 1880, or Calcutta in 1883, in all of which Ceylon took a part, there can be no comparison when the forthcoming Colonial Exhibition in London is in question. London is as much the centre of the Colonial Empire of England as it is of Great Britain, and it behoves us to make as good a show there as we possibly can. The great metropolis is as yet our only, and will ever be our largest, market for tea; from thence has always come, and will always come, the capital invested in the colony; and it is of the most extreme importance that at this time, when other colonies are competing with us at all points, that we should not let them take a better place than that which we have always assigned to ourselves—nulli secundus.—Ceylon Times.

Telegraphic Intelligence.

The following extra telegrams have been received from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Jan. 13:—

"A Lahore newspaper states that the Russian agents in Cabul are two military officers named Ibrahimoff and Musminesky.

"The Indian Government has received no confirmation of the report telegraphed from England that Russia intends to withdraw from the Afghan Frontier Commission."

"A Chinese envoy has arrived at Khatmandoo on a complimentary mission, bringing presents to the King of Nepal.

"Mr. Storrs Turner's letter on Tibetan trade which appeared in the Times in December last has attracted some attention in India. He clearly misapprehends the views of the promoters of that trade. There is no intention of acting without the consent of the Chinese Government, which has possessed undoubted suzerainty on both Tibet and Nepal since 1792."

The following is the usual weekly telegram from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Jan. 18:—

"An important addition has been made to the Indian railway system by opening the Bengal and North-Western line. The ceremony took place on Tuesday at Myrwa, a place on the boundary of the two provinces. Both Lieutenant-Governors were present. After each had driven a silver spike into the rails, thus formally completing the line, the party returned to Schwan, where the directors entertained them at breakfast. Several speeches were made, the most interesting being that of Mr. Rivers Thompson, who described the ceremony as marking a historical epoch in Indian railway enterprise. The new line, he said, was certainly the largest and most important railway based upon purely private enterprise. It ran through a rich, prosperous, and populous country. It would link with the great Transgangetic system, which would ultimately reach Assam. Another link had been commenced on the previous day, when Mr. Thompson laid the foundation of the Gunduck-bridge, which will join the new lines with the existing Tirthoot State Railway.

When that bridge is completed all district capitals of the Behar Commissionership will be connected by rail or steam ferries—an advantage possessed by no other administrative division in India.

"The latest reports from the Patna and Burdwan divisions show that there is likely to be some distress, owing to the failure of the crops in certain areas. The Government have sanctioned a grant of 5,000 rupees for relief works in the Durbunga district, and have authorised the suspension of the collection of rents on the Government estates in Gya. The water supply has partially failed in some portions of Behar, and the cattle are beginning to suffer from scarcity of fodder. The Collector of Burdwan anticipates some distress before the next harvest, and has started a subscription for the relief of the people. It is not likely, however, that the distress will anywhere be widespread or severe.

"It is satisfactory that the Government have now at last turned their attention to the important question of the construction of military roads along the Punjab frontier. The Secretary of State has sanctioned a road from Kushalgarh, via Kohat, to Bunnoo and Dera Ismail Khan. The outlay, including eight lakhs for the Kuram and Gambela bridges, is estimated at 30 lakhs. The work is to be completed within four years.

"The Duke and Duchess of Connaught have been busily employed during the last four days in seeing all that is to be seen in and near Calcutta. On Friday the Duke reviewed the troops of the garrison. Yesterday they accompanied the Viceroy to Barrackpore. To-day they cross the river to Chandernagore and lunch with the French Governor. To-morrow they return to Calcutta, and in the evening attend a ball given in their honour by the European community. They start for Meerut on Tuesday evening. The Chapter of the Star of India, which was announced as a feature of the Duke's visit, will not take place.

"Lord Randolph Churchill has been visiting Sir Lepel Griffin at Indore. He was entertained at a grand fête by Holkar on Monday evening. On Thursday he was to accompany Sir Lepel Griffin to Gwalior. He arrives in Calcutta early in February. Want of time has compelled him to decline several invitations.

"The vexed question of the situation of the Madras Military Accounts Offices, which excited so much interest in that presidency some months ago, has been decided by an order of the Supreme Government prohibiting their removal to Bangalore.

"A Bill has been introduced to the Bengal Legislative Council to enable the Calcutta Fort Commission to raise three millions sterling for the purpose of constructing docks. The mode in which the money is to be raised—namely, by debentures secured on the docks and other property and income of the Commission, with a Government guarantee for payment of interest at 4½ per cent.—has been severely criticised, while there are not wanting many mercantile authorities to declare the work premature, as the trade of the port does not yet require new docks. On this point, however, there is much difference of opinion.

"The Indian Trade Navigation reports for November show the total imports to have been Rs. 6,26,65,139, against Rs. 6,66,98,693 and Rs. 5,99,64,827 respectively in November in the two preceding years, while exports are Rs. 5,95,66,658 against Rs. 5,96,39,238 and Rs. 6,05,94,489. The totals for eight months ending November 30 are—imports, Rs. 46,86,17,208 against Rs. 44,66,92,066 and Rs. 44,55,78,549 in the two preceding years, and exports Rs. 53,37,42,416, against Rs. 55,56,00,441 and Rs. 51,46,35,830. The paper lately published on the trade of Bengal with Nepal, Sikkim, and Bhotan for 1883-4 shows an improvement of 2·44 per cent. on the figures of the previous year. The increase is entirely in exports, there being a decrease in imports from Nepal and Bhotan. It is admitted that the figures regarding Tibetan trade passing through Sikkim are quite untrustworthy, owing to defective registration at frontier stations, and it is believed, from personal inquiries among Tibetan traders at Darjeeling, that the actual value of the trade is very much greater than would appear from the official return. The prospects of the development of Tibetan trade look hopeful, but the Anti-Opium Society need not fear that any steps will be taken without the concurrence of Chira, or that there is any intention on the part of the Indian Government of trying to force its opium on Tibet. It only asks, and it is surely not too much to ask, that its subjects should be allowed the same free access to Tibet and the right of carrying goods thither as is enjoyed by Russian subjects without taking the unpatriotic step of first proclaiming themselves Russian subjects."

"Telegrams received to-day from Burmah throw some doubt upon the statement that the Shans and Kachyens had joined the Burmese against the Chinese captors of Bhamo. The steamer which went to Bhamo for news was unable to communicate with the shore owing to the incessant firing, and brought back no very definite intelligence. It seems unlikely that the Kachyens would join their hated Burmese masters against the Chinese, whom they looked upon as deliverers. Refugees from Bhamo are pouring into Mandalay. Three thousand soldiers are said to have been despatched from the capital, but they are very badly provided with rations and ammunition. It is also stated that the Chinese have strongly fortified Bhamo, and have hitherto repulsed all the Burmese attacks with heavy loss."

"The statement of your Paris Correspondent that Russia is only awaiting a favourable opportunity to occupy Herat and will probably withdraw from the Boundary Commission was telegraphed here last week, and attracted much attention. The Indian Government, I understand, has received no confirmation of the news. None the less is it generally admitted that the assertion is one which may be verified at any moment, while General Alikhanoff's recent attempt to seize Parjdeh lends additional probability. Some influential papers strongly urge the Government to lose no time in sending to Herat engineer officers to strengthen the defences, so as to render it capable of resisting a long siege. The Ameer would be only too happy to consent providing we found funds, while the reception which the people of the country gave to Sir Peter Lumsden and Colonel Ridgeway shows they would throw no obstacle in our way. Thus, by a small expenditure of little more than half the yearly stipend paid to the Ameer, we might so improve our position that it would be a matter of comparative indifference whether Russia joined the Commission or not."

KURRACHEE AND THE INDIAN POSTAL SERVICE.—We wonder the Kurrachee Chamber of Commerce did not take the opportunity of Lord Dufferin's presence in Bombay to memorialise him upon the unsatisfactory nature of the postal arrangements for Kurrachee. While Kurrachee is going ahead in all other directions, its postal communication with India is infinitely worse than it was ten years ago. The abolition of the daily overland postal service between Bombay and Kurrachee was one of those hasty changes Sir Richard Temple was a trifle too fond of inaugurating; and just as Kurrachee was becoming a place of considerable importance, its merchants found, to their dismay, that they would in future receive only two mails a week, and those by sea. The Kurrachee and Bombay Chambers of Commerce, the Agent Governor-General Beloochistan, and all the municipalities in Sind have resented this unnecessary interference with commercial facilities. Hitherto the Government of India have replied that the receipts from the daily land post would not equal the expenditure. But even so, the Post Office officials should give and take. Very few telegraph offices, we imagine, pay their own expenses, but it is for the convenience of the public that they should be scattered broadcast over India. The great point, however, in favour of a renewal of the agitation will be found in the recent abolition of the mail subsidy for the rest of the Indian coast. The convenience of all the residents at the minor ports has now been considered in the establishment of land dawks round India, and it is simply astounding that Kurrachee, with its large and increasing trade, should be left out in the cold, and have to depend upon its connection with the rest of India on a bi-weekly mail service, awkwardly divided between Mondays and Fridays.—Times of India.

DECORATIONS.

The conferment of honourable decorations is a great engine which the State always holds in its hands for the spurring on of its servants to exertions beyond the average, and beyond what can be exacted as a right, and it is no more politic it should neglect this instrument of power and efficiency than any other which it has available. In foreign nations the use of decorations is both more frequent and more effective than it is among Englishmen, who have a singular and perhaps unreasonable dislike to parade or even use a decoration which has been conferred on them. This feeling may have arisen at a time when all, or nearly all, decorations were given by pure favouritism and certified in no way to a man's merits, or it may be merely the offspring of the mauvaise honte with which English people are popularly credited. However that may be, there seems to be something in the contention that those who have received decorations from the State should be proud to have earned them, and should wear the outward badges of them on all fitting occasions. A new Order is always somewhat looked down on for some years after its institution, but in a few years it acquires value from association with honoured names, and those who despised it at first are the most eager to acquire it afterwards. For the purposes of the Government, however, with which we set out, there is a great difference between honours conferred on retirement and those given when the officer is still in mid-career. A decoration conferred on or after retirement is a solatium for having to retire, or a reward for past services; a decoration conferred while the officer is still on active service and has some years to serve is an incentive and encouragement to greater exertions in the public service; so that while the State can never gain any advantage from decorations conferred on its servants, who are already emeriti, except in so far that it may spur others on to further exertion in the hope of obtaining a similar reward, yet it may well confer them liberally on those servants who have still some years to serve in the hope of evoking a more devoted service and a more strenuous effort even than those which have already earned the decoration. In this case the State is only acting as a wise master does when he encourages the best of his servants by rewards, other than their mere salaries, which are given, more or less, to all alike. For these reasons it may be allowed that there is wisdom in a free distribution of honours to those servants, whether civil or military, who by reaching the higher posts, and by doing good service in them, have proved their merits to the State, and may fairly claim some reward beyond the bare salary, which too often falls equally to good, indifferent, and bad alike.

And as the time is now drawing very near when a list of decorations will be published, it may not be uninteresting to examine to some extent the way in which such things have been awarded in the past. A very slight examination will convince us that the only two decorations to which Indian officers can aspire, as a rule, have been bestowed somewhat indiscriminately, and that many have attained them who would seem less deserving than others who have not received them; while many have not got them who would appear more deserving than, at any rate, some of those to whom they have been awarded. We may first compare the list of C.S.I.'s with that of the officers holding high positions under the Government of India. In the Governor-General's Council there are five Civil and two Military members; the latter are both decorated, Sir Donald Stewart being a G.C.B., and General Wilson a C.B., but it seems odd that an officer who has risen so high and is so senior as General Wilson should not be a K.C.B. Of the first Civilian Members Sir Stuart Bayley is a K.C.S.I., and Sir Auckland Colvin a K.C.M.G. (for Egypt); but Mr. Hope and Mr. Gibbs are only C.S.I.'s, and Mr. Ilbert can as yet only claim a C.I.E. The last named Councillor is a new arrival in the country, and opinions may differ as to the moral or intellectual pre-eminence of Mr. Gibbs, but there can be no doubt that Mr. Hope has earned his K.C.S.I. many times, by thirty years of as good service as any Civil Servant ever rendered to the country.

If we pass to the Additional or Legislative Members of Council we find that, excluding natives, Mr. Hunter is the only C.S.I., and Mr. Gibbon (a non-official), is the only C.I.E. Messrs. Reynolds, Quinton, and Barclay are undecorated, although the services of the first two outweigh those of the decorated member. In the Secretariat of the Government of India, the Foreign Department monopolises the only two decorations which have been awarded, as Mr. Grant, the Secretary, and Mr. Deane, the Under-Secretary, are both C.S.I.'s. In the four purely Civil Secretariats of the Finance, Home, Revenue, and Legislative Departments, not a single decoration of any kind has been given, although in Messrs. Barbour, Mackenzie, Buck, and Fitzpatrick the Government of India enjoys the services of four of the ablest Civilian in India. In the Military Department only Colonel Chesney is decorated (with a C.S.I.); and in the Public Works Department Secretariat no one enjoys any decoration except Mr. Molesworth, who is a C.I.E.

If we pass from the Secretaries to the Heads of Departments we find that in the Financial Department, in the Inland Customs, in the Post-office, the Mint, and the Telegraphs no one is decorated, not even the highest officials; while in the Political Department decorations are sown broadcast. Sir Lepel Griffin, Sir O. St. John, and Sir R. Sandeman being K.C.S.I.'s; General J. Watson a C.B.; and Major Wylie, Colonel Bradford, Colonel Evan-Smith, Colonel Ross, and Colonel Henderson are all C.S.I.'s. The decoration, however, appears to be reserved for military men, as no civilian has it, not even Messrs. Cordery and Lyall. Lieutenant-Governors and Chief Commissioners, being the heads of provincial administrations, are generally decorated. Sir A. Lyall is a K.C.B., and Sir C. Aitchison a K.C.S.I.; while Mr. Rivers Thompson (Bengal), Mr. C. A. Elliott (Assam), Mr. C. S. Bernard (Burma), and Mr. Brittain Jones (Central Provinces) are all C.S.I.'s. Of the Secretaries to Provincial Governments only Mr. C. J. Lyall in Assam is decorated with a C.I.E. No secretary in Bengal, the N.W.P., or the Punjab enjoys any decoration; and yet these posts have been traditionally filled, and the same is the case at the present moment, by some of the ablest members of the Service.

In Bombay Mr. Gonne, the Chief Secretary, and Mr. Richey, the Acting Chief Secretary, are both C.S.I.'s, as is also General Merriman, the Public Works Secretary, while Mr. Macpherson, the Judicial Under-Secretary, is a C.I.E.

In Madras no Member of Council (except Sir F. Roberts), or Secretary, or Under-Secretary is decorated; while in the Bombay Council Mr. Peile is a C.S.I.; so Bombay absorbs the lion's share of the decorations in Southern India.

In the Boards of Revenue, Mr. Cockerell in Bengal is a C.S.I., but Mr. Reynolds (Bengal) and Messrs. B. W. Colvin and C. A. Daniell (N.W.P.) are undecorated; while Colonel Davies, Financial Commissioner of the Punjab, is a C.S.I., though his new colleague, Major Wace, is not. In Madras Mr. Garstin, second Member of the Board, is a C.S.I., but the first and third Members are undecorated. Bombay has no Board of Revenue.

Of the provincial heads of departments such as Police, Jails, Education, Registration, and the rest, no one is decorated in any province as far as we have been able to ascertain; and in the various High Courts and Chief Courts no Judge has been considered worth decorating except the Chief Justices, who are always made Knights. Of the Commissioners of Revenue very few are decorated; but Messrs. Metcalfe (Orissa), Barlow (Bhaugulpore), and Colonel Waterfield (Peshawur) are the rare exceptions, three C.S.I.'s; while Mr. Rivett-Carnac, the Opium Agent, is a C.I.E. In Madras and Assam there are no Commissioners to decorate.

As the senior officials have fared so badly in the matter of decorations, it may be easily imagined that when we get below the grade of Secretaries and Commissioners the decorations are few and far between indeed. The C.S.I.'s who are still in official life in India are Colonel Lovett, R.E.; Dr. Bellew; Mr. J. W. Edgar, C.S.; Sir C. Macgregor, Major L. J. Grey, Colonel J. Browne, and Colonel Tweedie, besides those above-mentioned in the higher appointments and the Secretariat. Of C.I.E.'s the following still remain:—Sir Charles Turner; Mr. Pogson; General Cunningham, R.E.; Colonel Walton; Colonel Moore; Mr. F. S. Growse, C.S.; Major Ludlow; Mr. A. Wingate, C.S.; Mr. Luke; Mr. A. F. Cunningham, C.S.; Captain Wylie, Major T. Plowden, Dr. Owen, Mr. J. Lambert, Honorary Major Robertson, Mr. E. R. Douglas, and Dr. Bidie, with those before-mentioned. This is not a long list in all. Some thirty C.S.I.'s and twenty C.I.E.'s scattered among 1,000 Covenanted Civilian, 1,000 higher Uncovenanted Civilian, and at least 2,000 higher military officers can hardly be called a wasteful and ridiculous excess. Nor does the undue cheapening of decorations appear to be an instant danger.

From our examination of the list of those still on active service it appears that in the Order of the Star of India there are three civil and three military K.C.S.I.'s and that there are 17 civil and 18 military C.S.I.'s still on service in India. There are also 14 civil and 18 military C.I.E.'s; these decorations are therefore distributed very impartially; the question among the services is whether they are not given far too sparingly; for, except in the Political Department, it is a very rare thing for an officer to get one of these decorations until he is on the verge of retirement. We have heard it put forward as a suggestion that the lists should be increased up to a certain fixed minimum, and then that whenever an officer died or retired another should be appointed in his place, so as to keep the list up to these numbers for officers on active service in India. At present a large share of the decorations is absorbed by old and retired officers living in England, and the State does not reap the full profit of that cheap incentive to labour which lies at her disposal.—Pioneer.

THE GREAT MEETING OF ZEMINDARS AND RYOTS AT CALCUTTA.

The meeting held in Calcutta on the 19th inst. on the Bengal Tenancy Bill will have the effect of bringing the whole subject prominently before the attention of our new Viceroy, and ought to go far towards securing a fair hearing for the opponents of the measure. It was recently reported that Lord Dufferin would allow the Bill to pass without going into the subject, and that he would throw the burden of responsibility upon the previous Administration. With all due deference to the principle of continuity, it is hardly necessary to point out the absurdity of such a supposition. This vast and ill-advised legislative project will be passed in review once more, and the claims of the landholders will doubtless receive the most careful reconsideration. An appeal must be therefore made for the appointment of a commission to conduct a local inquiry in the hope that even at the eleventh hour something may be done to render the basis upon which the future land law of these provinces is to be founded, a sure and stable one. The chief argument against the appointment of a commission seems to be derived from the present disturbed state of the agricultural relations in certain parts of Bengal. Without stopping to inquire into the cause which has brought about the alleged state of affairs, it may be asked whether it is so bad in the very worst districts as to justify the fear that the appointment of a local commission would lead to any serious consequences. As far as can be seen, the disturbed state of feeling is all on one side. The rayats in Maimansing and one or two other districts have calmly ceased to pay any rent whatever, and they could do nothing worse than this, unless they were to assault the members of the commission—a supposition which may at once be set aside. The rayats are simply living rent free, and they cannot possibly be better off. On the other hand, the landlord cannot be worse off, unless, indeed, the present Bill is passed, when his position will be converted into that of the holder of a rent charge on his ancestral property, and when he will have the felicity of seeing the money-lender step into his shoes. Again, we may be told that the recent conferences have answered the purpose of the proposed inquiry. One has only to turn, however, to the printed report to see that an immense diversity of opinion prevails amongst district officers. There is no general consensus of opinion on any important principle of the Bill, and the local circumstances of districts have been the natural cause of this diversity of opinion.

No other argument has really been advanced against the appointment of a commission. It is absolutely necessary to ascertain, first of all, whether in any given district the conditions of things are such as to call for the protection of the rayat against the zemindar, or for the protection of the zemindar against the rayat; or whether the rayat ought to be safeguarded against his own imprudence, coupled with the avarice of the mahajan. It is necessary also to determine whether the landlord has good reason for demanding some safeguard against the introduction of a middleman between himself and his tenant. It is simply impossible to ascertain the truth on these points without local inquiry. Every one in Bengal knows that the circumstances of districts within a mile of each other vary as much as those of two distinct countries in Europe. Is it, then, desirable that a universal law should be made to apply to all districts alike where such diversity admittedly exists? One might as well contend that the legislation which would be suitable for a country like France would be equally suitable for England. Indeed, if there were no other defect in the measure there would still remain this fatal objection to it—that it makes no allowance for the manifold and varied conditions of the districts to which it would be applied, and that it errs, from a legislative point of view, on the side of inflexible uniformity. Moreover, there are many questions which enter into the problem with regard to which statistics are most deceptive. For instance, there is good ground to dispute the accuracy of the Registration returns which represent the number of transfers of rayatwari rights effected between rayat and rayat. We have been told that an enormous number of such transfers have been made, but we should be glad to see whether these so-called rayats are not the men who combine money-lending with cultivation, and who describe themselves as rayats to avoid awkward inquiries which might bring them under the License Tax. The increase of transfers has occurred within the past few years, and it is precisely within this period that the License Tax has been firmly established. Besides, the evasion of the tax has become more difficult every year. It is, therefore, not unfair to assume that every effort has been, and is being, made by men who are mahajans to conceal their real mode of livelihood, and to give themselves out as cultivators in order to avoid the tax. It may be confidently asserted, at any rate, that the result of an inquiry would show that a very large proportion of those so-called cultivators are village mahajans, and that the free transfer of occupancy rights amongst cultivators pure and simple is, to a large extent, visionary. In conclusion, has it ever been known in modern history that the entire agricultural conditions of a country have been changed upon anything but the clearest and fullest inquiry? The importance of the change which it is proposed to effect in Bengal cannot be overrated, and the necessity for the fullest and most ample inquiry cannot be insisted upon too strongly. It is only by means of such an inquiry that the true state of the case can be brought to light, and that the Government can hope to devise a measure which will place the relations of the agricultural classes of Bengal upon a footing of permanent satisfaction.—Englishman.

LORD REAY.—Lord Reay, the newly-appointed Governor of Bombay, is expected to leave early in March to succeed Sir James Fergusson, the present Governor of that Presidency. Lady Reay will accompany his lordship.

THE "INDIAN STATESMAN" AND THE LANDHOLDERS' MEETING.

The great meeting of Landholders that was held in the Town Hall on Friday, Dec. 19th, to protest against the Tenancy Bill, was remarkable for the fact that it was attended by a body of delegates from every part of the provinces. There has probably never been so serious a demonstration made in the city before. One of the strangest things connected with this Tenancy Bill is the fact that, while a multitude of memorials has been presented against it, we do not know that any one representation whatever has been made in favour of it. We may be mistaken in saying this, but a reflection that impressed ourselves very early in connection with the measure was of this order. We have been unable to discover who the outside promoters of the Bill are, who the parties that desire it. It is the reproach of other Governments, that they are so slow to respond to the demands made upon them for reforms, but literally no one that we can discover asks for this measure. It is said that it will be a great boon to the cultivator, but the cultivator, so far as we have been able to ascertain, is either quite indifferent to the measure, or opposed to it. On the other hand, we have had to record in the last four years innumerable meetings and innumerable memorials against the Bill, but none whatever in its favour. For a whole year, we kept silence about it, fully expecting to find that there were two sides to the question, and that when the zemindar and tenure-holder had exhausted all they had to say, we should then have the ryot's, or cultivator's side of the question. But there has been no side of the question hitherto but the zemindar's, and yet the Bill has, in one form or other, been the topic of incessant discussion for the last four years. Who is it, we ask naturally, that desires the measure? Masses of men have risen up against it everywhere, and tell us that it will ruin all classes connected with the land should it become law, and they show strong reasons for their assertion. On the other hand, we cannot find any one who asks for the measure, or desires it, or has a word to say in behalf of it. A gigantic revolution is in contemplation that will sweep away old customs, usages, rights, and privileges, that everyone seems anxious to retain, and that literally no one appears to desire to destroy. Are we to understand that there is a "conspiracy of silence" against the Government, on the part of the men whom it benevolently wishes to befriend at the cost of the zemindar? The position is so strange that we doubt if a precedent could be found for it in modern history. Here is a revolutionary Bill that the Council professes to have brought forward in the interest of the masses of the people, in a population of sixty millions; and their gratitude strikes them all dumb! If they speak at all it is to ask that the Government will let them alone. They have no grievance to prefer, no demands to make, although the Bill has been kept dangling before their eyes for years, exciting dismay and terror amongst the classes against whom it is levelled, but awakening no interest whatever amongst the classes whom it champions. It is idle to tell us that the ryot is ignorant of what is going on when he is prosecuting the Government before Her Majesty's Judges "in his thousands." The ryot has long known all about the measure just as well as the mass of zemindars do. In tens of thousands of cases he is better educated and better informed, because wealthier than the zemindar, but he makes no demand for the Bill, and offers no counter-demonstrations to the meetings and memorials of the men whom the Bill treats as his "oppressors." It is without exception the strangest story the journalist had ever to tell. Let Lord Dufferin ask his Secretaries to lay before him every demonstration that has been made in favour of the Bill, with the memorials against it, and he will find that what we tell him is true, and that the Bill is purely a legislative conceit brought forward on the pretence of meeting certain evils that really do exist, and that need remedy, but that have been made the occasion of drafting a measure of such gigantic wrong and unsettlement that all classes have risen up against it. The Bill should be withdrawn absolutely and a measure brought forward restricted to the special evils that call for redress, and that ought to have been redressed many years ago.

The notice in Saturday's Englishman of the great meeting on Friday in the Town Hall emphasises very strongly the necessity of a special Commission of Inquiry in every district of these provinces as to the relations existing between the zemindar and the ryot.

"It is absolutely necessary to ascertain, first of all, whether in any given district the conditions of things are such as to call for the protection of the rayat against the zemindar, or for the protection of the zemindar against the rayat, or whether the rayat ought to be safe-guarded against his own imprudence, coupled with the avarice of the mahajan. It is necessary also to determine whether the landlord has good reason for demanding some safeguard against the introduction of a middleman between himself and his tenant. It is simply impossible to ascertain the truth on these points without local inquiry. Everyone in Bengal knows that the circumstances of districts within a mile of each other vary as much as those of two distinct countries in Europe. Is it, then, desirable that a universal law should be made to apply to all districts alike, where such diversity admitted by exists? One might as well contend that the legislation which would be suitable for a country like France will be equally suitable for England. Indeed, if there was no other defect in the measure there would still remain this fatal objection to it—that it makes no allowance for the manifold and varied conditions of the district to which it would be applied, and that it errs, from a legislative point of view, on the side of inflexible uniformity.”

Should the Bill be persevered with, its first effect will probably be to paralyze agriculture, and then to plunge all classes into a general conflict for the ascertainment of what their rights really are, under the new social organization which the measure imposes upon them. The traditions, customs, usages, rights, and privileges which have hitherto regulated the relations between all classes are swept away altogether by the Bill. It is this consideration that makes all classes look askance at the measure, and deprecate its further prosecution, while the objection of the zemindar is that the rights guaranteed to him by the Settlement of 1793 are made waste paper of by the Bill, the contention being undoubtedly true. Meanwhile, and with the extraordinary inconsistency which marks our whole course towards the land, the local Government is about to introduce a Bill into the local Council to provide for a cadastral survey of the provinces, and a record of all landed rights therein. How can any record of rights be attempted, simultaneously with the introduction of a measure that will so unsettle all rights hitherto existing in the Provinces, that it will take a generation of years for the law courts to settle what the new rights of all parties respectively thereunder really are. We really stand aghast at what this measure proposes. We see before our eyes what the legislation of the last four years has meant, amongst two or three millions of people only in Ireland, without any of the intricacy and complexity of tenure, rights, and usages that exist in every district of Bengal. So numerous are these and so peculiar, that it is impossible even to reduce them to schedule form. They have grown up through long ages of freedom from legislative interference, and form a body of unwritten law with which the people are thoroughly familiar, and to which they cling with the utmost tenacity, while this Bill sweeps them all away, and requires a population of some sixty millions of different races, creeds, and stages of civilization, to live henceforward in a new, cast-iron, social fabric that the State constructs for them. To say that the measure will launch the provinces upon a boundless sea of litigation is to express very feebly what will happen. The tenacity with which all races cling to ancient customs, rights and privileges concerning the land seems to have been lost sight of altogether by the framers of the Bill. They have not even taken the trouble to ascertain by exact inquiry, what it is that they are sweeping away. The single fact that they propose to limit the rental of the zemindar to a fourth or fifth of the produce, when it is susceptible of the simplest proof that he is not exacting one-twentieth, shows of itself the discreditable ignorance of which the Bill is an outcome. Exact and impartial inquiry into the existing state of things is the very first step to be taken, where none has been attempted, but everything rests upon more general impressions.

INDIA'S INTERNAL DANGERS.

The administration of the late Mokhtyar-ool-Moolk, Sir Salar Jung, G.C.S.I., is the one bright spot in the execrable rule of the Hyderabad dynasty. Since the days of the first Nizam or Subadar of the Deccan—one Asaf Jah, a Turcoman soldier of fortune, a traitor, and a debauched, unscrupulous adventurer of the true Mogul stamp—the misrule of nearly 100,000 square miles of territory and of eleven millions of men has been a scandal throughout India. We have already considered the politically dangerous armies of Scindia—a general in the British service—and of Nepal. Now let us gauge the capacity for harm to ourselves of the premier prince of Hindustan, whose independence and sovereignty, in very unguarded moments, were recognised by the defunct East India Company. Except as an element for the creation of wrong, we can see no raison d'être for either the Nizam or the 100,000 armed men he has at his disposal. He and his are like noxious weeds in a goodly garden. What has this prince and his immediate retainers, hangers-on, and parasites, in common with the ten million Carnatic Hindoos whom he taxes yearly to the extent of 5,000,000 sterling for the extravagance of an idle, debauched Court; the lusts of a fanatical, corrupt Mahomedan administration; the entertainment of a host of Arab, Pathan, and other dangerous idlers; and for the assumption of a position of quasi-independence to which he has no real claim? To them—and a fine manly hardy race are these Beders, the upland farmers and herdsmen of the Deccan—he is but an extortionate tax-gatherer. But for the British Government we believe these sturdy Hindoos would long since have thrown off the galling yoke. In support of this assertion, we may quote the case of Baidur or Beder-Shorapore, the ruler of which, till 1853, when his almost impregnable and naturally fortified town fell to a force under the command of Sir George Malcolm, of the Southern Mahratta Horse, defied all the Nizam's power, boasted that his fortress had never been taken, and claimed for himself the proud title of Bahr-ool-Moolk—the Lion of the Country. Nizam, being translated, reads “Regulator,” but very little equal motion is there within his confines. What holds good of the Afzul-ud-Dowlah, the late ruler of the Deccan, promises, we fear, to be equally true to his son, the present Nizam. Already the cloven hoof is showing, and what in youth has comparatively been dormant, promises, with virility, to yield the full family crop of evil passions. There has always been something peculiarly unwholesome in the atmosphere of the Hyderabad Court. Under its baneful influence the proverbial purity of the English race throughout India has been contaminated. There, and there alone, corrupt Englishmen have been found. Ever since Asaf Jah, in 1723, turned traitor to his salt, and cast off his allegiance to Delhi, the moral stain has stuck to his descendants. Assassination removed his son and nephew. The man who swore to us “by God and his prophet, and upon the holy Alcoran, that I, with pleasure, agree to the requests specified in this paper (the Treaty of 1759), and shall not deviate from it even one hair's breadth,” was deposed, and died in prison poisoned by his own brother. Nizam Ali, in a brief and decisive campaign, was utterly defeated by the Mahrattas, and had only to thank our struggle with Tipoo that he was not deposed. His conduct towards the East India Company was a forty-two years' chapter of insincerity, intrigue, and hopeless misgovernment. His troops, moreover, showed no liking for actual war, and could not hold their own against the warlike soldiers of the Peishwa. In the face of all this, it seems marvellous how that the Indian Government played into this prince's hands. The most favourable constructions appear to have been placed upon his frequent reversals of policy, ambiguous attitudes, and openly hostile acts. A share of the territory we wrested from the Peishwa was doled out to him for the inglorious part his inefficient army took in our final campaign in Mysore, which ended the career of Tipoo. His son, Sekundur Jah (Alexander) was an idiot, and the reins of government falling into the hands of Chundoo Lall, a Hindoo, the Nizam's troops were of some use to us in the Mahratta and Pindari wars of 1817-18. When this imbecile had been consigned to his grave, his son, Nazir-ud-Dowlah, reigned in his stead. From his accession Chundoo Lall appears to have lost his head; the restored finances fell into confusion, all rule was at an end, and anarchy made such headway that for the first time—we wish to direct special attention to this—the active intervention of British forces was forced on the Nizam. Nazir's army had become a dangerous mob. He pleaded sovereignty, independence, and so forth; but to all his pleas the Governor-General turned a deaf ear. The fiat had gone forth from Fort William. English troops restored order, and English officers decided as to the raising of revenue. Later on, weaker counsels prevailing, this supervision was withdrawn, and the Nizam found himself once more free to demonstrate his capacity for misgoverning. The Hyderabad Contingent, a local force, had fallen in arrears in respect of pay. Chundoo Lall was sent to the rightabout in obedience to our demand. Nasir then tried personal government and failed hideously. Sir Salar Jung's (not the present youth) uncle Suraj-ul-Mulk then tried his 'prentice hand, and under him matters did not mend. So two other Ministers were tried, with like negative results. Now Nasir found himself confronted by Lord Dalhousie, who then ruled India by a bold, vigorous, unflinching policy. The character of the Governor-General was well known at the capital of the Deccan. Sir Robert Low was sent to demand peremptorily the surrender of the province of Berar, the revenues of which we agreed to set aside for the cost of maintaining the Hyderabad Contingent. We may here mention as a contrast between the rule of the Nizam and that of the Empress of India that we defray the cost of the Contingent, pay a goodly surplus over to the Hyderabad treasury, and that since 1853, the date of the province coming under our administration, its population has quadrupled. Yet the greater portion of the revenue of this rich province is, we say, squandered on an incapable and needless force of 5,000 regular infantry, 2,000 sildar cavalry, and four batteries. In no one respect is this force comparable with any of our native forces. At Aurungabad, in 1857, one of the cavalry regiments mutinied, and it is no secret that, but for the conduct of the late Sir Salar Jung, Afzul, who had but a month or two before succeeded his father, Nasir, the Contingent and his army of 8,000 cavalry, 36,000 infantry, of whom 6,000 are fanatical Arabs, would have joined the mutineers. It is just possible that the old feud with the detested Peishwa may have had a deterrent effect, and that the Soubhadar of the Deccan was loth to fight on the side of the Nana. The astute Minister would have made capital out of this feeling. It is true that towards the close of the campaign in Central India, at Shorapore and elsewhere in the Deccan, the services of the Contingent were utilised, but then the game for the rebels had been pretty well played out, the sting had been taken out of the mutiny, and the day was our own. Salar Jung, alas, is dead, and Salar Jung II, a young man of one or two and twenty, guides his by four years more youthful master. The virtues and firmness of the brilliant Minister of Nazir have not, it appears, descended to his namesake, whose conduct, political and military, is the cause of some anxiety. We fear this is an exemplification of the blind leading the blind, and that old heads are not found on young shoulders. Already we hear of perilous self-indulgence, of wild schemes of policy, and of strong military proclivities.—Admiralty and Horse Guards' Gazette.

REVIEW OF LITERATURE.

INDIA AND THE EAST.

We find it convenient to speak of books about India in the same connection with books from India and with our notes upon the general progress of thought and education in this quarter of the globe. The one important English work on India is Sir James Caird's view of its "Land and People." The translations by Kern and Max Müller of "The Sacred Books of the East" steadily progresses, and add essentially to our materials for the study of Eastern character and thought. There is a first volume out of "Legends of the Panjab," by Temple, which is a model of good work. Monier Williams's "Religious Thought and Life in India," and the "History of Reformed Hinduism," and "Hindu Philosophy Explained," by Bose, are useful studies in the contemporaneous branch of the subject.

At Bombay has appeared the seventh volume of the "Gazetteer of the Bombay Presidency," and at Calcutta a narrative of "The Adventures of the Panjab Hero, Raja Rasalu," with other examples of native folk lore. Another Calcutta house has issued an anonymous writer's view of "The Tribes on My Frontier" in which are amusingly described the insects best known in India. A "Catalogue of the Sanscrit Buddhist Literature of Nepal," compiled by Dr. Mitra, and also printed at Calcutta, deals with some eighty-five MSS. at Calcutta, copies of a number of which are likewise to be found at Cambridge, England. The MSS. at Cambridge have been independently catalogued by Bendall, as well as the Chinese translations of the "Buddhist Tripitaka," by Bunyiu Nanjio.

The oldest law book known in Burmah consists of a bundle of palm-leaves scratched with a version of the laws of Manu. The author is one Buddhagoshā, a jurist of the eighteenth century. An English translation of this by Jardine and Forchhammer has passed through the press.

There are a number of points at which, in view of the scant data of literature, interesting observations may be taken of the intellectual situation in India. The number of children in the schools seems to be steadily increasing. The figures in the Madras Presidency, for example, were 446,324 for 1883 against 393,683 for 1882. This increase is generously shared by the Mohammedans. Great interest is developing in various parts of the empire in the education of women. Large donations are reported for the establishment of new high schools for girls at Poona, Bombay, and Travancore. Yet still the total female population of the empire is upwards of ninety-six millions, and of this enormous number only about 125,000 are at school. Great success has attended the opening of a Zenana library at Calcutta.

According to recent statistics it appears that the language spoken by the largest number of persons in India is the Hindustani, whose adherents are set down at eighty-two millions. The Bengali comes next, with thirty-nine millions; the speakers of English are only about 200,000. Much fault is found by native Indian papers with the corruptions of the native languages introduced by native visitors to England on their return, and signs of the anglicising of the vernacular are noticed on many sides.

As another sign of the times it may be mentioned that the official gazettes of India are now for the first time printed on paper manufactured in the country.

The revival of the Madagascar Times at Antananarivo is a pleasant sign of progress in that awakening island. Corea has entered on its first experiment in journalism in a Metropolitan Ten-Day Gazette, its sixteen pages being written in Chinese. An interesting collection of early printed books in the Korean and Japanese languages has been made up for sale to the British Museum.

In Japan itself the growth of newspaper enterprise is evinced by the statement that three journals published in the vernacular at Tokio and Kobe sent special correspondents to report the war in China.—The Literary World, Boston, U.S.A.

THE KURRACHEE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—In their report for 1883-84 the committee of the Kurrachee Chamber of Commerce refer pointedly to their desire to further the Euphrates Valley Railway scheme. They say that apart from other considerations, the prominence which their port would attain in the event of the scheme coming to a successful issue makes it a matter of deep interest to the Chamber. This is natural enough; but the people of Kurrachee will be reminded by this report that they will not have to wait for a growth of trade until this mighty scheme is brought to fruition. The report shows that both the foreign and the coasting trade of the port continue steadily to increase. During the year under review the import trade showed an improvement of 56,76,447 rs. on the preceding year, and the export trade of 1,34,43,315 rs. The principal articles that contributed to the increase in imports were cotton piece-goods and twist and yarn, and this in spite of an octroi duty of 1 per cent., of which the Chamber complain.

Correspondence.

THE NAVY.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—I shall be much obliged if you will publish what follows:—

"TO THE CHIEF CONSTRUCTOR OF THE NAVY, ADMIRALTY.

"Sir,—I have duly received this day your address—'To the members of the Royal Corps of Naval Constructors.'

"The subject is of far too serious importance, involving as it does the safety of Great Britain, to allow me to be silent.

"I propose to follow your paper.

"P. 2. The Agamemnon was, I presume, built so short with the idea that she would be more handy and steer better, but to build two—Agamemnon and Ajax—to go only thirteen knots, is to sacrifice everything by a clearly foreseen disadvantage. To design a ship for a light craft 23ft. 6in. and then to have to make it artificially 26 feet aft so as to steer is not scientific.

"P. 3. Mr. Barnaby notices 'the fulness of the lines and ends and the lengthened Agamemnon, i.e., Colossus, has altogether avoided difficulty in steering, while it has given much higher speed with the same engine power.' I foresaw those results. It is, however, a very expensive experiment. Two comparatively useless ships, Agamemnon and Ajax, costing some £1,500,000!

"Pp. 3, 4. 'An Admiral of the Fleet giving the names of ships stripped to "an alarming extent" of their belt armour and declaring that they are most dangerous, and including among them the Conqueror and the Hero.' Sir Thomas Brassey, 'The British Navy,' gives the plan of Conqueror, Vol. 1, p. 446, showing about one-tenth the length of the vessel unarmoured and thus 'stripped to a most alarming extent,' for while pitching the steering of the ship is jeopardised. The Hero and Conqueror are the very worst fighting machines I can conceive. Weak armour 12in., such a superstructure aft as to mask for 100° the stern defence power of the heavy guns. I included these ships purposely and intentionally for the reasons given above.

"Mr. Barnaby condemns the whole nineteen at page 6. 'It is conceivable that some such provision against machine guns would be a wise addition where weight can be surrendered to meet it. In the Agamemnon, for example, 2-in. armour could be put in a belt 6-ft. wide.' Mr. Barnaby thus abandons unarmoured ends, but 3 in. steel has been pierced at 600 yards, thus nothing under 6-in. will succeed. The French have 16-in. and 14-in. (see Brassey, page 316) in a belt 8 ft. 1-in. wide.

"The statement, p. 4, that I believe Warrior and Black Prince completely belted, is I presume a mistake, it is contrary to fact. I have treated them as utterly obsolete. Mr. Barnaby is misleading about seamen, Exercise, 1885, p. 1657, gives 43,330, 'Etat majors et équipages à terre et à la mer,' 5,537 'Artillerie de Marine' and 21,022 troupes; to our 'Fleet service afloat,' including coast-guard, 43,592 p. 8, Estimates 1884-85, Marine Artillery 2,192, Marine 10,208. So the French sailors are only 262! less than ours.

"Again, Mr. Barnaby is in error when he states 'Such questions as these are, I say, left almost untouched by Naval officers.' I do not think that Mr. Barnaby could strengthen what I have written on this subject, see also Sir A. Ryder and Admiral Phillimore, two Commanders-in-Chief, and very many more; Naval Prize Essay, etc., etc. I most earnestly wish Mr. Barnaby would prove his words where he states, 'And she has inscribed on her rolls 170,000 seamen, while in England, including all reserves, there are not 100,000.' The French part I believe; the latter I cannot. His statement that 'the French have in armed commissioned ships 15,000 men against the 22,000 of England' is most misleading, as shown above.

"P. 4. Modern treaties are ephemeral and of little value.

"The form. 'The Typical English Battle-ships built and proposed, having unarmoured ends' appals and fills me with dismay. How it must delight the enemies of Great Britain!

Mr. Barnaby at page 5 states, 'As to the absolute strength of the Navy, I entirely concur with those who desire that it shall be twice as powerful as that of France,' and he is the man who has weakened nineteen ships. I observe that Mr. Barnaby omits reference to the resistance of armour to long-range and oblique fire, its main use.

"I again advise Mr. Barnaby to 'imitate the vessels of every class in the French Navy,' and merely double the number. Thus we cannot be beaten, in case of war. Now we most certainly should be unless we alter our mode of armouring and our Naval policy.

"P. 8. I always considered mastless ironclads my children, but with a height of freeboard equal to Hercules; see Admiralty correspondence. I believe that Dreadnought modernised would have few equals, with guns higher out of water.—I am Sir, your humble Servant,

"Admiral of the Fleet,

"THOMAS SYMONDS

EAST INDIA ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the East India Association was held on Monday in the Council Room, Exeter Hall, the subject for discussion being "The Age of Competition for the Indian Civil Service," introduced in a paper by A. K. Settna, Esq. (of Bombay). Mr. Wilfrid Seawen Blunt occupied the chair, and amongst those present were the following:—Lord Stanley of Alderley, Lord Wentworth, Sir Roland Wilson, General Macdonald, Lieutenant-Colonel Trench, Mr. Tom Hughes, Q.C., Mr. C. W. Arathoon, Mr. A. K. Connell, Mr. Martin Wood, Mr. J. Duncan, Mr. J. Shaw, Mr. Hodgson, Dr. Clark, Dr. Yaudeviar, Mr. Abdool Majid, Mr. Piyare Lal, Miss A. M. Taylor. Letters from Lord Reay, General Sir George Balfour, Sir George Campbell, M.P., Sir Arthur Hobhouse, Professor Thorold Rogers, M.P., and General Sir Orfeur Cavenagh, dealing with the question from various points of view, were read.

In opening the proceedings the Chairman said that in his recent journey to India he had an opportunity of discussing the question before them that evening with most of the leading reformers, both English and native, and he was therefore able to speak with a certain knowledge of the opinions held in India with regard to the subject. It was, he thought, fortunate that Mr. Settna had not the opportunity he sought last summer of bringing the matter before the Association. At that time the excitement and agitation which had been got up by the Press against Lord Ripon and his policy had very much prejudiced all English opinion with regard to reform generally in India. The present system of governing India was immensely costly, and what would eventually force forward reform, if nothing else did, would be the financial crisis which must come unless the present system was altered. He compared the present system of government to a farm managed by Scotch bailiffs, and said it may be wonderfully well governed, and everything in extremely good order, but things were done really too well, with the consequence that debt kept on increasing, and the country could not afford the expense of the machinery of administration. The reform needed, and the only way in which reform can be made, was to transfer the work of administration from Englishmen, who are most expensive materials, to the hands of natives, who are far cheaper, because indigenous materials of the country—(cheers).

Mr. Settna then read his paper, in which he said:—

He thought it would not be unprofitable to raise a discussion in this country upon the question regarding the age up to which the competition for admittance into the Indian Civil Service should be allowed, now that the all but unanimous voice of the Indian Press had condemned the reply of the Secretary of State for India to the deputation of the Indian Reform Association. He said the Secretary of State would, therefore, do well to reconsider the question with the light of what additional information he might receive on the subject. And such information, it was to be hoped, would be amply furnished by the discussion of the question that afternoon.

There were many side issues of the question which it was not their present purpose to determine, such as the abolition of the competitive system, the change of venue of the examination from England to India, the subjects of the examination, &c. But, on each of these three heads he would just say a few words. Firstly, as regards abolition, it seemed to be a very difficult question to venture one's judgment upon. It may be said against it, that there are many able and experienced men in the service of the Government of India who were prohibited from rising higher than a certain limit simply on account of their not being competition wallahs. Then, again, there is absolutely no guarantee in the competitive system that you get the best men, from a moral, administrative or intellectual point of view. And amongst the advocates of the abolition of the present system of competition he would mention Sir George Birdwood, of the India Office, and Mr. Justice Bayley, of the High Court of Bombay. But, on the other hand, it may be said that it is difficult to find a system which would be less open to objection than the competitive one. He would certainly advocate abolition of the present system if this difficulty be overcome.

As regards the second point, the change of venue of the examination from England to India, there was much to recommend it; for what a hardship it is to the people of India to come all the way here to compete for an examination in which their chances of success are so small. Some people often say that the high caste natives of India are prevented by caste restrictions from coming over to England, and its no use having those men superseded by those who break through caste prejudices to come over here. Then it seems to be a conclusive argument in favour of holding the examinations in India. For what would it otherwise come to? Simply this. That we cannot give any responsible posts to those good men because they don't come over; but we won't give to those that do come over because they are above these prejudices! Admirable argument!

As to the third point, viz., the subjects in which students should be examined, not being a successful University man himself, he was not prepared to offer any remark. He only mentioned it, as there might be some "experts" present who may make some useful suggestions.

Mr. Abdul Majid held that lowering the age of candidates had been followed by a distinct deterioration in the service.

Lord Stanley, of Alderley, said it was quite a mistake to suppose that Lord Lytton personally wished to close the administrative service to native Indians. Advocating the raising of the limit of age, Lord Stanley also expressed a desire to see German and Italian struck out of the list of subjects of examination, and a certain knowledge required of Sanscrit, Persian, and Arabic.

The discussion was continued by Mr. Martin Wood, Mr. Piyare Lal, Dr. Clark, Mr. A. K. Connell, and Mr. Thomas Hughes, Q.C., who held that Indian youths should be allowed to enter for examinations in their own country, observing that if the case was reversed, no sane English father would send a boy of fifteen to Calcutta.

With a vote of thanks to the chairman, moved by Mr. Settna and seconded by Mr. C. W. Arathoon, the proceedings terminated.

ARMINIUS VAMBERY ON THE RUSSO-AFGHAN BOUNDARY COMMISSION.

The following letter on the demarcation of the Afghan frontier has appeared in the Times from Professor Vambery:—

"Sir,—I happened to publish two months ago in the National Review a paper on the Russo-Afghan Boundary Commission, in which I ventured to remark that 'the Liberal politicians are determined, with proper British gravity, to surround this noteworthy act of the rectification of the frontier with all the pomp due to the dignity of the Empire of the Indies, and seem to have no perception of the flippancy with which the whole thing is treated at St. Petersburg, and how meagre and unmeaning are the preparations on the Russian side.'

"As recent matters show I was not at all mistaken in my anticipations, for General Zelennoi is still at Tiflis and M. Lessar is still expecting orders at St. Petersburg, while good Sir Peter Lumsden is spending with his English party a rather dismal Christmas on the left bank of the Murghab river, perhaps at the very spot where I was encamped twenty-two years ago, and considering that I was shivering with cold in that Pass in the height of summer you can pretty well form an idea of the discomforts your countrymen have to undergo at this season of the year under felt tents and at such a great distance from the outposts of European civilisation.

"Now, sir, that the British Lion should be kept waiting such a long time in the ante-chamber by the Russian Bear is certainly something more than diplomatic discourtesy, and although not an Englishman I fully understand and justify the tone of excitement with which the English Press is commenting on this dilatory proceeding of the Cabinet of St. Petersburg. There is, in fact, no excuse persuasive enough by which the gentlemen of St. Petersburg could mitigate the affront given to the Liberals on the Thames, usually called their dear friends, for the only pretext which has been used hitherto—namely, the unavoidable necessity of a previous settlement between the two Cabinets is preposterous from beginning to end, and will in no way diminish the offence so wantonly given to their English friends. A mutual settlement between London and St. Petersburg as to the future frontier between Afghanistan and Russia could be only imaginable if the debatable portion of the two conterminous countries had been fully investigated, and if the geographical and ethnographical details were well known. But, this being very far from reality, we may well ask, How will the respective Cabinets act in questions connected with the delimitation of such districts which have remained untrodden by any European hitherto, and where the slightest basis of discussion is wanting? Let us take that portion of the Turkoman desert which extends from Merv to Audekhai and Maimene or from Pendj-deh to Charjui and let us ask, How is it possible to come to a definite arrangement with regard to the frontier without previous experience made on the spot? I suppose this is the business of the two Commissions, and without it all efforts made in St. Petersburg and in London will be of no avail, and rather tend to embroil the question instead of clearing it.

"I repeat, therefore, the only reason given by the Russians for the extraordinary delay in sending out their Commission is futile, and will only betray those who forcibly shut their eyes before the flippant manner with which Russia treats the whole proposal of a delimitation of frontier in Central Asia, and who will not perceive the premeditated humiliation to which the Muscovite is anxious to expose England in the eyes of the Afghans and of the Asiatics in general. To be kept waiting on somebody is a thing to which only the inferior will acquiesce by command of his superior, and as the Afghans and other Asiatics will not find any other explanation for the tardy appearance of the Russian Commissioner the delay is certainly most detrimental to the prestige of England in the East."

THE AGRICULTURAL RESOURCES OF INDIA.—At the meeting of the Society of Arts (Indian Section) on Friday next, January 23rd, Mr. E. C. Buck, Secretary to the Government of India in the Finance and Agricultural Department, will read a paper on the above subject, Sir James Caird, K.C.B., in the chair.

CAVALRY IN MODERN WAR.*

"The next great war will commence with a fierce and long-sustained cavalry battle. Such is the opinion expressed by German officers of all ranks and of all branches of the service." On the result of that preliminary combat will mainly depend the actual results accomplished by the infantry, and eventual complete victory or defeat. For a general endeavouring to carry on war without the supremacy of cavalry on his side is as a man blindfolded fighting a duel with a clear-sighted opponent. The intense importance of good and sufficient cavalry to a nation in the present day is obvious, and in our case, where we shall undoubtedly have to do our best against overwhelming numbers, it is most advisable that not only cavalry officers but every officer should thoroughly know what cavalry is capable of and what it may be expected to do. It would be an excellent thing for the nation if the knowledge could be still further extended. No better exponent of the position of cavalry in modern war could be obtained than Colonel Chenevix Trench, who, in addition to special Continental experience as military attaché at St. Petersburg, can give the freshest and most accurate information as to the Russian transformation of their cavalry, who are now all armed with rifle and bayonet. The object, of course, is to attain independent action of cavalry, and prevent, what occurred in the Franco-German war, bodies of cavalry being checked by parties of infantry. It is worthy of note that while the Russians, who have had the latest experience of war, have transformed their cavalry for capabilities of dismounted work; the Germans, though their cavalry are armed with rifles, assert a stout belief in the superiority of mounted work in action. What cavalry can do in the way of extensive raids and even greater operations is shown not only by Colonel Trench in his lucid accounts of the great cavalry raids of Stuart, Morgan, and Forrest in the American war, and of Gourkas in 1877; but something of the kind is going on before our eyes in the action of Sir Herbert Stewart's force, which, though not purely cavalry, is at least a mounted force and a force well mounted for the country it has to operate in. The Horse Marine is no longer a jest, he is a valuable fact. But if we may be proud of the working of our cavalry after Tel-el-Kebir and in the Soudan we must also remember that to form these forces we have had to utilise the greater part of our small efficient cavalry force and disorganise the regiments left at home. It is rather surprising that we have no South African cavalry experiences of value, though it will probably not be long before Sir Charles Warren shows the use of troopers of intelligence who can use the rifle as well as the sword. The Cape sportsmen are very apt at knee-haltering, and otherwise training their horses to stay of themselves where left. The great difficulty with mounted riflemen or with cavalry acting as rifles is that as a rule barely more than one-half to two-thirds of the force can be used for skirmishing on foot, and the others being occupied in holding horses can be of no use in any way. But the Boers in the Transvaal did not appear to be at all hampered in this way. They had of course great superiority of numbers, but they could hardly have brought up at once so many men as they did to the attack of the Majuba Hill if they had had to leave half their force horseholding. Again cavalry can do little on foot with a long sword trailing behind, and great things in dismounting work can hardly be accomplished until the sword is, as it should be, attached to the saddle, and the man has his rifled carbine at hand for dismounted work. This and many other urgent questions are considered and threshed out in the volume before us, and it forms a worthy member of that valuable series of works on military subjects which are being so ably edited by Colonel Brackenbury.

"THE PUBLISHER AND BOOKBUYER'S JOURNAL."†

The Publisher and Bookbuyer's Journal is a weekly record (price twopence only) of current literature; and for the large body of Indian readers we have never seen any publication more useful or handy. It gives a brief but careful précis of every book, pamphlet, and periodical published during the week, and thus enables every bookbuyer to know exactly what to order. To the politician the weekly lists of Parliamentary Papers, Bills, &c., will prove most useful. This journal supplies an obvious want, and must certainly prove a great success.

Relations," as well as some other works illustrating the dark corners of that subject of which he is an acknowledged master. But he appears to be equally at home amid the intricacies of German metaphysics as in the mazes of Roman law; and his latest work is a capital rendering of Herr Direktor Felix Boas' answer to Dr. Rudolph von Jhering's celebrated Der Kampf um's recht. "Is the Battle for Right an Imperative Duty?" That is the question answered vehemently in the affirmative by Von Jhering. "Not so," says Mr. Rattigan; "not the battle for right, but the battle against wrong is a moral duty." That this is the teaching of Christianity is obvious, and this is how Mr. Rattigan concludes his argument:—

Thus, then, on our part, we set in opposition to the maxim, "In battle shalt thou find thy right," this other maxim: "Respect the right of others even where thy own is violated." To impress this respect for right and law upon our children from their earliest youth upwards, that they may be a constant example to the lower and less educated classes of society, that is our task, and that is our moral duty! We shall then have done the best in our power for battling with wrong, and for the decrease of the latter.

PERPLEXITIES OF ORIENTAL HISTORY.—On Thursday last a paper on this subject was read by Major-General Sir F. J. Goldsmid, C.B., K.S.I., before the Royal Historical Society, Mr. Hyde Clark occupying the chair. Starting with the proposition that Oriental history, as told by Oriental historians, was, for the majority of readers in Europe, a study of little attraction, Sir F. Goldsmid proceeded to show the difficulties with which our writers had to contend in presenting the same in a form suitable to a home public. To the writer of history the two great difficulties to be surrounded were the production to the mind of a living representation of the hero of the hour, and the collection from the conflicting accounts of chroniclers and commentators of a trustworthy narrative as regarded dates, occurrences, and all essential details. A third requirement was the production of a history not simply lucid and readable, but interesting and attractive also. Historical personages and events frequently appeared in England on the boards of the theatres invested with a traditional character, but kings and queens, princes, and heroes had all to undergo the fashioning necessary to adapt them to the tastes of the playgoers. Vice and virtue were heightened or toned down to suit the dramatist's purpose, but if the realism of the present day were applied to historical personages and events, the stage might, indeed, become a great instructor of youth. One practical result, however, of some value to the student of history might be obtained from attention to the dramatic literature of a country. Each newly-produced play presumably illustrated the degree of knowledge attained on the particular subject it handled. Sir Frederick Goldsmid proceeded to give examples of contradictory statements in Eastern annals, where reference was made to one and the same occurrence, and urged the propriety of describing with minuteness the character of Oriental as well as European heroes. He also maintained the necessity of imparting to Oriental history the charm of style which had been so successfully applied to the narratives of Western States.

SILVER.—There has been a good demand for bar silver during the week on Indian account, the arrivals per Medway and Strabo finding buyers at 46 15-16d. per ounce, which is 1-16d. less than last week's quotation. The Mexican dollars by the former ship have been placed at 48 11-16d. per ounce.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY COMPANY.—The board of directors regret to announce that it has been found necessary to postpone the issue of the warrants for payment of the final dividend in order that the Secretary of State for India and the board may receive despatches to settle a question which has arisen in India on the accounts of the Fire Insurance and River Flotilla Reserve Funds. The board had reason to believe that the Government of India had accepted the accounts relating to these funds, and consequently the accounts were, with others, accepted by the board by a telegram on December 17 last; but by a telegram from the agent received on the night of December 31, the board were informed that the correctness of the settlement of these accounts had been called in question by the Government of India. The board have since been in communication with the agent by telegraph and directly with the Secretary of State for India on the subject, and they are now informed by a letter from the Under Secretary of State, dated January 13, 1885, that "the Earl of Kimberley in Council is unable, pending the receipt of complete reports from India for which his lordship has telegraphed to sanction any larger payment to the company than Rs. 1,18,619." The amount which the company was to have been paid and which included some surplus profits was Rs. 1,53,881, leaving Rs. 35,262, as the amount in difference between the Government and the company. The board will not allow any unavoidable delay to take place

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1885.

THE ATTEMPT TO COERCE LORD DUFFERIN FROM DOWNING-STREET:—LORD KIMBERLEY TO THE RESCUE.

THE declaration of Mr. Chamberlain that he has "no fear of the Three F's in England, Scotland, or Ireland," as well as the bold and aggressive way in which both Sir Charles Dilke and Mr. Chamberlain have, without being repudiated by their colleagues, unfolded a Radical land policy for this country, lend colour to the Calcutta rumours that severe pressure from home is being brought to bear on Lord Dufferin to force him to pass Lord Ripon's Bengal Tenancy Bill. It is doubtless the policy of Mr. Chamberlain and the extreme Radicals to do all they can to induce their more moderate colleagues to become accomplices in their schemes of spoliation. They are just now full of glee at the exceedingly uncomfortable position of Lord Hartington, who is becoming daily more and more irretrievably compromised by the audacious Socialistic speeches of his Birmingham ally; and nothing would be more delightful for this faction, or more promising for the success of their designs here in England, than the triumph of seeing Lord Dufferin driven up in a corner by positive orders from Downing-street, and forced to pass a law that outrages all his own speeches on the subject. Confiscation in Bengal, a fitting sequel to what Lord Derby euphemistically terms "a revolutionary remedy for a revolutionary state of affairs" in Ireland, would be an appropriate prelude to the real campaign on which the hearts of Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Charles Dilke are clearly set. It is hoped that Whigs will not take alarm at spoliation, of which the victims are only Indian noblemen and gentlemen; and it will be a clear gain to have implicated Liberal statesmen like Lord Dufferin and Lord Kimberley in an Indian measure, which will serve admirably as a precedent in England.

We have no hesitation in saying that, if the Viceroy were anyone but Lord Dufferin, there would be a great deal of vraisemblance about these rumours. The masterful utterances of Mr. Chamberlain at Birmingham, and again at Ipswich, on the coming Liberal policy in regard to landlords in England, seem clearly to point to the supremacy of the Radical element in the Cabinet just now; and it may be that Lord Hartington has been intimidated into consenting to what Lord Salisbury wittily called "the policy of abolishing his own father." But Lord Dufferin will belie the universal opinion that has been formed of him by all parties in this country, by Radicals as much as by Tories, and will besmire a splendid reputation, well-earned by a long and most honourable career, if he allows himself to be bullied and brow-beaten into a course which his conscience must disapprove. Moreover, we are confident that his Excellency has only to stand firm for a very short time during the storm of Radical attack, to rally to his support all the forces of law and order in England. Violent efforts are being made by Mr. Chamberlain and his Radical allies to make Lord Ripon's return the occasion for a demonstration against the rights of property in India, which may hereafter be utilised in preparing the way for a similar crusade in England. We shall doubtless hear some tall Socialistic talk at the banquet to Lord Ripon at the National Liberal Club, which is to be graced by the presence of Mr. Chamberlain, Sir Charles Dilke, and Mr. Bright. For a time the heathen will rage furiously, and the people imagine a vain thing. But the very violence of these efforts—which doubtless have found their echoes in the Calcutta rumours to which we have referred—will serve, we trust, to direct the attention of the just and honest people of England, to the deeds of oppression to which the Government of Lord Dufferin is being urged by an unscrupulous faction at home. The efforts of the London Committee formed to oppose the Bengal Tenancy Bill have already done much to arouse popular feeling on the point—as has been shown by the numerous articles in the London and provincial Press, that have lately appeared on the side of justice to the zemindars and protection for the ryots. We are glad to learn that the Executive of that Committee will meet on Friday to concert active measures for meeting the present emergency; and we trust that they will be supported, not only by all Anglo-Indians, but also by all those fair-minded Englishmen who do not wish to see Bengal delivered over as a prey to the tax-gatherer and the money-lender. The monster meetings of zemindars and ryots, held simultaneously at Calcutta, Gaya, and other places on December 19, prove clearly enough that all classes of the Native community are united as one man against the Bill. It is denounced by a united Press; indeed, it is difficult to say whether firmer and more determined hostility is evinced by Liberal-Conservative organs like the Englishman and the Indian Daily News, or by such staunch Radicals as the Indian Statesman. As far as Bengal itself is concerned—the unhappy vile corpus for these Socialistic experiments—it is not too much to say that against the Bill is arrayed the whole Native community, official and non-official, the whole non-official English community, and all the officials untrammelled by bonds of official discipline; with every sentiment of honour, urging the preservation of British faith pledged in the Permanent Settlement, every sentiment of humanity, every sentiment of justice; while on the side of the Bill we have two or three visionary doctrinaires, a sentimental regard for the amour propre of Lord Ripon, and a partisan desire to rehabilitate the memory of a Radical Viceroy.

THE last issue of the Gazette of India contains a notification of the "desertion" from the Poona Military Prison on the 19th ult. of Private J. Dalby, of the 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade, and Gunner H. Smith, of the D Battery, 2nd Brigade, Royal Artillery.

THE VICEROY'S PROPOSED MODIFICATION OF THE TENANCY BILL.

A RECENT telegram from Calcutta informed us that "it is understood that the Viceroy has resolved to make some important modifications in the Bengal Tenancy Bill. Their nature has not yet transpired, but they will probably be found to include provisions declaring that occupancy rights shall not be transferable, and giving a wider latitude for the enhancement of rents by private contract. The twenty years' presumption rule will probably be retained, and the entire measure is likely to be extended to Government estates." A later telegram has informed us that the zemindars are not satisfied with the proposed modification of the Bill, and Reuter tells us briefly that the agitation against the Bill is on the increase.

It will be seen that it is assumed that the Viceroy has already found time to study the Bill, and to propose certain changes, of which it is said that their nature has not yet transpired, although a detailed account of the proposed changes immediately follows. It is rather mysterious that specific changes can be thus anticipated when their nature has not transpired; but it must be remembered that Lord Dufferin is an Irishman, and most people know the story of the Irishman's "dead secret." There is, however, some reason for supposing that some of the suggested alterations of the Bill may be due to the advice of another eminent Irishman, Mr. Justice Field, of the Calcutta High Court, who has devoted so much time and thought to the Tenancy Bill in all its stages. It will probably not have escaped notice that Mr. Justice Field was one of Lord Dufferin's fellow-passengers on the voyage from England to Bombay; and tidings have reached this country that Mr. Field was frequently to be seen in long and deep consultation with the new Viceroy. It is well known that Mr. Justice Field was in constant communication with Lord Ripon at Government House in Calcutta so long as Lord Ripon and his colleagues were prepared to accept his advice. But when they determined to adopt wild and revolutionary measures Mr. Field was no longer invited to Government House. It is, therefore, not surprising that Mr. Field should have taken his opportunity, as Lord Dufferin's fellow-passenger, to discuss the merits of the amended Bill; and we shall endeavour by a reference to Mr. Field's Minute of 11th September, 1884, which has been published in the Gazette of India, dated 11th October, 1884, to indicate what opinions have been expressed by him, up to the latest date available to us, on the Bill as amended by the Select Committee of the Legislative Council last year.

As Mr. Justice Field's Minute extends to 157 paragraphs, with an Appendix, it is not possible within our limits to do full justice to it, or to advert to any but the most salient points. The telegram tells us that it is proposed to give a wider latitude for the enhancement of rents by private contract. Mr. Field's opinion on this point is decisive. He says, in paragraph 125 of his Minute, "I cannot approve of the general provisions by which landlords and tenants are debarred from adjusting their mutual relations by private contract." He says that, according to his own wide experience in Eastern Bengal, the ryots are fully competent to protect their own interests in matters of contract, and the few isolated instances of unfair contracts (which were at once disputed) afford no sufficient evidence to justify those disabling provisions of the Bill by which the whole agricultural population is to be declared incompetent to contract with their landlords. It would be equally reasonable to say that because there are annually, in any country, a certain number of cases in which contracts or wills have been made under undue influence, the entire community should be disabled from making contracts or wills. And after adverting to the hundreds of thousands of registered perpetual leases which were executed in Eastern Bengal owing to the increased wealth and prosperity of the ryots in 1877-78, 1878-79, and 1879-80, he observes that there is no suggestion that the persons who obtained these leases were unable to protect their own interests. They are acknowledged as indications of healthy progress and prosperity, and furnish a powerful argument against legislative interference with persons who are able and willing to manage their own affairs. "It is a curious comment upon nearly a century's British administration of Bengal, that while in 1793 contracts between zemindars and ryots were considered to be the great panacea, we are now, in 1884, proposing to go to the opposite extreme, and prohibit landlords and tenants from adjusting their own relations by mutual agreement between themselves. One result of this provision will be to force the parties into the civil courts upon every occasion. The enormous amount of litigation which will thus be engendered cannot but be productive of the worst consequences, affecting the harmony of society and the morality of the community, and must seriously tax the resources of the state to find suitable agency for its disposal." It may be readily believed that Lord Dufferin gave a willing ear to such advice as this from an eminent Indian lawyer.

With regard to another point noticed in the telegram, that occupancy rights shall not be transferable, it will be found that Mr. Field, whilst he adheres to the opinion which he expressed many years ago, that the occupancy holding should be made transferable, now proposes to surround it with so many restrictions that the right of transfer will be limited within very narrow and harmless bounds. He would insist that the transferee should be a bona fide cultivator. He says that "if the occupancy right is transferable to the members of every class of the community, the competition of capital is introduced. The improvidence and thriftlessness of the ryot class are undoubted; secured in their position they will indulge their national indolence, and nothing will be laid up for the future. For years of drought and scarcity they will borrow. Their holdings will be mortgaged, and high interest will swell the incumbrances until a sale becomes inevitable. A large number of holdings will thus come into the market. The mahajun, or money-lender, and the prosperous lawyer will successfully compete with the landlord, and having purchased the occupancy right, they will virtually secure a competition-rent, by exacting a fine, or salami, from every tenant whom they will admit to possession. If the purchasing class be limited to actual cultivators, we shall get rid of the risk of a competition-rent being introduced, the pernicious effects of which have been remarkably illustrated in other countries."

We have no more space available at present for further extracts from Mr. Field's valuable Minute, but it will be obvious that the telegram, which was perhaps inspired, is curiously consistent with those opinions which Mr. Field may have impressed on his fellow-traveller, although it was delicately stated that the nature of the changes which the Viceroy desired to make in the Bill had not yet transpired.

The Queen has been pleased to approve the undermentioned admissions to Her Majesty's Indian Medical Service:—

BENGAL.

To be Surgeons.—John Henry Tull Walsh, Harold Hendley, George Herbert Fink, Hormasjee Edaljee Banatvala, William George Patrick Alpin.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

The Maharajah of Johhpore, the Maharajah of Bhurtpore, and the Raja of Faridkhot paid formal visits to the Viceroy at Government House, Calcutta, on Tuesday, the 22nd ult.

A telegram received in Calcutta from Purneah states that the Judge has upheld the conviction of Mohur Gope for misappropriation. The case against the sub-Inspector of Police for the illegal arrest of Mr. Walker, the indigo planter, will shortly be appealed to the High Court.

The cricket team from Behar played Calcutta on the 26th and 27th ult., the visitors on the first innings making only 140 against Calcutta's 419. Mr. Patteson for Calcutta made 197, the highest individual score on record here. In the second innings Behar lost three wickets for 82.

It is an open secret, the Englishman states, that the Government have sanctioned a cadastral survey of Calcutta, which will cost some five lakhs of rupees. There can be no doubt that a survey is urgently required, and if it includes the structural improvements which are now under consideration its value will be greatly enhanced.

With reference to the petition recently presented by ryots to the Viceroy, requesting that a representative from their body be appointed to the Council in connection with the Rent Bill, a courteous reply has been made to the effect that such an appointment at this stage would tend to retard the progress of the measure.

The Englishman states that Lord Dufferin is already exercising a calming influence on the troubled waters of Indian controversy. One of the most regrettable incidents in connection with the discussion on the Rent Bill was a passage between a Government servant of high position and a legal dignitary. Lord Dufferin has now been able to restore a good understanding between the two opponents.

A TELEGRAM to the Englishman announces that the tea-planters in South Sylhet have invited Lord Randolph Churchill to visit their district with a view to having their interests properly represented. The general feeling on the subject is that great benefit would result if Lord Randolph were to visit the district, and that the British public would get such an insight into the subject of tea as would give an impetus to the industry such as has never been given before.

The Englishman congratulates the authorities of the Eastern Bengal Railway on the efforts that are being made to improve the house accommodation of their employes. Major Conway-Gordon is endeavouring to improve the lot of the men generally. A club, cricket, and lawn-tennis are being started as the first step towards this end. On some of the railways (the Calcutta paper remarks) the men enjoy many social privileges which ought to go far to compensate them for the hardships of Indian life, and the improvement which is being effected on the Eastern Bengal Railway in this respect is "deserving of cordial recognition."

MOFUSSIL NOTES.

We have much pleasure in testifying to the excellence of the seeds supplied by the Agri-Horticultural Society. In our case they have germinated successfully.

THERE are just as good giants in these as in those days, and there is still hope for our generation when we hear of that popular old planter, Mr. Fred. Collingridge, the well-known proprietor of the Daoudpore concern, making young horses in the English hunting field and getting a couple of falls in one short week without damage, and he aged 75!

We trust the local volunteers will turn up in force at the coming Silligori meeting and support it to the best of their power. We understand Mr. Robertson Pughe will act as Secretary for the amusement part of the meet, and a better choice could not have been made. There will be cricket, lawn tennis, and Government having sanctioned mounted rifles for the N.B.V.R., carbines, jackets, and headstalls will be served out at the meet, and mounted drill taught.

MADRAS.

OWING to the late heavy rains, serious floods have occurred at Cuddalore, in the Madras Presidency, resulting in great loss of life and destruction of property.

MR. BREEKS-ATKINSON, the Collector of Tinnevely, in the Madras Presidency, has been dismissed from the Civil Service, for borrowing money of natives resident in his district.

A SERIOUS outbreak of Moplahs, a fanatical sect of Mahomedans, has occurred at Mullappoorum. The European troops were called out, and in an encounter which occurred one European soldier was killed and nine Moplahs were shot dead.

THE annual matches between Madras and Bangalore commenced on the 29th ult. Bangalore won single and double rackets easily. The cricket match came off on the 30th. The Christmas season proved very gay. There is a large number of visitors in the station.

"A NATIVE THINKER" (a nom de plume adopted by Rajah Sir T. Madava Row) writes to a Madras paper:—"England may be proud of many things in the range of her past and present history, but of none more than of so eminent a pro-consul as Lord Ripon, whose work in India reflects the highest honour on England's civilisation, philosophy, philanthropy, and on human nature itself."

THE questions arising out of the Blavatsky Coulomb letters are being considered by a committee of Theosophists at Madras. The committee has declared Madame Blavatsky to be the victim of a conspiracy. The question as to what course should be followed with regard to Madame Coulomb is reserved pending further investigations.

DEFINITE orders have been issued by the Madras Government regarding the destruction of elephants, under which permission for shooting will only be granted in the case of rogue elephants, and in those cases in which the numbers of wild elephants may be found to be getting so numerous as to be a cause of annoyance or terror to ryots and others. Applications of any other nature will meet with absolute refusal on the part of Government. Orders to this effect have been issued to all the Collectors, and the following paragraph has been added to the Standing Orders of the Board of Revenue:—"Permission to shoot elephants not being rogues will invariably be refused unless when it is reported that they are dangerously numerous."

SAYS the Madras Mail:—"The citizens of Cuddapah have resolved to erect a Ripon Memorial Hall, and have telegraphed to this effect to Lord Ripon. Two years ago they resolved to erect a Horsley Memorial Hall, and a great many subscriptions were collected, but most of them were on paper only, and when it came to the sweet sorrow of parting with the money the whole thing collapsed. We wonder whether the Ripon Memorial Hall will share the same fate. We hope not, if it is only that the Cuddapah folk should show that they can do more than lip service. At present, however, it would seem as if Cuddapah is to boast of more Memorial Halls on paper than any other mofussil town. During the last two years we have heard of a Horsley Memorial Hall, a Gribble Public Gardens, and now of a Ripon Hall. There was also a talk of a club and literary institute. It is not difficult to erect memorials when the materials are of air."

BOMBAY.

H.E. SIR JAMES FERGUSSON proceeded to Poona on the 1st inst., and, accompanied by Lord Randolph Churchill, paid a flying visit to Beejapur.

WE hear that the ceremony of commencing the new Baroda Waterworks will be performed by the Maharajah on the 8th instant.

H.H. THE MAHARAJAH HOLKAR has subscribed Rs.10,000 to the Ripon Memorial Fund. H.H. the Regent of Kolapore has subscribed Rs.1,500.

MR. W. W. LOCH, C.S., is appointed to act as Collector and Magistrate of the Tanna District from the date of the departure of Mr. W. A. East, C.S.

AMONGST the patents, specifications of which have just been filed, is one by Hasm Virji Patel, of Old Nagpada, Bombay, for a design for a portable bungalow without masonry foundation.

MR. W. B. MULOCK, C.S., is appointed to be on special duty to prepare the report of the Factory Commission, and on completion of that duty he is to act as Collector and Magistrate of the Surat district during the absence of Mr. A. Keyser.

LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL arrived in Bombay per mail steamer Nizam on the 30th ultimo. He proceeded to Poona on the 1st instant. His lordship is a guest at Government House, Parel.

Before he left India Lord Ripon contributed to the Datavya Bharata Kuryulaya Rs.1,000 in aid of the English translation of the Mahabharata, which is being published by Babu Protap Chandra Roy. His lordship expressed his "cordial sympathy" with the undertaking.

THE stamp duty payable under article 50(b) of schedule 1 of the Indian Stamp Act on a proxy executed by a female empowering any person to vote at any one election of municipal commissioners, held under the Bombay District Municipal Act Amendment Act, 1885, is reduced to one anna.

THE Duke and Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, who are travelling incognito as the Baron and Baroness von Malchin, and Don Carlos, who is travelling as the Duke of Castilia, arrived in Bombay on the 25th ult. by the Austro-Hungarian Lloyd's steamer Derenice.

WHEN Mr. Mulock has completed the preparation of the report of the Factory Commission, he will act, during the absence of Mr. Keyser, as Collector and Magistrate of the district of Surat.

A PART of the Bombay Civil Jail is to be used as a workhouse for female vagrants. The superintendent of the Common Jail, criminal side, has been appointed Governor of the new workhouse.

ANOTHER firm in Bombay is being converted into a limited liability company. It is that of Messrs. Marcks and Company; and the capital is fixed at Rs.4,00,000, of which three-fourths has already been subscribed. The remaining shares—1,000 in number, of Rs.100 each—are therefore the only ones issued to the public. Mr. C. R. Marcks, the founder and proprietor of the business, who guarantees, as the vendor a dividend of nine per cent. for the first three years, is to act during this period as managing director.

BURMA.

SERIOUS disturbances have occurred about Mandalay Bhamo has been captured by a Chinese Chief at the head of 300 Chinese, aided by the Kachiens. The assailants have taken formal possession of Bhamo and the adjacent country, declaring it to be Chinese territory.

GREAT consternation is said to prevail in Mandalay, and in the regions roundabout, as a celebrated hairy family have disappeared! It is not known which way they have gone, but it is thought that by watching the steamers passing the frontier some clue may be found.

THE Rangoon correspondent of a Bombay paper telegraphs:—"In quashing the conviction of a Burman by the District Magistrate of Thayetmyo for dacoity, the Judicial Commissioner comments strongly on the apparent prejudging of the case against the appellant when there was really no evidence against him, rendering the magistrate's estimate of the evidence afterwards recorded valueless, and the conviction of the appellant almost a foregone conclusion. The appellant had been kept two months and eighteen days in close confinement with no reliable evidence forthcoming, and during that period the District Magistrate recorded his conviction that the appellant was guilty, and issued peremptory orders to the police that they must produce the necessary evidence. It was difficult to believe that the District Magistrate's eyes were so completely blinded to the extremely tainted character of the evidence adduced, and the Judicial Commissioner had little hesitation in saying that the appellant had not had an impartial trial, and in setting aside his conviction."

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the construction on a fresh site, at a cost of Rs. 25,000, of the regimental lines, at Begumpett, Secunderabad, at present occupied by the 11th Regiment Native Infantry, the present locality having been found unsuitable on sanitary grounds. Plans and estimates have accordingly been called for.

The 25th Regiment N.L.I., consisting of 5 officers, one warrant officer, 16 native officers, 725 men, 90 followers, and 5 horses, proceeded to Poona by two special trains, one at 7.40 P.M. and the other at 8.45 P.M. The following are the officers' names:—Lieut. Col. J. Withers, Lieut. L. G. Beckham, Lieut. R. P. Colomb, Lieut. G. H. Turner, and Surgeon W. A. Barren.

LIEUT.-COL. J. G. E. GRIFFITH, second in command 16th N.I., is appointed commandant, vice Colonel Pierce, who vacates the appointment on succession to the Colonel's allowance. Consequently upon this appointment, Major J. T. Carruthers is appointed second in command, and Captain W. H. Lyster, wing officer 24th N.I., wing commander.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL G. LUCK, C.B., proceeded from Kurrachee to Jacobabad on the 23rd ult., on the annual inspection of the regiments in the district. Lieutenant-Colonel M. H. Nicholson, 30th N.I., commands the stations at Kurrachee during General Luck's absence.

It is understood that proposals have recently been made by certain military authorities to discontinue the system of maintaining lock hospitals at the expense of the State, and that, as an experimental measure, it has been decided to close these hospitals at the following stations in the Bengal Presidency with effect from the 1st proximo:—Chakrata, Allahabad, Delhi, Murree, Kassauli, Meeran Meer, Meerut, Peshawur, Rewal Pindi, and Cawnpore.

FOLLOWING the good example set by General Hardinge of endeavouring to get employment in civil employ for discharged sepoys of the Bombay Native Army, Sir Herbert Macpherson, at Allahabad, had commenced to work in the same direction with very gratifying success. It has been decided to invite General Officers Commanding Divisions and Districts to form committees at the headquarter stations of their commands with a view to the establishment of Registry Offices, in which the names of candidates for employment should be recorded, besides opening communications with heads of departments and other employers of labours.

A reference was recently made in these columns to certain models of native soldiers which under the orders of the Government of India are to be sent to the London Exhibition of 1886. The following are the corps which have been selected for this purpose by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India and the Government of the Punjab:—Bengal Regiments: The 11th Bengal Lancers, the 3rd Bengal Cavalry, the 11th Native Infantry (Hindu and Mahomedan), the 15th Native Infantry (Sikh), the 20th Native Infantry (Pathan), the 3rd Goorkhas (Goorkha). Punjab Frontier Force Regiments: 1st Punjab Cavalry, 3rd Sikh Infantry. A mountain battery of the Punjab Frontier Force will also be selected to furnish specimens.

DECEPTION PRACTISED BY THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT.—The Surabhi has the following:—Perhaps no ruler on the face of the earth deceives his subjects as the English rulers of India try to do theirs; they have had the Queen's liberal promises proclaimed throughout the length and breadth of India, but have all along been deceiving us by not adequately fulfilling those promises. They say that they appoint natives as Members of Council only to represent the cause of the natives, but they generally appoint men who are foolish, ignorant, devoid of independence of spirit, and well versed in the art of flattery. We ask, is this not deception? Accordingly, we can detect more instances of the propensity of deceiving the natives in the proceedings of English Government in India. It is a satisfaction to know that Lord Ripon did his best to make the Government free from these deceptions.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

INDIAN TEA.—Messrs. G. White and Co. report as follows on the Tea Market, from the 8th to the 15th inst.:—There has again been a large quantity of inferior quality brought to auction, which has been comparatively neglected except at low prices. All teas with point have met with attention, and have realised firmer rates, especially tippy Pekoes over 1s. 4d., which may be quoted 1d. to 2d. per lb. dearer since the holidays. Several invoices of fine Darjeelings were well competed for, and prices obtained showed an advance in some instances of 2d. per lb. on the previous invoices of the same marks, which is attributable to the scarcity of choice flavoured Indian and Ceylon growths. The market closes with a hardening tendency for all good to finest possessing quality, but a very flat tone for undesirable descriptions. Ceylon.—There has been a somewhat varied assortment consisting chiefly of small parcels without anything much worthy of notice. Some little loss from the Blackstone Estate with fine flavour realised high rates, but on the whole other marks sold at about previous rates.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes welling and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reduce with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 28, 1885.

Notes of the Week.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, January 9th; Madras and Allahabad, January 7th; Calcutta, January 6th; Ceylon, January 6th; Burma, January 2nd.

THE week's telegrams from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times in regard to the Russian treatment of our Afghan Boundary Commission are disquieting, and we fear they will continue to be so until Sir Peter Lamsden is safe back again in India or Persia. Of course, so long as we have British officers actually in Afghanistan, so long shall we be able to know something of what is really going on in Central Asia. That is in itself an advantage, and is, indeed, one of the many reasons why the Gladstonian "scuttle" from Kandahar must ever be condemned by every loyal Indian politician. But the peculiar conditions under which the Boundary Commission are present in Afghanistan render them always liable to be made the butt of Russian intrigue, and make us dependent on the fickle goodwill of the Afghans to an extent that cannot but cause grave anxiety.

THE telegrams bring us further rumours of proposed modifications in the iniquitous Rent Bill. But they are mere rumours and nothing more—designed, probably, by some friends of Mr. Ilbert, to lull the opposition to the Bill into a fatal sense of security by false hopes. If all the modifications that have now been hinted at were really made, nothing would remain of the Bill; and Lord Dufferin is far too conscientious a statesman to pass a mere dummy Bill, and to incur all the odium of persisting in an unrighteous policy for no good purpose whatever.

THERE are further reports of intended French interference in the affairs of Burmah from the side of Tonquin.

WE learn, from the Memorial to Government adopted at the great meeting of zemindars at Arrah last Sunday, that the result of the introduction of the Bengal Tenancy Bill has been to lower the selling value of land in Behar to less than half what it was! And who, we ask, is one penny the richer for this frightful depreciation?

ON Friday last the Glasgow News—a paper which is well known to possess special and authoritative sources of information in regard to the Indian Government—made a most important disclosure, which confirms in a remarkable way the rumours that are prevalent not only in Calcutta, but also here in England in Anglo-Indian circles. The Glasgow News says:—

The recent speeches of Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Charles Dilke sufficiently indicate that the Radical party intend to make a sweeping reform of the Land Laws the bait wherewith to catch the votes of the agricultural labourers at the coming general election. According to private advices which I have received from Calcutta, the determination of Lord Dufferin to pass the Bengal Tenancy Bill and then refer it to the Home Government has been come to in deference to the desire of the Cabinet, the Radical section of which wish to show the new electorate by some more recent measure than the Irish Land Act the lines upon which they are prepared to go in regard to land legislation. Some surprise is felt that so strong an administrator as Lord Dufferin should have proved so amenable to the influence of the political wirepullers; but it is believed that the point was decided upon prior to his departure for India, and before he had had an opportunity of judging for himself of the strong public feeling entertained by the most influential classes there against the measure.

If the latter part of this statement be true we trust the whole Press of India will join us in calling on Lord Dufferin boldly to throw off shackles that ought never to have been placed upon him. His Excellency can point to published declarations made by himself to the effect that he would approach the Indian land question with an open and unprejudiced mind, which are at least as binding upon him as any Downing-street "understandings" forced on him by Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Charles Dilke.

THE statement of the Glasgow News is entirely confirmed by the extraordinary and most injudicious efforts that are being made by the extreme Radical faction in England to give a special political significance to Lord Ripon's home-coming. The Observer, perhaps the most cultured, and certainly not the least influential, of the Liberal organs of the day, on Sunday last published a powerful leader, which we reproduce elsewhere, condemning this intrigue in the strongest terms from the point of view of moderate and conscientious Liberalism.

THE Observer rightly ridicules the notion of a Radical clique inventing "a new mode of controversial warfare" by "dining at their opponents." It points out that Lord Ripon "brought himself into sharp collision with the Indian official class; he quarrelled with his judges; he alienated all his own countrymen, and he now returns home, leaving behind him a legacy of bitterness in the minds of Europeans and Asiatics alike." "A Viceroy of India," our contemporary concludes, "who does this, whatever be his private virtues, has failed in administration; and no amount of complimentary banqueting can efface his failure. All that such efforts can achieve is to confirm the growing and most mischievous practice of transferring disputed questions of Indian administration to the arena of English party politics."

LORD STANLEY OF ALDERLEY, in a speech that has become famous, once described the policy of the Ilbert Bill as a "Machiavellian policy;" for, as his lordship pointed out, it was a mere feint, designed to produce dissension among the natural defenders of the Permanent Settlement, and thereby to weaken the opposition to the main object of the Ripon Government, which was to confiscate the "unearned increment" in Bengal. The disclosures of the Glasgow News trace this same Machiavellian policy one step further back. It now appears that the Bengal zemindars are to be despoiled, merely to give Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Charles Dilke another precedent for despoiling English landlords.

WE understand that the Earl of Wemyss has intimated his intention of bringing the subject of the Bengal Tenancy Bill, and the Indian land question generally, under the consideration of the House of Lords shortly after the meeting of Parliament. To the agricultural community of India nothing could be more satisfactory than the prospect of having their grievances and their perils thoroughly investigated and sifted before the most skilled and competent tribunal in the whole world. For any knotty social or political question a debate in the House of Lords is, by universal consent, one of the best of illuminants. The authority of such a debate on any question affecting land is admitted by everyone; while its public interest and weight must, in the case of an Indian land question, be enhanced by the fact that not even the most carping of critics could allege self-interest as a motive or bias in the conclusions arrived at.

AN "emergent" meeting of the Executive of the London Committee formed to oppose the Bengal Tenancy Bill was held last Friday at the rooms of the Indian Constitutional Association in Victoria-street, Westminster. A large number of gentlemen connected with Bengal were present. The proceedings were, of course, private; but we learn that further active measures were resolved upon, with the view of urging on the attention of Her Majesty's Government, and the British public at large, the iniquitous and impolitic character of the Bill.

WE are glad to learn that Mr. P. V. Ramaswami Raju, B.A., Tamil and Telugu lecturer at University College, London, has been appointed to lecture on Telugu, at Oxford, during this term, to the classes in connection with the Indian Civil Service. Our readers will remember some valuable letters from the pen of Mr. Raju on the subject of the "National Anthem for India" movement, in which Mr. Raju has taken much interest.

MESSRS. W. H. ALLEN and Co. will shortly issue a new "History of Hindustan." In spite of the numerous books on the subject, it is thought that there is still room for a work which, without being prolix, shall bring out in some sufficient detail the evolution through which the people of Upper India have passed. The author, Mr. H. G. Keene, formerly Judge of Agra, is one from whom, as well by reason of long residence in India as by literary experience, a new and useful treatment of the subject may be looked for.

THE Englishman has the following account of the Calcutta Freight Market, corrected to January 6:—

Except by steamers for London we have hardly any business to record during last week. Sailing vessels generally are held for an advance on last rates. Our unfixed tonnage amounts to-day to 38,000 tons.

THE following on the Calcutta Indigo Market is taken from Messrs. W. Moran and Co.'s Market Report:—

Two public sales have been held during the past week, at which 2,745 chests were offered, and 2,496 chests sold. The improvement noted in our last circular has been maintained, and prices are again rather higher, especially for qualities, ranging from Rs. 200 to Rs. 250 per factory maund, and also for the better qualities of Oudes.

THE same firm gives the following account of the Calcutta Tea Market:—

Since our last no business has been transacted, owing to the holidays. Sales will be held on the 7th instant, consisting of 13,000 chests.

THE Times of India has the following obituary till the arture of the mail, January 9:—

Captain Robert Ewan Hamilton, R.E., Executive Engineer, 4th grade, Presidency Division, Madras.

WRITING to the Madras Times a correspondent says:—"Frank and unassuming, with the tact of an accomplished man of the world, he seeks for friends—and finds them. Instead of waiting for the gradual breaking down of the official barriers which hedge in a Governor-General, he has taken time by the forelock, and wisely set them at naught. His evening rides have often a purpose in them besides that of mere healthy relaxation; when the race-course has been passed it is but a few hundred yards to Belvedere, and what more pleasant than an informal call on the Lieutenant-Governor, and then a smart trot back homewards? The figure of the Viceroy on horseback, simply attended by one of his personal staff, and an orderly, will soon be most familiar to the local riding and driving world which circles about the maidan, and Calcutta will no longer require to look at the flagstaff on Government House to know if the Viceroy is really in the capital."

MEMORIAL TO THE LATE ARCHDEACON WARLOW.—It will be remembered that shortly after the death, in January last, of the lamented George Warlow, Archdeacon of Madras, a Committee was formed to raise subscriptions for a memorial, which was to have a twofold object; first to raise a sum of money for his son, Mr. Edmund Warlow, then at Jambridge, to enable him to complete his college course; and second, to place some fitting memorial to the late Archdeacon in the Cathedral. The sum raised amounted to rather over Rs. 3,000. Of this the Committee, resolved to remit two-thirds to Mr. E. Warlow, who, although he has finished his course at Cambridge, is still too young to take orders. This has been done. With the balance the Committee resolved to purchase a lectern, designed and manufactured by Messrs. P. Orr and Sons, which has obtained for that firm the medal and certificate of merit for ecclesiastical brass ware in India at the Calcutta Exhibition. The lectern is a very chaste and handsome piece of work. On the base the following inscription is engraved in ecclesiastical character:—"To the Glory of God, and in affectionate remembrance of George Warlow, M.A., Archdeacon of Madras, from 11th September, 1881, to 25th January, 1884." On the eve of Christmas the Memorial Committee placed the lectern in the position assigned for it in the Cathedral, close to the Bishop's throne. The gilt wooden lectern which has been displaced has, with the sanction of the Government, been given to Trinity Church, Bangalore, one of the largest churches in Southern India.—Madras Times.

Telegraphic Intelligence.

The following extra telegram has been received from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Jan. 22:—

"Mr. Holt Hallett, Mr. Colquhoun's assistant, arrived at Moulmein from Bangkok. He will now proceed to Rangoon and Calcutta, to consult the Chief Commissioner and the Viceroy in the matter of the projected Burmese-Siamese Railway; afterwards going home to report on his mission to the Chambers of Commerce.

It is reported, but on doubtful authority, that the Government has resolved to re-establish the Mandalay Residency."

The following is the usual weekly telegram from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Jan. 25:—

"The Lahore Civil and Military Gazette publishes the following extract from a trans-frontier news letter:—

"It is reported by traders coming from Persia that the Russians have sent a message to the Boundary Commission through one of the Shah's generals. In this message the Russians say that the tribes bordering on Herat, as well as the people of Sarakhs and Merv, have declared themselves willing to be under Russian rule. A written treaty has accordingly been made with them, and the Russians therefore see no necessity for delimitating the frontier or sending a joint commission. The British Commission will accordingly return; but it is delayed by snow.

"Without attaching too much importance to this letter, it is useful as showing the impression made upon the Afghans by the delay in the despatch of the Russian Commission. There is, however, no doubt that the arrival of our Commission on the Herat border has had a very great effect. It has given to the Russian designs a serious check. The best proof of this is to be found in the displeasure with which it is regarded by the Russian Press. It feels that the old plan of creeping on stealthily cannot be continued while British officers are on the spot.

"It does not seem to be settled even yet when the Russian Commissioner will appear on the scene; but it is believed here that when he does his instructions will direct him to be very civil to Sir Peter Lumsden, and to conduct him to the Oxus. On their arrival there, General Zelenoy will probably say that no more can be done, and that the two Commissions had better return and present the result of their investigations to their respective Governments, who alone can settle the boundary. Finally, the Russian Mission will be ostentatiously withdrawn, and perhaps we may hear rumours that the Russian garrisons in Trans-Caspia and Turkestan are being decreased. It is, however, the general opinion in India that the British Government will commit a fatal mistake if it believes such representations, or allows itself to be induced to withdraw its officers from the north of the Paropamisian Mountains. As long as our officers are there no attempt can be made to advance against Herat secretly, and it is not considered likely that Russia is prepared to make an open advance, which would commit her to a war against England."

"According to the latest reports from Mandalay a rumour was current there that if the Chinese did not acknowledge the French right to Tonquin the French would incite the Pathays of Yunnan to rebellion. Although this rumour is probably unfounded its existence is suggestive as proving that the people of Mandalay are fully sensible of the possibility of French interference or influence making itself felt as a new factor in the Burmese question, and as adding one more argument in favour of the opinion which is all but universal in this country—that the British Government should lose no time in asserting, before it is too late, that that question must be settled by it, and by it alone.

"The reports prevalent at Rangoon last week to the effect that the Mandalay Residency was about to be re-established, and that some steamers had been suddenly ordered to proceed to Calcutta on a mysterious errand, remain unconfirmed."

"The Select Committee on the Bengal Tenancy Bill is making but slow progress, and it is believed that the report will not be ready before the middle of February. This will leave little more than a month in which to pass the Bill through the remaining stages; and unless the Government delay its departure to Simla, the discussions of the measure in full Council must necessarily be very hurried. That, however, is not a matter of very great importance, as the real battle is being fought in the Committee. Since that body sits with closed doors, nothing definite is known regarding the course of its deliberations. But it is understood that the opposition is contesting the measure clause by clause, and it is an open secret that the Supreme Government has consented to cut out or modify several of the most radical propositions of the Bengal Government.

"I have already published some of these modifications. It is now reported that the limitation of the ryot's rent to one-fifth of the value of the gross produce, calculated in food, staples, and appeal, and rode through Asia Minor to Kars. Such officers are invariably snubbed and disdainfully treated by the Governments of the day, and they are scarcely ever rewarded for their trouble; but, in spite of the foolishness of their rulers, Englishmen possess a spirit of patriotism which nothing can quench; and whenever the outposts of the Empire are menaced, a Burnaby is sure to be found in the thickest of the danger, quietly stalking the enemy."

* * * * *

Describing the conquest of the Turcomans, he says:—"It is not too much to say that if Baker and Macgregor and other officers had never put in an appearance on the north-east Persian border Russia would have been spared a whole series of Turcoman campaigns. The visits of these officers cost Russia hundreds of lives and millions of money. This is an historical fact which has never been properly examined even by the Russians themselves, and it is worth while investigating if for no other reason than showing what immense harm our Burnabys can do a rival power. . . . The Turcomans had no other course but to surrender. But the check the presence of the four English officers occasioned to Russia was something—something of which they may well be proud. If they failed to save Akbul and Merv they at least caused a dissipation of Russian energy which otherwise might have been expended in bringing our rival closer still to India. This is a great fact, and it may be made a greater, if borne well in mind by other English officers desirous of serving their country outside the narrow channel of military routine. Wherever our Empire is threatened—in Africa or in Asia, in Madagascar or Tonquin, on the Gambier or the Niger, bordering Afghanistan or the confines of Corea, thither ought English officers swiftly to make their way, to ascertain the secret operations of rivals, to expose their malevolent designs, to restore by their presence faint-hearted natives, and keep by their letters and their books England alive to her obligations to her Empire. Many officers have money. Most of them have leisure. All long for distinction. With an Empire widening every day, in every part of the earth, and daily inviting more and more the attacks of jealous rivals, it ought not to be difficult at any time for an officer to find something to do to add to its lustre and ennoble his name. . . . Yes, our Burnabys, our Bakers, our Macgregors, our Gordons, these are the real pillars of the Empire. These are the men who confer provinces on England, who risk their lives to guard them. When the world is a little older, and the working man's vote controls the statesman's opinion, then the splendid achievements of such men will be more generously appreciated, and the warm English feeling expended on torpid, stupid, unpatriotic party politicians will be directed towards heroes whose steady, undaunted patriotism, in face of public indifference and bureaucratic disdain, conveys a moral as grand as their careers. . . . All cannot be Burnabys; some must stay at home. But the stay-at-homes are in the majority; and, as votes go, the keeping of the Empire is in their hands. To be proud of that Empire, to insist upon its being Imperially governed, is to minister as much to its glory as to scouting the enemy on its menaced Eastern border. Let, then, the patriotic spirit which carried Burnaby to Khiva, and Macgregor to Herat, distinguish us on all occasions when the foreign policy of the Empire appeals for firm, decisive action. Let us exact Imperial rule from a so-called 'Imperial' Parliament. Our greatest foes are not the Russians, but the shallowness, ignorance, stupidity and indifference of our statesmen—those clay idols you and I have worshipped so long, in spite of their muddling and misrule."

MINERAL FUEL IN MADRAS.

(From Iron.)

The Presidency of Madras has hitherto suffered from the reproach of having no coal or other mineral form of fuel within its borders proper. There is, however, reason to believe that this reproach may, to some extent, be removed by the discoveries of lignite which have been made of late, and concerning which rumours have been occasionally circulated during the past two years. These deposits form the subject of an interesting communication which has been made by Mr. W. King, the officiating superintendent of the geological survey of India, to the records of that survey. It would appear that an extensive and thick deposit of lignite occurs between Pondicherry and Cuddalore, and the proposition is to compress this substance into bricks or to manufacture with it a patent fuel, and with this view a company has been formed, the engineer to which is M. Poilay, who is in fact the discoverer of the deposit. During some of the artesian boring operations in the alluvial flat between Cuddalore and Pondicherry, two thick beds of a dark brown or black deposit were struck, the substance being more a carbonaceous mud than a lignite. Subsequent borings were carried out at Bâvur, Koniakovil, and Aranganur, three villages at the corners of an acute triangular area, having its longest side, of about five miles, between Bâvur and Koniakovil. At Bâvur this carbonaceous deposit was struck at a depth of 275 feet, and was found to be 35 feet thick. At Aranganur, nearly two miles north-north-east of Bâvur, a similar deposit was met with at a depth of 203 feet, and which was about 27 feet thick. At 94 feet deeper another bed 5 feet thick was found. This last bed would seem to correspond with a very thin streak which was met with at Bâvur some 30 feet below the thick seam. At Koniakovil, which is a little over five miles to the north-east of Bâvur, a bed of lignite 50 feet thick was met with at a depth of 330 feet.

With regard to the probable yield of this deposit no accurate estimate has been arrived at, but intermediate borings have been made, which, it is assumed, have struck the main bed, and which fairly lead to the inference that the deposit is continuous over the whole triangular area. This being so, it is approximately estimated that there are several hundred million tons of fuel ready for treatment.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL ON LORD RIPON'S POLICY.

(From the Observer.)

That Lord Ripon is a highly conscientious statesman and a zealous administrator would be admitted even by his strongest opponents; but that his latest official services deserve the public honours now reported to be preparing for them might be doubted even by his least judicious friends. The project of entertaining the late Viceroy of India at a series of banquets to be given him by various Liberal Associations is not one which can commend itself, we think, to the approval of any impartial judgment. It is even permissible to doubt whether it is unreservedly approved by all those who are associated in the promotion of the project. There must be some among them at any rate who, whether supporters of Lord Ripon's Indian policy or not, are opposed on principle to the kind of demonstration for which this banquet is designed. The promoters may in a certain proportion of cases have no other motive than to express their admiration for their guest; but there can be no doubt that this is not the only or the chief sentiment by which the majority of his hosts will be actuated. The invitation to him will be not so much a compliment as a challenge. Lord Ripon will be feasted by a particular section of Liberals, not as the benefactor of India, but as the bugbear of the Conservatives. . . . He persevered in his policy with all the vehemence of that obstinate weakness which mistakes itself for strength, long after it had become clear that what he had provoked was no mere passing ebullition of European caste arrogance, but a reasoned resentment. By thus persevering he necessarily converted what should have been a purely administrative controversy into a wide pread quarrel of races; he brought himself into sharp collision with the Indian official class; he quarrelled with his Judges; he alienated all his own countrymen, and he now returns home, leaving behind him a legacy of bitterness in the minds of Europeans and Asiatics alike. A Viceroy of India who does this, whatever be his private virtues, has failed in administration; and no amount of complimentary banqueting can efface his failure. All that such efforts can achieve is to confirm the growing and most mischievous practice of transferring disputed questions of Indian administration to the arena of English party politics.

THE MARQUIS OF RIPON.

Lord and Lady Ripon arrived at Charing-cross by the tidal train on Friday night from Paris, and were met by Earl de Grey, Lord Hartington, Sir William Harcourt, Mr. Goschen, and a large party of ladies and gentlemen.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Ripon travelled from York via Harrogate to Ripon. At the latter towns addresses of welcome were presented to the ex-Viceroy of India, and at Ripon he was entertained at a luncheon. In his speeches Lord Ripon expressed the pleasure with which he found himself again at home, and said he had not returned to be idle, but had vigour enough left to labour for those objects to which in past times he had devoted himself. He was much gratified at the recognition by his friends and neighbours of his efforts to promote the well-being of Her Majesty's Indian subjects, and he dwelt upon the magnitude of the work of this country in India.

In telegraphic transfers on Calcutta, Rs. 6,00,000, average rate ls. 7-125d.; and on Bombay, Rs. 5,00,000, average rate ls. 7-125d.; making a total of Rs. 46,26,500. The India Council on Thursday sold one lakh of telegraphic transfers on Calcutta at ls. 7-5-32d. per rupee.

THE AGRICULTURAL RESOURCES OF INDIA.—Sir James Caird K.C.B., presided at a meeting of the Indian section, Society of Arts, on Friday last, when a paper, "The Agricultural Resources of India," was read by Mr. E. C. Buck, of the Revenue and Agricultural Department of the Government of India. In the course of his address Mr. Buck said he was one of those who was convinced that under British rule the position of the agricultural population and the producing capacity of the country were, and would continue to be, materially improved, and he was not afraid to assert that the resources of India were capable of a further development, which it was impossible as yet to measure. The great want under which Indian agriculture laboured might be described in one word, "rain." Although the monsoons of India conferred upon it its agricultural rank amongst other countries, yet within India itself they varied immensely and created enormous varieties of climate in combination with two other varying factors—the temperature due to latitude and the dryness due to distance from the seaboard. The consequence was that there was no crop in the world which India could not produce. Notwithstanding the fact that while the monsoons conferred agricultural wealth, the uncertain character of the rain in the greater part of the country was so excessive that the agriculture out-turn, so far as it depended on the rain of the year, was subject to violent oscillations. How to overcome the oscillation, or to mitigate its effects, was the great problem which had to be solved, and it was he (Mr. Buck) was glad to say being vigorously attacked and to some extent solved in India.

He became lieutenant-colonel in 1856, and colonel and major-general retired in 1861. He passed examinations as interpreter in Hindoostanee, Goojeratee, Muratee, and Persian, and in 1830 was appointed to the Commissariat Department, in which he continued until his retirement. In 1831 he was nominated a member and secretary of the committee for examining civil servants and military officers in native languages, director and secretary to the Native Education Society of Bombay, and also a member of and secretary to the council of Elphinstone College, which position he resigned in 1838. In 1842-43 he served as commissariat officer in Scinde, under Sir Charles Napier, and in 1856 he was employed as special and sole Commissioner in various Government investigations. In 1859 he was appointed joint special Commissioner to settle various boundaries. He served as acting commissary-general at Bombay in 1855, and as chief commissariat officer with Sir James Outram in Persia in 1858. Upon the transfer of the government of India to the Crown, he was one of the five field officers who retired upon an extra-pension, and was specially named in a Government general order as one whose important services to the State the Government desired publicly to acknowledge. General Pope was nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath (Military Division) in 1861.

GENERAL RICHARD BUDD, late of the Madras Army, died on Thursday, at his residence, Belfont, The Park, Cheltenham, in the 90th year of his age. The deceased General entered the Army as far back as 1812, and in 1815-16 was engaged in the Pindaree Dours. He afterwards served during the whole of the Mahratta campaign, and was present at Mahidpore and Talnair, the pursuits of Trimbuckjee, Holkar, and Bajee Row, to the final surrender near Asseerghur. He served also in the first expedition to Burmah, and likewise with the advance of the Western Column in the campaign against Coorg in 1834. He also took part in the forcing of the Huggul Pass in 1834. The gallant officer obtained a captaincy in 1825, became major in 1838, lieutenant-colonel in 1843, and colonel in 1854. He was advanced to the rank of major-general in 1856, was promoted to lieutenant-General in 1863, and became a general in 1874.

On the termination of the camp he goes on a tour of inspection to Kamptee, Jubbulpore, and Allahabad, and then to Calcutta, returning to Madras on the 23rd or 24th March next. After a week's stay at Madras his Excellency returns to Ooty.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGE.

On the morning of the 7th instant, at St. Anne's, Byculla was solemnised the marriage of Mr. Eustace Ferrers Nicholson, youngest son of Major Nicholson, of Thelwall (Cheshire) and Bath, and partner in the firm of Messrs. Smith, Frere, Little, and Nicholson, solicitors, Bombay, with Miss Dora Maria Maud Gamble, the only daughter of the late Mr. Henry Gamble, for many years Official Assignee of the High Court, Bombay. His Lordship, Bishop Meurin, officiated, and was assisted by the Rev. Fathers Daling (Vicar-General), George Talbot Bridges, N. Clarke, and Von Boeslager. The bridegroom, accompanied by his best man, Mr. F. A. Little, Solicitor to the Government of Bombay, and Mr. W. C. Anderson, Barrister-at-Law, who assisted as groomsmen, arrived at the church before half-past ten, the hour fixed for the ceremony, and there awaited the arrival of the bride.

Miss Gamble, who was accompanied by Mr. J. Pickard Cornforth, her step-father, wore an ivory silk and satin dress with white jet side draping, bodice and train of ivory silk very richly trimmed with real Point de Flandres lace; wreath of orange blossoms, tulle veil fastened back with a spray of orange blossom, diamond earrings, and a cross and brooch composed of diamonds and sapphires presented to her by the bridegroom, a diamond, bracelet, the gift of the bride's mother, and a gold bracelet set with diamonds and sapphires. She also carried a large white bouquet.

Miss Macfarlane and Miss Madge O'Connell acted as bridesmaids. Their dresses were of pale apple-green satin, the front entirely covered with creamlace, bodice and drapery of apple-green spotted nun's veiling trimmed with lace, and cream lace hats to match. They each wore a gold bracelet, and carried a bouquet, the gift of the bridegroom.

The bride's mother was attired in a handsome Sultan plush front with bodice, train and drappings of silk, same colour, and bonnet to match. The dress of the bride, as also those of her mother and the bridesmaids, were most tastefully designed by the firm of Mesdames Southwell and Austin, of Apollo-street, and were universally admired.

The guests who had been invited to witness the ceremony were numerous, a long procession of carriages following the bridal party as they drove up to and from the church. At the beginning of the service his Lordship, attired in cope and mitre, delivered a short and impressive discourse on the Sacrament of matrimony, after which the marriage ceremony was performed with the usual rites. The register was next signed in the sacristy, the witnesses being Misses Cornforth and Little.

The wedding-breakfast was given at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Cornforth in Rampart-row, to which about eighty guests sat down. Mr. Macfarlane proposed the health of the bride and bridegroom in a neat little speech, to which the bridegroom responded in felicitous terms, and then proposed the health of the bridesmaids, on whose behalf Mr. Little responded. Mr. Farnham next proposed the health of the host and hostess, and Mr. Cornforth replied. The same afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson proceeded to Lanowlee to spend their honeymoon. In the course of the day the newly-married couple had the gratification of receiving a telegram from the Cardinal Secretary of State announcing that His Holiness Pope Leo XIII. most lovingly bestowed his special blessing on the union.

The following is a list of the wedding presents:—Major and Mrs. Nicholson, two cases, one containing complete dinner, breakfast, tea, and dessert services, and glass decanters and water bottles for twelve persons, the other containing silver plate for the same, also pair of carbuncle and diamond earrings; Captain and Mrs. E. NOTICES OF BOOKS.

A FLY ON THE WHEEL, OR HOW I HELPED TO GOVERN INDIA.*

Colonel Lewin's book is certainly one of the most interesting which we have read for a long time. The warmth of enthusiasm which he threw into official work, and which resulted in the discovering, opening up, settling, and tranquillizing of the wild tribes between Chittagong and Burma—the Colonel has also thrown into his present composition.

He started from India at the very outbreak of the great Mutiny, and took part in the most serious part of the fighting. The vivacity with which he relates these exploits adds new interest even to that oft-told tale. But his book is specially valuable for the light it sheds on the mental and moral characteristics of the wild tribes which he made it his great task to civilize. Colonel Lewin has an evident relish for adventurous deeds, and rather sought than avoided positions of peril—a peculiarity which was as well illustrated by his hunting escapades as by his daring attempts to explore the unknown tract occupied by the Shendu race. He made two determined attempts to penetrate this region, and on both occasions barely escaped with his life; but these failures and dangers did not prevent him from establishing friendly relations with the Lushais, or diminish the good opinion he had formed of the bold and independent mountaineers, who had an opinion of their own on most things, and the courage to maintain it. Colonel Lewin had the good fortune to get an appointment in a congenial sphere; and he seems to have laboured to good purpose. He planted the seeds of civilization among the Lushais, and won their entire confidence, inasmuch that when his ill-health caused him to rest in England, and the raids took place which provoked the expedition of 1871, Colonel Lewin was at once appointed as political officer, and it was he who brought the war to an end by the faith which the wild Lushais placed in his personal virtues. He was at one time even invited to become a chief among the Lushais, and flattering tenders of support were made to him.

It is not only in historical and ethnical matter that Colonel Lewin's book is rich; it contains many facts of natural history which the keen observation of the author enabled him to make. Tigers, bears, elephants, deer, snakes, birds, fishes, and even cockroaches have a share of his attention. These amusing facts he relates in an entertaining way, and seeks to extend our culinary knowledge by imparting the method of fattening and preparing young dogs for table, a dish which the Shendus esteem a great delicacy.

The notices of the religious and mythological ideas of the Lushais are specially interesting, and no doubt will be repeated by comparative mythologists and others from the insight they afford into the cosmogenetical notions of the untutored savage, and also on account of their drollery. On p. 215 Colonel Lewin falls into a common mistake in fancying that the ancient "shawm" was a kind of trumpet. Had he seen the word in its old spellings "shawm" and "psaulm," he would have recognized that it was the "psaultry" or harp.

The committee in connection with the scheme for sending an Indian volunteer team to Wimbledon have held a meeting at the headquarters of the Calcutta Volunteers, and settled the rules and conditions of the competition. A team of fifteen is to be sent, leaving India about the 20th May, and returning about 20th August; but special arrangements will be made for the return of men who can get longer leave and wish to prolong their stay in England. Twelve men of the team are to be selected by competition, the other three to be nominated by the committee. The entrance fee for the competition is fixed at Rs. 10 each. The competitors are to shoot over the ranges of the first stage for the Queen's prize and the Kolhapur Cup—200, 500, and 600 yards—and the aggregate score of the three tries is to count. All firing is to be in the presence of a commissioned officer. Shooting may take place on any days between the 1st January and the 31st March.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 28, 1885.

THE PROPOSED REFORM OF THE STATUTORY CIVIL SERVICE.

WE understand that the present Government has decided to maintain Lord Lytton's arrangement, by which one-sixth of the whole of the superior Civil Service of India is to be filled by Native gentlemen, scions of the noble and gentle families of the country itself. We are confident that this decision will be approved by the enlightened public opinion of India and of England—especially if it be found, as we believe it will be found, that the arrangement is to be improved and perfected by certain reforms which will remove all the more obvious objections to the present plan. If these reforms include a provision whereby a personal knowledge of England, of English habits, and of English modes of thought, can be secured for the young "Statutory" civilians without expense or unnecessary inconvenience to themselves; and if, further, they contain a provision under which the claims of faithful and efficient service in the uncovenanted, or so-called "subordinate," service, and possibly those of Indian University distinction also, may obtain the recognition they deserve in the appointments to the superior class; then, we think, a solution of a difficult and most important problem will have been arrived at, as satisfactory as any solution can be under existing circumstances.

Detur digniori, the principle of competition, is obviously the right principle to be followed in the disposal of public patronage. But the fanatical supporters of this principle, like other fanatics, are apt to forget its most important element—that is, the efficiency of the test chosen for the discovery of the superior "worthiness." Mere literary excellence is a fairly good criterion of all-round "worthiness," where no better can be obtained. But for the Indian administrator, habits of command, consciousness of responsibility, and the power of winning the respect and confidence of the masses, are more valuable qualifications than any amount of literary power. And we think that these qualifications are likely, on the whole, to be obtained more surely by a system of nomination, tempered and safeguarded by adequate and stringent checks—a system which has been described as that of detur digno. We have no hesitation in asserting that among the Native Deputy-Magistrates, Native Extra-Assistant Commissioners, Native Subordinate Judges, and the like, may be found numerous officers in every way qualified to justify their promotion to the highest posts. Where these qualifications are united with that social position which commands the respect of their fellow-countrymen, we can find no reason why such promotion should be denied to them; and it is obvious that similar considerations may also properly guide the Indian Governments in direct appointments to the superior grades, without the probationary service in the subordinate ranks.

One word as to the proposal that Statutory civilians should be encouraged, or ordered, to acquire some knowledge of England by a sojourn here. Such a condition would not involve the hardship now imposed on Indian candidates for the competitive examinations; for it would be divested of that uncertainty and risk of failure which has hitherto been its hardest feature. But the simplest considerations of justice ought, we imagine, to ensure that such a condition should entail absolutely no expense, and as little inconvenience as possible, on the officers on whom it may be imposed. Suitable arrangements for the comfort and well-being of the probationers during their stay in England—and, above all, a liberal pecuniary allowance for their support—are, we think, absolutely essential for the success of the proposed scheme.

MR. BUCK ON INDIAN AGRICULTURE.

MR. BUCK is the recognised apostle of agricultural improvement in India; and the able and instructive paper which he read at the Society of Arts last Friday does credit alike to his discretion and to his technical knowledge of the subject. As a justification of that policy of Indian railway extension with which the name of Mr. T. C. Hope is honourably identified, Mr. Buck's paper leaves little to be desired; and we shall not presume in this place to criticise the technical statements and arguments, which occupied the greater portion of the lecture, and which were presumably the raison d'être of its publication.

Mr. Buck evinced a considerable amount of discretion in regard to the really controverted points of his subject, by merely touching on them in a vague sentence or two, with the lightest hand possible. The Chairman, too, Sir James Caird, effectively seconded his apparent wish to avoid the knotty questions of so-called "land reform," which really lie at the root of the matter; for while the discussion was nominally open to all members of the Society, only those gentlemen were fortunate enough to "catch the Chairman's eye" who were called upon by name—and these, by a happy accident, were all "sound upon the goose," and said nothing about those "improvements of the revenue and rent systems" so airily referred to by Mr. Buck. The drawback, however, is, that the public has not obtained the faintest indication of what Mr. Buck's ideas are, as to what may be an "improvement of the rent system;" and has thereby lost a valuable opportunity of obtaining such explanation direct from a Secretary to the Government of India.

For instance, it would have been interesting to learn from Mr. Buck whether the Government of India believes—as might appear from the reference to an "improvement in the rent system"—that any advantage to agriculture is likely to be obtained by an attempt on the part of the State to regulate price, in contracts for the hire of land.

grain, has also been abandoned; but this is doubtful, and it is probable that the Bengal official members will make a strong effort to retain that provision.

"On the whole, it may be predicted with a reasonable degree of certainty that the Bill will leave the hands of the Committee with many of its most objectionable clauses removed. It is to be regretted that the Government has shown no sign of recognising the difficulty and disadvantage of applying a single enactment to two provinces which differ so greatly in their conditions and requirements as Bengal proper and Behar. But as the measure is likely to assume a comparatively harmless form, it is perhaps better to have it passed and done with, once for all, than to take a new departure, at the risk of continuing the present state of unrest and uncertainty for another year.

"It may be noted that the zemindars of the Shahabad district held a meeting last Sunday, and voted a memorial to the Government, in which it is stated, inter alia, that estates formerly sold at thirty-three years' purchase could not now be disposed of at sixteen years' purchase. They also allege that the Bill will produce ruinous litigation; and protest strongly against the proposed revival of putwarees, or village accountants—a class which they describe as 'tyrants, worse than the worst of landlords.'

"A deputation representing Mahomedans in all parts of India waited on the Viceroy on Thursday last. Prince Ferozh Shah, great-grandson of Tippoo Sultan, read an address, which, after welcoming his Excellency, proceeded to call attention to the present position of the Mussulman community, describing it as 'grievously handicapped in the race for progress.' Lord Dufferin, in reply, said that a person in his position could not make promises, but he would carefully study their grievances. Whether he could succeed in remedying them would depend on the strength of their case. But he assured them of his regard for and sympathy with the Mahomedan community, and said that his liveliest sympathies would be for those who, from causes over which they had no control, had fallen behind in the race for advancement which was being so sedulously run by all classes of Her Majesty's Indian subjects.

"Dr. Hunter, speaking at the anniversary meeting of a Bengalee Debating Society, on Tuesday last, gave some useful advice to educated Bengalees. He pointed out that a reform in the position of Hindoo women had become a matter of urgent necessity, and that it could not be brought about by legislative intervention, or official interference. He urged them to harmonize their family life with the domestic ideals of the present generation. These remarks were loudly applauded, and it is to be hoped that they may have some effect in inducing young Bengal to devote itself more heartily to a work of real, practical utility.

"The Government has confirmed the nomination of Futeeh Sing as successor to the late Maharana of Udaipore; and he was proclaimed by the British Resident at a durbar held on the 17th inst.

"An official note on the prospect of the wheat crop at the end of December states that in the Punjab the sowings are above the average, and the prospects are excellent. The forecast for the North-West Provinces and Oude is less promising; but a moderate rainfall in January will secure a good crop. Owing to the early cessation of the monsoon rains in the Central Provinces, a smaller area than usual has been sown with wheat, but the crop is in good condition. The report describes wheat prospects in Bombay as, generally speaking, unsatisfactory. The conclusion is, that an average crop may be expected over the great portion of the wheat-producing tracts and a 'bumper' crop in the Punjab, which is the most important wheat growing province."

"A Canadian expert, who has employed a bore in searching for rock-oil in Beloochistan, reports that the indications are most promising, and that it is probable that the existence of petroleum in large quantities near the Quetta Railway will soon be conclusively established.

Four massive gold hunting chronometer watches, specially manufactured by John Walker, bears the following inscription:—"Presented to Lance-Corporal of Police John McKenna, David Kilpatrick, William Smith, and Edmund Horace Smith, by the Government of Western Australia, in recognition of their gallant conduct on the 16th September, 1884."

LORD RIPON'S SUCCESSOR: WHAT POLICY WILL BE FOLLOWED? :—The Someprakash writes:—"We ask how will the successor of Lord Ripon govern India? Will he govern it by the force of righteousness, as Lord Ripon did, or by the force of armies, as the detractors of Lord Ripon vehemently insist on the Indian Viceroys to do? What an easy way of governing India Lord Ripon has taught! To govern India according to the example set by Lord Ripon you will not have to take recourse to arms and armies, to guns and gunpowder. A little of mercy, of justice, and liberality is what composes the benignant policy of the late Viceroy. Success crowns the efforts of the ruler who follows such a policy.

TEA ACT XIII., 1859.

A good deal of misapprehension seems to exist regarding the validity of this Act, but the answer which the Assam Secretariat gave to the Secretary of the Indian Tea Association in Calcutta sets all doubts on the subject at rest. The Chief Commissioner of Assam says it is in full operation all over the Province, and there have been 233 cases tried under the Act during the year referred to, 1883. There is no doubt the Chief Commissioner of Assam would be glad to see the Act repealed, but if we have little to thank the Government of India for under Lord Ripon's régime, this fact, of his refusing to disturb this Act which he considered was working harmoniously, must also be taken into consideration when weighing the two sides of the question. The question of reduction of bonus has for some time been engaging the attention of the planting communities throughout the Province, so that by allowing the Act to remain in operation the Government of India have strengthened the planters' hands in no small way, for, if it was absolutely necessary to put coolies under Act I. it means with Government dues an additional bonus to the coolie of one rupee eight annas per head—no inconsiderable amount, considering the multitudes that are now engaged in tea culture throughout Assam. Many of the Junior Magistrates are inclined to cavil at the Act as being illegal; we have also heard of Deputy Commissioners on one or two occasions doing the same; but they ought to remember that they have legalised the Act by usage and precedent. In the Immigration Report of 1883 several Deputy Commissioners take the opportunity of eulogising the Act, and the way that it has worked for the interests of all in their respective Districts. Our planter friends should, therefore, be careful to use the Act, as at no distant date it will be used as a strong handle to effect the abolition of Act I. and its vexatious regulations—regulations, by the way, the validity of returning which is now under discussion in one of the Assam Districts; and we trust that the Indian Tea Association will show that strong support which it has done on former occasions to those who have been fighting the interests of the planting community. Whatever be the result of the discussion now going on regarding the return of statistics bearing on what is known as free labour, one thing is certain, that the framers of Act I. never had any intention that these vexatious rules and regulations, as laid down by Mr. Elliott, should extend to "free" labourers, and should the present Chief Commissioner of Assam insist upon taking advantage of the language used in the Act, the sooner the Indian Association move in the matter the better. The purport of Act I. was supposed to be a necessary aid to an industry labouring under serious disadvantages, and for this purpose a mixed committee was appointed to draw up an Act to sufficiently protect the emigrants to the Tea Districts, and at the same time remove the restrictions which surrounded the importation of sufficient labour for the wants of the Districts. On this committee the leading planter of Cachar was asked by the then Deputy Commissioner to represent the planting community of Assam, and he did so. If we remember rightly Mr. L. Hare was the Secretary to this mixed committee, and no doubt he did his duties conscientiously, but evidently the language regarding the rules and regulations in respect of "free" labour was improved upon at Simla, and thus the apparent boon we receive in allowing Act XIII. to remain in force in the Province is completely nullified by the fact that the alteration which took place at Simla has surrounded it with as many forms and rules as are connected with Act I.—Planters' Gazette.

THE MEETING ON THE BENGAL RENT BILL.

It is a significant commentary on the real value of the demonstrations of affection, which have for some weeks past been lavished on the late Viceroy, that, before he was out of the country, one of the largest and most influential meetings ever held in Calcutta—representing, unquestionably, the entire zemindari interest, and professing to represent, no less, the subordinate land-holders and ryots—assembled to record its solemn protest against the principal legislative project of his reign, as unjust in conception, illegal in principle, fraught with certain disaster to all classes whom it will effect, and endangering the very structure of society. Lord Ripon has departed in a blaze of fireworks, but before the last burst of momentary splendour has died away the solid residuum of actual feeling and conviction has made itself apparent, and that feeling and conviction alike are in the highest degree condemnatory of the only measure of any real importance undertaken during his administration. He has floated away on a cloud of incense; he has left behind him a combination of angry, frightened, disheartened men who, as the meeting of last Friday showed, find no terms strong enough to describe the alarm and indignation which his policy towards their interests has aroused.

LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL.

The Jam-i-Jamshed says:—"Lord Randolph Churchill, though a Conservative, is not one of the type of Lord Lytton, whose object is to please his countrymen at the expense of India and its people. He is an eloquent speaker, and whenever he appears in public his incisive speeches are attended to with great interest. Lord R. Churchill has stated that Indian problems are a sealed book to him, which is all the greater reason why India should acquaint him with her wants. He has come here with the professed intention of getting a personal knowledge of India, and if he carries away with him wrong ideas about this country, nobody will be to blame but the people themselves. Planters and others are going to organise movements for the reception of this young clever lord, and there is danger of his being sent away with his mind full of ideas prejudicial to the true interests of the people, unless some steps are taken to make known to him the wants and wishes of the natives.

The Rast Gofar thinks we have great reason to rejoice that one who may fairly hope some day to be the Prime Minister of England has come here to see things for himself. While the writer agrees with the Bombay Gazette that his lordship's visit is of a private nature, he, however, is of opinion that the Bombay public should be allowed an opportunity of seeing and hearing one who has advanced himself to the foremost rank of politicians.

ADVICE TO LORD DUFFERIN.

Several of the vernacular newspapers have been eagerly counselling the new Viceroy as to the course which he should pursue in regard to the questions which will come before him. The Bombay Samachar in a series of articles exhorts Lord Dufferin to promote and extend the operation of the reforms initiated by his predecessor, and enumerates the measures which in the writer's opinion his lordship should adopt in the interests of the country. The Viceroy must lose no time in abolishing the odious License Tax, which in the present state of the finances of India, so happily free from the burden of war or failure, had no excuse whatever for a moment's existence. Although Lord Ripon had made great reduction in the salt duties, there was still much to be done before this necessary of life could be brought within easy reach of the poor. The Forest and Abkari laws demanded immediate repeal, so far as their provisions were unduly severe or oppressive. The paper is of opinion that unjust measures owed their existence chiefly to a radical defect in the constitution of the Legislative Councils, where the elective principle might be advantageously introduced. The principle of trial by jury, and of removing all artificial distinctions between Europeans and natives, should be recognised in its fullest extent. As to the Bengal Rent Bill, the writer, without giving any definite opinion on its merits, thinks that a moderate measure of reform will be welcomed by all save perhaps the powerful body of zemindars in Bengal. Some other newspapers of Bombay and the Mofussil also contain articles more or less of a similar nature.

BAD GHEE.

The Bombay Samachar says that the practice of adulterating ghee with deleterious articles has assumed serious proportions, and asks the authorities to take effective steps to check the evil.

THE NEW YEAR'S GAZETTE.

Most of the vernacular papers are not quite satisfied with the list of persons selected for honours on New Year's Day. The Bombay Samachar says that the distinctions have been in many cases conferred upon men who are unknown to the public at large. The principle of honouring individuals must be based upon their personal merits and public services. But the Government do not seem to act upon this principle as well as might be desired. The titles are mostly given to Government officials; and, in the case of private individuals, they are sometimes given to "little great" men whose only recommendation is that they have wormed themselves into the good graces of the Government by flattery and other arts. The Samachar enters a strong protest, in which it is joined by the Jam-i-Jamshed, against the bestowal of a knighthood on Sir Rivers Thompson. They say that by selecting the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal for this high honour the Government have offered an insult to the native community, who look upon his policy with the greatest disapproval. The Jami adds that by honouring this official the Government have done gross injustice to such men as Sir Charles Aitchison and Sir Alfred Lyall. The writer is sorry that the strong claims of men like Professor Wordsworth, Mr. Pheroshaw Mehta, Mr. Dadabhoj Nowrojee, and others have been passed over, and persons of inferior merit have, for reasons best known to Government, been admitted to the honours.

The Rast Gofar also joins in the general chorus of disapproval, saying that the claims of Bombay have not at all been sufficiently recognised, and regretting that not a single Parsee has this year been considered deserving of a decoration. The official Gazette is more disappointing from its errors of omission than of commission. Those whom public opinion had singled out for the distinctions have been forgotten, and in their place those who could well afford to wait for two or three years yet have been favoured by the authorities. But, asks this weekly, has ever such a list of honours proved to be entirely satisfactory that we should on the present occasion expect to find it faultless? The paper, however, disagrees with those of its contemporaries who have not approved of the title bestowed upon the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. Though the writer was in some cases against the public policy of Sir Rivers Thompson he holds that his high office, his long services, his ability and requirements, have well earned the distinction.

Both the Rast Gofar and the Gujerati congratulate Rao Sahib Mahipatram Ropram on his being admitted to the Companionship of the Indian Empire, and recall to mind his services as a social and religious reformer.

Selected Articles.

MR. ROPER LETHBRIDGE ON LORD RIPON'S POLICY.

At a meeting of the Birkbeck Society, held at the Birkbeck Institution, Chancery-lane, on Monday night, Jan. 26, Mr. Roper Lethbridge, C.I.E., late Professor of Political Economy in the Presidency College of the Calcutta University, and subsequently Press Commissioner of India, moved the following resolution:—"That we approve the appointment of Lord Dufferin as Viceroy of India in place of Lord Ripon, believing that it indicates a determination on the part of the Home Government to substitute in that country a policy of liberal Imperialism for one of doctrinaire Radicalism."

Mr. Lethbridge said: Mr. Chairman, and Gentlemen,—Whatever may be the verdict which this society may give on the resolution which I am privileged to commend to their assent to-night there are two points in regard to it on which I venture to believe that we shall all agree. The first is the supreme importance to every English citizen of the subject we are going to discuss, and the second is that the present moment is a very opportune one for us, as British patriots, to investigate the condition and the prospects of our British Empire in India. As, perhaps, in other parts of the world, so also in India, we English seem to have arrived at a point in our national life where there is a distinct parting of the ways. If we take the one road, if we prefer to fear and shirk our Imperial responsibilities, if we choose to desert the sound, practical commonsense of our ancestors, to follow the doctrinaire faddists so fashionable just now, and to cloak our indolence or cowardice—(hear, hear)—under the hypocrisy of canting theories—well, we are free to do so, and to take the consequences. Facilis descensus Avernii—broad is the gate and easy the road; but what those consequences will surely be I shall try to show by the teachings of the past four or five years. If, on the other hand, as I believe, this England of ours is not so effete as that yet, if there be—as I believe there is—plenty of "life in the old dog yet"—(loud cheers)—then, Sir, I say we shall brace ourselves up to a resolute fulfilment of our national duties; we shall follow what Lord Beaconsfield—(cheers)—so happily called "the imperial instincts of our proud and ancient race"; and we shall show to the whole world, as Lord Dufferin, I doubt not, intends to show, that Imperialism is the truest "liberal" policy, in the highest and best sense of the word.—(cheers.)

Well, Sir, I shall first explain very briefly my idea of the general features of the two policies, one of which I ask this Society to commend, while it condemns the other. I shall then endeavour to show, I trust fairly, that I am justified in connecting those policies with the names of the incoming and the outgoing Viceroys of India; and the judgment I shall confidently leave to the impartial and unprejudiced minds of my hearers.

I have used the term Radicalism to indicate one of these policies. If there are any gentlemen here to-night who fancy themselves Radicals, I beg them not to take offence at this use of the term; for they will find presently that the Radicalism I shall describe to them, at any rate in Indian policy, is something very different from their ideal.—(laughter). The essential attribute of my Radicalism is that it is a sour and strife-making creed—thinking all uncharitableness of all men, setting every class against every other class, teaching natives that they are oppressed by the English, teaching tenants that they are swindled by their landlords, and so on for every other class in the community. And its second attribute is that it is doctrinaire—(hear, hear)—it lays down certain hard and fast theories, and it applies them, utterly regardless of all existing circumstances, and often in obstinate defiance of facts, to every possible and impossible condition of affairs. And, in pursuit of these theories, it hates experience, which it calls prejudice—we have all heard of "Anglo-Indian prejudice"; and when confronted by facts and personal knowledge it calls the facts lies, and the persons who know the facts it calls lunatics.—(laughter and cheers).

And what is the result, when these methods are applied to the administration of a vast empire like India, which God's providence has assigned to be governed by a people of whom only a very small proportion indeed have any personal knowledge of the peculiar conditions of the country, its inhabitants, its frontiers, and its enemies? Why, internally, we shall have race hatreds, and class hatreds, and general anarchy; and on the frontier—trusting in beautiful theories about "moral barriers" and the benevolence and forbearance of our enemies—we shall have the Empire left utterly defenceless—(hear).

And now, I would ask this Society to judge whether this is an exaggerated description of the phenomena and the results of Lord Ripon's policy. And first I will take his frontier policy. I am not going to weary you with going through once more the old controversies about the Afghan policy of Lord Lytton; for subsequent events and the action of his detractors have amply justified that policy. But what was the actual condition of our North-West frontier at the time of Lord Ripon's accession in June, 1880? Well, the Russians had withdrawn from Kabul to Tashkhend, and we possessed the fullest permanent guarantees for the necessary control and supervision of the Afghan tribes—we held the passes from Afghanistan into India. We were rapidly constructing a railway to Quetta and Kandahar that would make our military position well-nigh impregnable, whilst it secured us the command of the trade of Central Asia. And, above all, we had made arrangements to hold, either immediately or through a loyal Afghan feudatory, the city and province of Kandahar, with a population entirely friendly to us, the commercial prosperity and peacefulness of which would soon have rivalled that of the Punjab, whilst it secured our proper preponderance throughout the whole of Afghanistan. In a word, we had that "scientific frontier" so wisely desired by Lord Beaconsfield—(cheers).

Now, Radical wits have sometimes endeavoured to sneer at the idea of a "scientific frontier." But what is meant by the term? Surely a frontier that is scientific from a military point of view—a frontier that is easily and strongly and cheaply defensible according to the science of warfare. And, surely, if ever such a frontier was needed it is on the North-West of India, where an alien power holds a vast territory and a teeming population against Russian aggression with a handful of troops.—(hear, hear.) And here we had exactly such a frontier, capable of being defended at the minimum of cost to the taxpayers of India, and with the least possible number of troops—(cheers).

How did Lord Ripon deal with this frontier bequeathed to him by Lord Lytton? Well, we all know something of that dismal story of scuttling and surrender. Bound down by the false and foolish policy of Midlothian, we loudly proclaimed our intention to run away—to desert our native allies in Kandahar and give them over to the tender mercies of Kabul—to abandon our railway, to give up all hopes of the Central Asian trade, to retreat to the plains of India and allow Afghanistan once more to become an impenetrable thundercloud behind which might be forged the bolts to destroy our Empire! And having run away and hidden our heads, like ostriches, in the sand, what were the results? Whilst we knew virtually nothing of what was going on at Kabul, save the rumours of frequent comings and goings of Russian emissaries, suddenly we awoke to find Russia in possession of Merv and actually on the very frontier of Afghanistan at Sarakhs, within striking distance of Herat! The Duke of Argyll used to have a pet joke about the "Mervousness" of Anglo-Indian statesmen—but where was the "Mervousness" now? It was derided by the Liberal party when it might have been of use; but now Lord Ripon's "Mervousness" has only served to show the deplorable weakness to which the Radicals have reduced us. First, he proceeded to lavish money and guns and war-material on the Ameer of Kabul—at the present moment the overburdened taxpayers of India are paying that potentate blackmail to the tune of no less than £10,000 every month, or £120,000 a year, to say nothing of thousands of rifles and so forth, to induce him to befriend us! And what effect do you suppose that has on him? Why, doubtless, to create an earnest hope that the Russians will continue to come on and frighten us into giving more and more! Like Oliver Twist, he will always be crying for more—(cheers).

Next, Lord Ripon gives frantic orders to remake Lord Lytton's Quetta railway, which he had contemptuously abandoned. But, alas! the materials, rolling-stock, &c., had been carried off back again to India, and thence to a far-distant part of the empire, at ruinous cost and loss. And here I would ask your very careful attention to some most peculiar statements that have quite recently been made by Mr. Cross, the Under-Secretary for India, on the subject of this very railway. When last Session the Government was forced to confess that the Russian advance had compelled them to make the railway to Quetta, in reply to some questions in the House, Mr. Cross most indignantly denied that Lord Ripon had "torn up the rails" of the former railway—and again, in a speech at Bolton, he utterly repudiated any action of the kind. Well, what are the hard facts as set forth in the official reports of Lord Ripon's own Government, of his Director-General of Railway, which are published at Calcutta, and which any gentleman here can consult at the library of the India Office to-morrow morning? I will read you some extracts. Colonel Stanton in his report for 1881-82 says, "A good deal of work at the lower end was done; at the end of July, 1880, the works were precipitately abandoned!" And in the report for 1880-81, General Trevor remarks that the works "were shortly after discontinued, and the spare stores sent back to Sibi. The existing buildings were not dismantled, however, and such parts of the line as had been already laid down were not lifted!" That is to say, that Lord Ripon had so little regard for the poor Indian taxpayers' money in this matter that he did not even take the trouble of "tearing up" the rails and sleepers, but calmly left them to be looted by the first Afghan tribesmen that came that way, overjoyed to find such useful plunder of the scuttling Englishmen—"Shame!" Thus you will see that Mr. Cross was true to the letter in his righteous indignation at Lord Ripon being accused of tearing up the rails—but how about the spirit? And, to make the matter worse, it is shown in another page of the same report that the disgraceful and reckless waste of the Indian taxpayers' money in thus abandoning the "existing buildings" (which included fortified or defensible stations, &c.) and the valuable sleepers and rails that had been laid down, was hushed up and concealed from the public eye by a most artful expedient—"the outlay incurred," we learn from the report, "including loss from revaluation and depreciation of stores, was transferred to the Military Department as a war-charge!" A war-charge! Yes, incredible as it may seem, these are the very words of the official report. Lord Ripon calmly flings away the property of the State, and then sits down quickly and writes off the cost thereof as a war-charge—and by this amazing cooking of the accounts, observe, he kills two birds with one stone; for by the same operation he conceals his own extravagance and also increases the apparent cost of "that wicked Tory war!"—(cheers).

But this is a digression. I have still to speak of one more manifestation of Lord Ripon's "Mervousness." We have had the blackmail to the Ameer, and the lavish expenditure in replacing the railway that had been abandoned to the Afghans, and in bringing back the rolling stock, stores, &c., from the north of the Punjab. Next, the British Government goes, hat-in-hand as usual, to the Czar, and thankfully accepts his offer of a Commission to mark out the frontier line between Russia and Afghanistan. We hear no more now of the "pathless deserts" between those countries. Of course, the Russians gleefully assented. For in the first place, after the frontier has been so marked out, they can jump over it just as easily as before—and just as they did in the case of Khiva, which they solemnly promised us not to touch. They can treat us just as Prince Bismarck has treated Lord Granville in the cases of Angra Pequena and Fiji, and then publish a White Book for all the world to laugh at us. And in the next place, as we have already found out, they can use this very Commission for the purpose of making us ridiculous, and lowering our prestige throughout Asia—for at this very moment our Envoys, Sir Peter Lumsden and Colonel Ridgeway, are kicking their heels about at Murghab, while the Russian Commissioners are keeping them waiting, and the Russian troops are seizing strategic positions further on towards Herat. And this is the recognised way in the East of insulting a person or indicating his inferiority; no insult to the British nation, in the eyes of Asia, could be worse than this humiliating trick of casting derision on the British representatives. And at the present moment the Russian troops have marched upon, and remain in occupation of, Afghan territory at Pulikhatun, in spite of the protests of Sir Peter Lumsden and Lord Granville!

Or take Lord Ripon's domestic policy, which has been more permanently disastrous even than the frontier policy—for the latter can yet be amended, I trust, by Lord Dufferin's statesmanship. But the harm done within has been more insidious and far-reaching. It has consisted, in one word, in persuading every class in the country to believe they have deadly grievances against the English Government, and the result has been the personal popularity of Lord Ripon among a section of the Native community, because he has posed as the only friend of these poor people, anxious to deliver them from the oppression both of their cruel countrymen and wicked English. But surely any sane person can easily realise the disastrous effects that must infallibly follow such a policy, when the Viceroy comes to be regarded as some tremendous mysterious force, threatening the power alike of the Native aristocracy and of the alien rulers of the land? Let me illustrate this tendency by a brief reference to the chief measures—all of them fortunately abortive—(laughter)—of Lord Ripon's Viceroyalty.

The Ilbert Bill, as most know, was an attempt to alter the mode in which Englishmen and Englishwomen in India are tried, when they are charged with criminal offences, in a way most disagreeable to their feelings. Well, I know for a fact that many honourable and high-minded Native gentlemen sympathised with our poorer fellow-countrymen in their strong resentment at this impolitic persecution—(applause); but I have no hesitation in saying that the violent and heated controversies on that Bill have put back in many cases the friendly relations between Englishmen and Natives in India to something like what they were at the time of the Mutiny. And what, after all, has been the result? What has come of it all? Why, Lord Ripon, sooner than frankly acknowledge his error has passed the Bill in a form which actually gives the Natives a new and tangible grievance in regard to trial by jury. He gratuitously conferred on European British subjects the privilege (for which they had never asked) of claiming a trial by jury, while he refused to extend the same privilege to their Native fellow-subjects!

Precisely the same thing has happened in every one of Lord Ripon's high-sounding schemes. A tremendous fuss was made at first about what great things were to be done for the extension of local self government—and what has been the net outcome? In the words of the leading Native journal "the self is centred in the local (Government) officer, and its name spread on the people." And it might have been added that the pecuniary burdens, in the way of rates, have also been spread on the people! So that we have had municipalities petitioning to be relieved from the oppression of this "local self-government!"

So with Education. Hundreds of thousands of pounds were spent on a costly commission that traversed the whole country, and was going to produce an Education Act that should regenerate India. Finally—and after all the money was spent, bien entendu—it was decided that there was no necessity for an Act, that everything was going on nicely, and, in fact, that bubble, too, burst.

So, too, with the extension of Native employment by Government. The whole of the subordinate Civil Service has always been virtually Native; but Lord Lytton introduced a rule, much criticised at the time, that no less than one-sixth of the superior Civil Service also should be Native—(applause). Not one thing has Lord Ripon done in any direction whatever to extend native employment, except talk. It was most shamelessly pretended by some persons in England that the effect of the Ilbert Bill would in some occult way or other have extended Native employment. Of course it is now universally known that this was absolutely and utterly false. It would not have given a single new appointment to a Native; it would not have given one single Native a pennyworth of pay or promotion. On the contrary, it would have given to Native magistrates of the superior class an additional and most disagreeable duty to perform for the same money—the duty of trying Englishmen and Englishwomen on criminal charges.

And so in everything else. I stand here publicly, and I challenge any admirer of Lord Ripon to get up when I sit down, and mention any one isolated measure of his that has produced one spark of practical effect, except for evil. I do not for a moment impugn his motives, which have doubtless been excellent, but I look in vain for practical results. The worst results of all have attended the absurd and iniquitous attempt to apply the Irish Land Acts to the loyal and prosperous agricultural population of Bengal, a province as populous as England and France put together. The Hindoo Patriot rightly called this "a godless measure of wholesale robbery." The idea was to take away some of the landlord's property in his land, to give it to the tenant, to enable the tenant to sell it in turn to the money-lender, and finally to make the terms of every contract between agriculturists depend, not on the free will of the parties, but on the sweet fancy of the Government officers in the district—"Shame". Well, that has not been carried, and I hope will not be. But what have been the results of its introduction? The selling value of land in Behar has already gone down fifty per cent., and to that extent the community is already so much the poorer, and not a soul one penny the richer! And if it had been carried what would have happened? Why, every tenant on the first temptation of extravagance would have sold all his rights to the money-lender, and then would have had to work for the rest of his life as the serf of the money-lender! We should have created a new class of drones to fatten on the toil and sweat of the poor cultivators, while we should have ousted or impoverished the landowners, the most loyal and the most munificent class of the whole population—(cheers).

Such, Sir, has been Lord Ripon's policy and its results. I have already exceeded my limits of time, so cannot enlarge on that policy of "liberal Imperialism," which I believe may justly be hoped for from Lord Dufferin, for he has followed it in Canada and elsewhere. But I feel that it does not need many words to commend such a policy to any patriotic assembly of Englishmen. By a liberal policy I understand one that shall govern India for the good of the country and of its people; that shall treat all Her Majesty's subjects with equal respect and consideration, Englishmen and natives, landlords and tenants, and all; and shall not assume that any class is animated by vicious principles until the charge against them is proved. And by an Imperial policy, I understand something that goes beyond all this. I understand by it a policy that refuses to admit that there can be any divergence of interests or sympathies between any parts of this great Empire—(applause)—that not only governs "India for the Indians," a good rule as far as it goes, but governs India, as it governs England, as it ought to govern Ireland, as it ought to govern every part of the Empire, for the good of the Empire—(cheers). The Radicalism of which I have spoken would weaken every tie which binds us together, and would encourage jealousies and animosities. An imperial policy would bind us all more closely together, and would in every case look on the interests of England and the interests of India as one and indivisible. It would care for the safety of the Indian frontier and the defence of the Indian people as warmly and as anxiously as if that frontier were "the silver streak" itself—(loud cheers). Sir, I verily believe that there is not even the sourest and most unpractical of Radicals who is not, in his heart of hearts, secretly proud of that Empire in whose glory we bask—or whose pulse does not beat higher at the thought that the sun in its circling course from east to west is ever followed by "the morning roll of the British drum and the martial strains of our national music"—(applause). I am very sure that by such a policy as that I have ventured to call a liberal Imperialism—and by such a policy alone—shall we maintain that Empire unimpaired, and hand it down with honour untarnished to our posterity. And I therefore confidently ask this Society to affirm the resolution, which I now have the honour to move—(loud cheers).

In the course of the discussion which followed, and which was joined in by a large number of speakers, Mr. Tayler objected to the use of the word "determination" in the resolution, as he believed it to be impossible for the Home Government to come to any determination on any subject whatever. Mr. J. Rintoul Mitchell (late editor of the Calcutta Englishman) eloquently described his own personal experience of the unfortunate and mischievous effects that had been produced by Lord Ripon's introduction of the Ilbert Bill and similar inflammatory legislation. At the close of the discussion the resolution was carried by a large majority.

CHARLES MARVIN ON COLONEL BURNABY.

The following extracts, from Mr. Charles Marvin's recent work, Reconnoitring Central Asia, on Colonel Burnaby, will be read with interest just now. The author devotes a whole chapter to Burnaby's ride to Khiva, and thus sums up the exploit at the end:—

"It is impossible, we think, for any thoughtful person to weigh the achievements of the various Central Asian pioneers without arriving at the conclusion that Burnaby has been, in comparison with other pioneers, very considerably overpraised for his ride. The exploit on which his reputation mainly rests admits of three divisions; the journey from England to Kazala, the 700 miles' ride across the desert to Khiva and back, and the visit to Khiva itself. The first part was no great achievement, as the road to Khiva is yearly traversed by hundreds of Russians, and every winter Russian ladies—the wives of officers—may be seen doing what Burnaby did in his sledge. Of his entry into Khiva enough has been said to show that there was nothing dangerous about the enterprise. In this manner the path of Burnaby's exploit is confined to the 300 and odd miles' ride across the snow-clad desert from Kazala to Khiva, and the ride with the Cossacks back again. In performing this, Burnaby simply did what Central Asian merchants constantly do during the winter, and what, as a matter of fact, is done almost every week by Cossacks or their officers. From a Russian point of view, therefore, there was nothing remarkable about Burnaby's ride to Khiva. Scores of Russian officers might be enumerated who have performed rides in Central Asia more unique in every respect than his. Even if we compare the exploit with the achievements by English officers, it will not be a difficult matter to find plenty of instances surpassing it. To go no further than the limited arena selected for this book, his 700 miles' level ride through hospitable camps of tamed Kirghiz will not bear comparison with Major Marsh's 1,400 miles' ride through Persia to India, flanked by Turcoman robbers and wild tribes; most of the way, and attended, at intervals, with rough mountain travelling. Nor can it be placed alongside General Sir Charles Macgregor's 3,000 miles' ride through the most unsettled parts of the Perso-Afghan region. Yet such is the capriciousness of fame, that while every schoolboy knows Burnaby by his ride to Khiva, not one Englishman in a hundred thousand is aware of Marsh's and MacGregor's exploits.

"In our opinion, the true merit of Burnaby's achievement consists in this—than an officer of wealth and rank could be found to leave his home at the gayest season of the year, and spend his holidays in performing a distant and arduous journey amidst the severest climatic conditions, to reconnoitre the military position of a rival country, at his own cost and risk, for the sake of a State which—judging by its treatment of previous explorers—would accord him no reward or thanks for his trouble. It is this self-sacrifice, enterprise, courage, and patriotism which has given the name of Burnaby a special and splendid significance in our language. To the majority of Englishmen Burnaby's name is not so much associated with exploration of strange countries as typical of a class of officers, ready at any moment to secretly ride off and reconnoitre the position of England's enemy, no matter in what part of the world that enemy may be. General MacGregor and Major Marsh, Valentine Baker and Colonel Stewart, were all of them Burnabys, and if anyone has been transcended by the others in his exploits, the fact will be found on examination to be due largely to circumstances over which the pioneer himself had no control. When MacGregor returned from Herat in 1875, we knew all we wanted to know for the moment about the Southern side of Central Asia, and Burnaby would have wasted his energies in proceeding thither on another 3,000 miles' ride. But clouds had gathered over the Northern side of the region. Burnaby took it to be his mission to dispel these mists, and without hesitation set off straight for Khiva. In like manner, when, after his return home, a public desire was manifested for a knowledge of the actual state of things on the Armenian frontier, where war was brewing between Russia and Turkey, Burnaby patriotically responded to the

THE customary honours' Gazette was issued on New Year's Day. The Nizam was created a K.G.C.S.I.; Mr. Rivers Thompson, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, a K.C.S.I.; and Mr. H. W. Primrose, private secretary to the late Viceroy, a C.S.I.

A MEETING of the Legislative Council was held on the 2nd instant, when the Burma Steam Boilers Bill was passed, and Mr. Ilbert introduced a bill to provide for the voluntary registration of certain births and deaths, and the establishment of general registry offices.

THE Bengal Rent Bill is busily engaging the Executive Council at present, and the sitting of the 2nd inst., which was mainly devoted to it, was adjourned to the following day. The Viceroy is said to have already mastered the essential features of the subject, and to have a very clear perception both of what requires to be done, and what he means to do.

THE Englishman learns that the Viceroy, after going carefully into the subject of the Tenancy Bill, has formed an opinion on the matter which must be regarded as moderate and satisfactory. Lord Dufferin is at present inclined to be guided by the broad lines of policy as laid down by Sir Ashley Eden, Sir Rivers Thompson, and approved of by Lord Ripon and two successive Secretaries of State; but he is opposed to extreme views which the Bengal Government has of late been pressing upon the Supreme Government.

THE Government has ruled that one-fourth of the appointments in the Survey Department shall be filled by natives of India. The Surveyor-General recommended that the pay of natives should be two-thirds of those of Europeans and Eurasians, but the Government of India has decided that Europeans and natives are to receive the same pay.—Statesman.

THE Committee of the Punjab Public Library, which is to be started at Lahore under the auspices of the Punjab Government, have published a prospectus, and have formulated a set of rules regarding the use of the library by the public. Admittance to the reading-room will be free, but persons wishing to take books out of the library must pay a deposit of Rs.10, and a small yearly subscription. The building in Anarkulli, formerly occupied by the Anarkulli library and reading room, has been made over to the Committee for the new library, which, it is hoped, will be opened by the end of the cold season.—Civil and Military Gazette.

MOFUSSIL NOTES.

(From the Indian Planter's Gazette.)

PRINCE OSCAR of Sweden arrived at Darjeeling on the 28th ultimo on a short visit. His Royal Highness travelled incognito.

ALL the Chumpan indigo has now been despatched to Calcutta, though much still remains unoffered for sale. Prices are enough to make planters' hair stand on end.

THE New year opened with a bleak foggy day in the Darjeeling District. Rain would be most acceptable to planters just now as the ground has become quite dry and dusty.

THE Fortescue-Garmoyle is not to be the only breach-of-promise cause célèbre of the day. Behar will shortly provide something similar, but in this case the sexes are reversed and the heartless lady will be hauled up, alas!

CHRISTMAS has passed in Behar without any of its usual light showers, the weather is cool, bright and delicious—planters have now a few comparatively idle holidays in which to enjoy themselves, and the majority of the volunteers among them will turn up in force at Mozufferpore next week.

IN no profession in the world is more indefatigable zeal shown than in indigo planting. The inability to mount a horse, consequent on excessive stoutness, has lately been overcome by a manager, by the simple plan of having a pit dug for his horse to stand in, while he puts his leg across the saddle from level ground.

PREPARATIONS are pushing on briskly for the Behar Light Horse camp of exercise at Mozufferpore, and as the residents have all asked innumerable guests and there will be several large planting camps, the meeting should be a very large one; the races, however, scarcely promise to fill as well, as there are so few district horses nowadays.

By the way, who should be hung for the state of the line between Mokameh station and the Ghat; one picks up more dust and filth in that short ten minutes' run than in the whole of the rest of the journey. If it is thus now what may be expected when the hot winds set in, unless steps be taken in time to remedy the evil. We invite the serious attention of the E.I. Railway authorities to our remark.

WE warmly congratulate Sir Rivers Thompson on his too long delayed decoration. In Lord Ripon's time he was, indeed, doubly honoured in being left untitled; now it is far different, and we speak with the voice of every planter in the Presidency in testifying to the satisfaction this community has in noticing the tardy recognition by the Gladstone Government of one of the most meritorious of its officers. In spite of some small differences of opinion in the vexed Rent Bill question there are no more thorough admirers of the honest, straightforward Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal than the indigo and tea-planting community.

MADRAS.

THE Supreme Government has negatived the proposal of the Madras Government for the removal of the Military Accounts Offices to Bangalore.

MR. J. B. LYALL, Resident in Mysore, is about to pay a visit to Calcutta to meet the Viceroy. Sir Lepel Griffin is rumoured to be bent on a similar errand.

THE Agent of the South Indian Railway telegraphs to a Madras paper from Trichinopoly that the damages to the South Indian Railway, south of Trichinopoly, have been repaired, and that railway communication to Madura and the south is again open.

IT might be supposed that a High Court Judge, as representing the majesty of the law, would enjoy immunity from the attentions of thieves. But this is not the experience of the Hon. Justice Muttusawmi Iyer, Judge of the Madras High Court. Mr. Muttusawmi Iyer, with his family, left Madras to spend the Christmas vacation at Trichinopoly, and on arriving at the Erode station he missed his jewels, consisting of a gold necklet and pair of earrings set with diamonds, and valued at Rs.5,000.

AN ACCIDENT TO COLONEL S. CHAMIER.—We hear with regret that Colonel S. Chamier, Inspector-General of Ordnance and Magazines, met with an accident on Friday last. The Colonel had been out riding on Friday morning, and on returning home attempted to write a note while he was still mounted, placing the paper on the horse's neck. The horse, which was a fresh one, got restive and threw its rider on to the ground, head foremost, causing a long opening of the scalp, though fortunately the skull was uninjured. We are glad to hear that he is now doing well.—Mail.

SPEAKING at the conference of native gentlemen which is sitting at Madras to discuss political questions, Mr. Arunachalam, of the Ceylon Civil Service, said that the principle of the Ilbert Bill, which had been violently resisted by most Europeans in India, had been practically carried out ever since the establishment of English rule in Ceylon. Ceylonese magistrates tried Europeans without the slightest objection on their part or slightest suspicion of unfairness. There was great cordiality of feeling between the two races—and the rampant Anglo-Indian Jingo was very rare. From the beginning of next January, when a new Code will come into operation, magistrates had the power of sending men to gaol for a month, and district judges had the power to imprison for three months without right of appeal. This applied equally to Europeans and Ceylonese. The Europeans never thought of claiming any special privilege—so strongly is the principle of equality in the court of justice established in Ceylon.

BOMBAY.

THE Lord Ripon Reception and Memorial Fund for Bombay now exceeds one lakh of rupees.

THE Statesman, in commenting on Sir Lepel Griffin's recent remarks in the Pall Mall Gazette regarding the defences of Bombay, says:—"The defenceless condition of Bombay has been a scandal for the last twenty years."

THE members of the Factory Commission, which recently sat in Bombay, have forwarded their report to Government. They recommend various alterations in the law, but deprecate any legislation which does not extend to the whole of India.

MR. JUSTICE KENBALL, of the Bombay High Court, has retired from the Civil Service, and left Bombay by the mail of the 9th for England. Sir Wm. Wedderburn, Bart., Sessions Judge of Poona and Agent for the Deccan Sirdars, has been appointed Acting Judge of the High Court.

THE Association of Mission High Schools has been holding a meeting at the Robert Money Institution to take combined action in the matter of discouraging capricious migration from school to school. The Educational Inspector was present, and we understand that a large Conference will shortly be convened.

At a special general meeting of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce on the 4th inst., on the motion of the Hon. Forbes Adam, chairman, seconded by Mr. T. Meili, the following gentlemen were elected members of the committee for 1885:—Major W. S. S. Bisset, R.E., Mr. F. D. Parker, Mr. G. Cotton, Mr. W. A. Baker, and Mr. D. H. Glade.

By accepting the post of Surgeon to the Governor during the remaining three months of his Excellency's stay in Bombay, Dr. Hatch does not vacate his appointment as Second Surgeon to the Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy Hospital, Professor of Anatomy and Curator of the Museum at the Grant Medical College.

On the afternoon of the 6th inst. Lord R. Churchill visited the Parsee Towers of Silence at Malabar Hill. He was received at the grounds by the Hon. Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Bart., and Mr. Nusserwanjee Byramjee, Secretary to the Parsee Panchayet. A similar visit was paid last week by the Duke and Duchess of Mecklenberg-Schwerin, and Don Carlos.

BURMA.

THE Thatone Railway, as far as the laying of the line is concerned, may be pronounced complete.

THE I.G.S. Enterprise, with the Chief Commissioner and party on board, left Rangoon for Maulmain on the 1st instant.

THE Burmese town of Mugway was attacked by dacoits on the 24th December, and its Governor and two followers were killed, and fifty houses looted and burnt.

MR. BURGESS, C.S., the Commissioner of Tenasserim, and Colonel Pemberton, the Deputy Commissioner, arrived at Dyuiseik on Sunday, the 7th ult., where, after looking round the works of Mr. Dawson's railway, they took the afternoon train and went to Thatone. The next day they inspected the public offices and records, and returned to the Headquarters by land via Pong and Martaban.

THE Burmese Government are determined to retake Bhamo, and troops are being hurried forward. The loss of property is estimated at ten lakhs. Native merchants are encamped on the opposite bank, near Bhamo, awaiting events. The sympathies of the people are with the Chinese entirely.

THE MEINGOON PRINCE.—The King of Burma is still paying attention to the movements of the Meingoon Prince. Sayay Daw Gyee, Oo Pow Htoon, who went to Pondicherry a few weeks ago and had an interview with the Acting Governor on a mission from King Theebaw, has just returned to Calcutta after a second visit to Pondicherry. This must have been undertaken immediately after the Minister had returned to Mandalay and reported the results of his former journey. The second visit has been made expressly for the purpose of ascertaining definitely what prospect the Meingoon Prince has of accomplishing his projected escape to Saigon. It is understood that the Secretary from King Theebaw's Court takes back with him most satisfactory assurances as to the permanence of the Prince's detention in French territory.

THERE are no further news of Lesaitai's movements on the Burmese frontier. Kingkwekli is distrusted by the Chinese traders, who declare he is brave, but unscrupulous, and backed by a mercenary but powerful Chinese official and wealthy merchant. He has not much arms and ammunition, besides what he captured at Bhamo. The reported murder of two Burmese Governors is confirmed by subsequent reports. The conciliatory conduct of the rebels towards the missionaries is still unaccounted for.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

INDIAN TEA.—Messrs. G. White and Co. report as follows on the Tea Market, from the 15th to the 22nd inst.:—The better tone noticeable last week has further developed, and notwithstanding the dull, foggy weather the sales have passed with more spirit for all parcels with quota, especially fine to finest Pekoes, which may again be quoted dearer. Fine Pekoe Souchongs are more inquired for, and higher prices have been paid for them, whilst Broken Pekoes are in request at steady rates. Poor liquoring teas of all kinds are still neglected and difficult to sell excepting at comparatively low prices. The demand for full-flavoured Darjeelings continues, and some high prices have been realised for these descriptions. The improved quality noticeable on some of the recent arrivals from Assam, Cachar, and Darjeeling, coupled with a good country inquiry, is no doubt affecting the market. And in addition to this buyers are probably becoming alive to the fact that the season has closed earlier than was expected. Ceylon.—Further invoices have been brought to auction, but it is disappointing to notice that the proportion of small breaks is so large. The few parcels possessing fine flavour have sold at full rates, but undesirable lots have ruled in buyers' favour.

THE MARQUIS OF RIPON has consented to receive a deputation from the Indian Reform Association early in February.

His brother officers and friends propose to erect a memorial to the late Colonel E. G. Hastings C.B., Judge of the Peshawur Division. A subscription list will be opened; and with the permission of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, Colonel Waterfield, C.S.I., Commissioner of the Peshawur Division, will receive subscriptions. It is suggested that the memorial should take the form of a tablet in the Peshawur Church, and a tablet or window in the parish church at Hertingfordbury, in Hertfordshire. Or it may be thought best to associate Colonel Hastings's name with some charitable institution, hospital or school; but this will be settled hereafter, in accordance with the wishes of the subscribers and of his family.—Civil and Military Gazette.

State interference with prices, in any matter whatever, has never yet been successful in any country of the world; but perhaps the Government of India is superior to the laws of political economy.

Again, Mr. Buck qualified his assertion that, in India, "the intermediate proprietor avoids doing anything" in the way of improvement, by the very necessary reservation—"with due regard to certain bright exceptions." But as, in this very question, the case of Bengal is just now very prominently before the world—and as, moreover, by some less experienced or less conscientious officials than Mr. Buck, the Bengal zemindars (for the zemindar is clearly included in the term "intermediate proprietor") have been held up to the execration of the world—it would have been interesting to learn from Mr. Buck by whom, in his opinion, the jungles have been cleared, the bunds constructed and maintained, the tanks dug, and other agricultural improvements in general effected, in that much-abused and perversely-prosperous province? Mr. Buck stated as his reason for not "going into" the subject of "improvement of the revenue and rent systems," that "it was so ably dealt with by Mr. Pedder in this room a few months ago." He was quite right in speaking of the remarkable ability of Mr. Pedder's paper; but if he had studied that paper with the attention it deserved, he would have known that Mr. Pedder spoke as an ex-Bombay official only, frankly disclaiming any personal knowledge of Bengal, and refusing to "go into" the subject at all, so far as the peculiar conditions of Bengal were concerned.

Mr. Buck did, indeed, so far enlighten the British public as to the motives of his Government, as to assert that "one of the chief objects of any amendments which may have been proposed of late years has been to increase the efficiency of the five-acre holder, for the ultimate benefit of all who have any interest in the land." This certainly was not a risky statement. He elsewhere declared (as a reason why waste lands are not more extensively reclaimed in India) that "the Indian labourer cannot settle without a capitalist protector, and that there are few capitalists ready to risk money in new land in India." And again elsewhere he said, "It is absolutely necessary that five-acre holders should be protected by capitalists when the out-turn of their farm is a mere matter of guess." All this is irrefragable. But it all increases our desire to know whether Mr. Buck and the Government of India really believe that the unsettlement of the value of landed property, and the general uncertainty introduced into such investments by such proposals as those of the Bengal Tenancy Bill, are likely to induce capitalists more readily to afford this "protection" to the five-acre holder? Mr. Buck will, we suppose, admit that the selling price of land in Bengal has been largely affected—in Behar, it is said to the extent of fifty per cent.—by the mere introduction of the Bill; and this does not seem to indicate any great success on the part of the Government of India in their benevolent endeavours to obtain the protection of capital for the five-acre holder.

The resolutions passed at the great meeting at Dacca last week demanded exemption for Eastern Bengal from the benevolent attentions of the Government of India, on the ground—apparently a conclusive one—that the ryots in that part of the country stand in no need of assistance, and are not unnaturally suspicious of gifts for which they do not ask. We are glad to gather from Mr. Buck's words that the Government of India is prepared to concede the justice of this contention. "In Eastern Bengal," he said, "where the out-turn is tolerably certain and secure, the condition of the cultivator leaves little to be desired."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1885.

Notes of the Week.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, January 6th; Madras and Allahabad, January 14th; Calcutta, January 13th; Ceylon, January 10th; Burma, January 9th.

A GENERAL meeting of the London Committee formed to oppose the Bill will be held at Limmer's Hotel, Conduit-street, W. (situated half-way between the Oriental and the E.I.U.S. Clubs), on Friday, February 13th, at 4 P.M. All those who object to these arbitrary proposals of confiscation, and who believe that British faith and British honour are pledged to the maintenance intact of the Permanent Settlement, are cordially invited to attend. We understand that the business before the meeting will be to discuss and adopt a Memorial on the subject to the Secretary of State in Council; also to arrange for a Conference, to be held shortly after the meeting of Parliament, with those members of both Houses, and of the general public who sympathise with the aims of this Committee, and of the Indian Constitutional Association.

THE telegrams from the Afghan Boundary Commission are simply amazing—and would create a great stir in England, if it were not for our many preoccupations and the utter ignorance of Central Asia and its affairs that is so prevalent. The Times correspondent now calmly tells us that "the prospects of a meeting of the Joint Commission are still uncertain": and then adds with the utmost nonchalance, "Unless it meet very soon we cannot return to India until the autumn." Truly a pleasing prospect!

WE entirely agree with the Times correspondent that this alternative, alarming on the face of it, has immense countervailing advantages. The correspondent says—"We must stay here or in Herat—the officials and people much desire this, for our presence gives them confidence." Undoubtedly most true. And it was the knowledge of these facts that caused Lord Lytton in 1877 to desire the presence in Afghanistan of some "earnest upright English gentlemen," for which his policy was so much abused by the Radicals.

THE St. Petersburg telegrams inform us that the second Russian Commissioner has not yet left that city, but that he is "expected" to do so in a few days! How long is it since Sir Peter Lumsden arrived at Bala Murghab?

THE official Russian journal gives us some pleasing intelligence of a Persian force of 1,600 infantry and 300 cavalry that is marching in the direction of Sarakhs and Murghab, "to protect the Persian frontier against any incursion of Turcomans from the side of Sarakhs." On the other hand, the Times correspondent at Murghab telegraphs that "the Ameer on the frontier are quite tranquil, and the people are contented"—which would hardly seem to agree with the Russian account of the Persian expedition.

THE brief summary of the Viceroy's speech at the dinner of the Trades' Association of Calcutta on Friday last will be read with deep interest and warm approval. As was expected from Lord Dufferin, there is no trace of partisanship of any kind in his words—which might have fallen with equal appropriateness from the lips of either Lord Lytton or Lord Ripon. This is exactly as it should be. And to those who can "read between the lines," there is a world of happy significance in the declaration that his Excellency's impartiality will "refuse to be irritated by criticism or cajoled by flattery." And when his lordship adds that he "will sacrifice everything to bring about" the happy results of peace and contentment among Her Majesty's Indian subjects, we cannot help hoping—in spite of all the appearances to the contrary—that he will even yet insist on withdrawing the apple of discord that is being tossed about in the Legislative Council.

WE would venture to commend to the attention of Lord Dufferin, and the other authorities under whose consideration the Bengal Tenancy Bill has to come, the following extract from the speech of Mr. Shaw-Lefevre, himself a prominent member of Mr. Gladstone's Ministry, at the Industrial Remuneration Conference last Friday:—

I was an ardent supporter of the Irish Land Acts as the friend of justice. Looking at the historical and economic position of the small tenants of Ireland, and the fact that they had universally made all the improvements on their holdings under conditions totally different from those of English tenants, I thought that the law was justified in conceding to them fixity of tenure; but no such claim can be justified on the part of the English tenant farmers. They have no hereditary connection with the soil. The great bulk of them have come upon the land in recent times. They have not effected any of the permanent improvements, and it would be a monstrous injustice to give them fixity of tenure.

WE suppose that not even Mr. Ilbert will allege that the "permanent improvements" in the soil of Bengal have been effected by any other capital than that of the zemindars. And those ryots who do not obtain "fixity of tenure" under Act X. of 1859, but who are to obtain it (as well as the legal presumption of possessing it) under the proposed legislation, have certainly no stronger "hereditary connection with the soil" than that of the bulk of English tenant-farmers. Sauce for the goose is surely sauce for the gander.

THE speeches of Mr. Bright and Mr. Chamberlain at Birmingham last Thursday clearly disclose the intention of the Radical party to force on the discussion of the English land question, to which we doubtless owe the preliminary attack on the Indian landholders commenced in the Tenancy Bill. Mr. Chamberlain plainly states that if landlords do not fulfil the duties expected of them—and who shall say how elastic that condition can be made?—"they must give place to others!" And this phrase Mr. Chamberlain twice repeated in his speech. And the Daily News supports him in a leader of Saturday last. "There is no such thing," says our contemporary, "in this country as the absolute property of an individual in the soil"—which is either a legal truism or a mischievous incitement to confiscation.

AT the Industrial Remuneration Conference, not only the speech of Mr. Shaw-Lefevre, but also the statesmanlike papers of Mr. Balfour, M.P., and Lord Bramwell are well worthy of careful study by those who are responsible for the Bengal Tenancy Bill.

MR. LOWNDES said "As an Irishman, he had himself once been an enthusiastic admirer of the Land Act, but he now declared, from his knowledge of the country, that the only persons who had benefited from that measure were the small moneylenders." This is an experience that strikingly confirms all we have constantly predicted about the results of the Tenancy Bill; and was in harmony with Mr. Balfour's remarks, when he spoke of "a condition of dependence more cruel than that of any tenant on any landlord, or any labourer on any employer—the dependence, namely, of a small debtor, on a professional money-lender."

WE (Whitehall Review) hear that it is more than likely Sir Lepel Griffin, who has returned to India to resume his duties as Governor-General's agent in Central India, will succeed Sir Charles Grant as Foreign Secretary to the Indian Government. A better selection could not well be made.

WE have much pleasure in acknowledging the courtesy of the Managing Committee of the "Marquis of Ripon Memorial Fund" at Bombay, in sending us a copy of their full and excellent Report of the proceedings at Bombay in honour of the retiring Viceroy. We accept this courtesy in the spirit in which it is offered; and as an indication that our friends in Bombay agree with us in believing that differences of opinion on political subjects need not, and ought not to, interfere with the amenities of life. Let us all have the manliness and the charity that thinketh no evil, that can respect the honest opinions of others, even where they differ from our own.

A WORK which is certain to be worth reading is announced by Mr. W. Digby, C.I.E., late editor of the Madras Times, and now Secretary of the National Liberal Club. It is to be called "India for the Indians—and for England"—a title that embodies, as tersely as it can be put, the whole doctrine and canon of "liberal Imperialism." We hope that Mr. Digby's teaching will correspond with his title; and will show him to belong to that interesting and promising school of "Neo-Radicals" which the Pall Mall Gazette is endeavouring to organise into a Party, and which only differs from Toryism in being—may we say it?—a little more Jingo, and apt to take up "fads."

A LONDON correspondent of the Hindu says:—

Many have asked me about the Indian Reform Association of London. No doubt they intend to carry out their programme as duly set forth. The Association, I believe, is started under Government auspices. I, therefore, cannot believe that it will effect much in the way of drastic reform. Its sphere of operations embrace all India. So far as I can learn the Association is against Members of Parliament showing up in the House of Commons Indian abuses, so long as the present exceedingly Liberal Government is in power. The cloven hoof of "Party" and Faction is showing itself. Let India beware.

SOME of the Indian journals have erroneously announced the return to Lucknow of Mr. C. W. Arathoon, barrister-at-law, who was formerly a member of the Oudh bar, but who has for some years devoted himself to Privy Council business at Westminster. Mr. C. W. Arathoon, who is very well known in all Anglo-Indian circles in London, has not left England, and he has not given up his practice before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, which dates from 1871. Mr. Arathoon appeared a few days ago in the Pigot v. Hastie case, and recently he figured in the appeal of the Rajah Rampal Singh. Mr. Arathoon is one of the most assiduous members of the Council of the East India Association.

THE Englishman has the following account of the Calcutta Freight Market, corrected to January 13:—

The improvement in rates for steamer tonnage reported in our last has now extended to sailing tonnage, which may be quoted at about 2s. 6d. all round better. There has not been very much business done, nor is there any great demand, but there is no doubt that a better feeling prevails. Our unfixed tonnage amounts to 35,000 tons.

THE following on the Calcutta Indigo Market is taken from Messrs. W. Moran and Co.'s Market Report:—

Four public sales have been held during the past week, at which 4,270 chests were offered and 4,089 chests sold. The sales have gone off with more animation, and prices generally are about Rs. 5-0 higher.

THE same firm gives the following account of the Calcutta Tea Market:—

At the sales held on the 7th instant 12,658 chests were offered, of which 12,040 chests were sold. Prices paid were about the same as those at the sale held before the holidays; there was fair competition, but owing to the fact that the general quality did not show any particular point, biddings were rather slow. Medium Broken Pekoes receded about half an anna in value.

It has been decided that all officers, irrespective of their length of Service, shall be allowed to undergo a course of instruction for the purpose of qualifying themselves for employment in the transport branch of the Commissariat Department. They will accordingly be allowed to attend for instruction at transport depôts on the conditions prescribed for lieutenants not exceeding six years' service, in the Government of India Army Circulars, Clause 78, of the 31st July 1883.

Telegraphic Intelligence.

The following extra telegram has been received from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Jan. 29:—

"It is understood that Sir Alfred Lyall, Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, has received an intimation that, if he likes to apply for the office, he will be appointed to one of the vacancies on the India Council, which will be created by the imminent retirement of Mr. E. Drummond and Sir William Muir."

"The following telegrams have been received from the Times Correspondent with the Afghan Frontier Commission, dated Bala Murghab, Jan. 13 and 17:—

"The weather has been very cold here, the thermometer falling below zero, but it is now becoming warmer, and the snow is thawing. The work of surveying has not ceased, and the health of the party remains excellent.

"The prospects of a meeting of the Joint Commission are still uncertain. Unless it meet very soon we cannot return to India until the autumn, and must stay here or in Herat. The officials and people much desire this, for our presence gives them confidence.

"Over 100 of the leading Turcomans from Panjdeh lately visited Sir Peter Lumsden.

"The Ameer on the frontier are quite tranquil, and the people are contented."

"The weather is milder and the health of the party is excellent.

"Nothing is known regarding the date of the meeting of the full Commission.

"The statement of the Paris correspondent of the Times that Russia contemplates the occupation of Herat has not caused surprise here. But it is generally thought that Afghanistan is too strong, and Russia's position in Central Asia is too unstable, for the latter to risk a war with the Afghans, if they are to be assisted by England.

"Russia would doubtless prefer to postpone the occupation of Herat until the Ameer's death, when the country of the Afghans may be disturbed, and her own position stronger. But an equitable settlement of the frontier question will make this programme difficult.

"On the other hand, as my letters have mentioned, the Afghans have from the first refused to believe in Russian sincerity, and have persistently assumed the eventual necessity of fighting for their frontier. Every effort has been, and is being, made to reassure them."

"The annual dinner of the Calcutta Trades Association is gradually becoming an event of considerable importance. Of late years it has been the practice to invite to it the principal officials and the leading men of the non-official community, and their speeches are looked for with feelings similar to those with which the British public await the Ministerial speeches at the Guildhall banquet. This year's festival, which took place on Friday last, was expected with more than ordinary interest, as the Viceroy had promised to attend. Among other guests were the Lieutenant-Governor, several members of the Supreme and Local Legislatures, the Judges of the High Court, and the President of the Chamber of Commerce.

"After the usual loyal toasts, Mr. Wallis, Master of the Association, proposed the health of the Viceroy, and expressed the general gratification felt here at the appointment of so well-tried a servant of the Crown as Lord Dufferin to represent Her Majesty in India. The toast was received with the greatest enthusiasm.

"Lord Dufferin, in reply, began by expressing his deep appreciation of the friendly feeling which had been manifested towards him from the moment of his arrival in India. There were doubtless, he went on to say, many present who were anxious to know what were the principles upon which his future policy would be guided. There was no reason why he should not gratify their curiosity. In doing so he would disclose no secret and initiate them into no new revelation, for his policy would be guided by those ancient principles upon which the British Empire in India had originally been founded, which had ever since been interwoven with its structure, and vindicated by each of his illustrious predecessors—namely, a justice which neither prejudice nor self-interest could pervert, an impartiality between all the religions and races which refused to be irritated by criticism or cajoled by flattery, and a beneficence of intention which sought to spread abroad among the many millions of Her Majesty's subjects in this country contentment, prosperity, wealth, education, professional advancement, free scope for municipal institutions, and every other privilege compatible with effectual government and authoritative supremacy.

"He said this, not merely in his own name, but speaking in the name of the Queen, the Parliament, and people of England, who were absolutely determined that British rule should be so blamelessly and vigorously conducted as to prove the crowning glory of our country's history; and that any grievance or wrong of which any of Her Majesty's subject's could complain—whether princes or people, whether native or British-born—should be examined, and, so far as the imperfection of human administration would allow, be abated or redressed. It was his highest ambition to do something towards bring about these desirable results. There was no sacrifice, whether of time or labour, of health or strength, which he was not prepared to make in pursuit of this aim, and he trusted that when his time came to quit these shores he might have perceptibly contributed towards the advancement of the country, the realisation of the just and legitimate aspirations of the people, and the fair fame and stability of the British Empire.

"The next guest to speak was the Lieutenant-Governor. The two years, he said, which had elapsed since he last replied to the toast of his health on a similar occasion, if they had been eventful in some things—which they must try to forget, and to efface from the memory—had yet been remarkable for the steady development and advancement of the moral and material welfare of this great province of Bengal. He went on to refer to the difficulties of governing India—difficulties which increased in proportion to the success of the efforts put forth in extending and expanding the intelligence and civilization of the people. It was as unreasonable to expect that we could go back to the theory of the days when the natives were entirely dependent on Englishmen as it would be to suppose that Englishmen should descend to the level of those whom they were trying to elevate to a much higher standard. Since the province of Bengal was of vast area, containing people of many races, tongues, and creeds, it was most improbable that any human effort could weld these into one nation. While he would be always forward to promote the development of the many races entrusted to his charge, he confessed that he had no sympathy with the misdirected aspirations or the exaggerated pretensions of a small section of the community. He concluded with a warm tribute to the Civil Service, of which he is the head.

"General Wilkinson, who responded to the toast of 'The Army and Navy,' dwelt upon the necessity of strengthening the Volunteer force in India in view of possible complications, and strongly urged every able-bodied European to join that force without delay.

"Mr. Justice Cunningham, returning thanks for 'The Bench,' said that the country owed an obligation to Lord Ripon for his successful efforts to procure an addition to the judicial strength of the High Court; and he hoped that the present Government, as soon as it had got the Tenancy Bill off its hands, would turn its attention to the improvement and cheapening of the administration of civil justice.

"A deputation of indigo planters from Behar waited on the Viceroy on Monday last, and presented a long memorial on the subject of the Tenancy Bill. A great portion of this document was devoted to arguments in favour of legalising the transfer of occupancy rights, which was described as being 'one of the main principles of the original Bill.' Lord Dufferin promised to give the matter careful consideration.

"The Calcutta Government Gazette gives a list of the works published in Bengal during the second quarter of last year. They amount to 889 books and pamphlets, of which 276 are described as educational. Accompanying the list is a short account of each work, prepared by the native librarian of the Government. Some of his remarks are interesting. Thus he says of one book, called "Sabhana," that it urges the Bengalees to adopt the English dress, marriage institutions, and style of living. The characters, male and female, are represented as smarting under the injustice and oppression of the English rulers of the country, as refusing to marry until their country's situation is improved, and as organizing themselves into an association pledged to forego self and to live for the country alone. Another book, called "Debaduta," traces the mental and physical degeneration of the Hindoos to the fact that the English are allowed to slaughter cows in India. The author abuses the English for eating beef, and the summary goes on to say, 'declaims against them in a style of vituperation which for rabidness and violence seems unsurpassable, and which is calculated to excite against them feelings of hatred and resentment in the Indian mind.'

"The Maharajah of Jeypore arrived in Calcutta on Tuesday last on a visit to the Viceroy. The Duke and Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Don Carlos, after a short stay at Government House, have gone to Darjeeling. Lord Randolph Churchill is expected shortly. He will be the Viceroy's guest while in Calcutta, and will then go to Sylhet, to which district he has been invited by the tea planters."

"The news that a second treaty between France and Burma has been signed in Paris, and that a French Consul will be sent to Mandalay, has naturally increased the already excited feeling in British Burma. There seems to be little, if any, difference of opinion in that province as to annexation being the proper course for us to adopt. It is argued that the dethronement of Theebaw and the establishment of another prince as a feudatory of the Indian Government would have no lasting effect, as whoever reigns will always be used by foreigners for the furtherance of intrigues against England. The Indian Government has not yet given any sign of its intention, but it is not likely that it is yet prepared to adopt the heroic remedy of annexation, and it is doubtful whether it has made up its mind to the least drastic of all the measures proposed—namely, the re-establishment of a British resident at Mandalay.

"Meanwhile, the Chinese captors of Bhamo continue to hold out and defy all efforts to dislodge them. They are said to be well provided with provisions, and if driven out of Bhamo they can retreat to the hills, where the Burmese are unable to follow. The Burmese commander has asked for reinforcements, and 700 men, with three officers, of the King's body-guard and five guns have been sent from Mandalay.

"Gang robberies are reported from various parts of the country. In fact, the whole of Upper Burma appears to be in a state of absolute confusion and anarchy."

Selected Articles.

RUSSIA AND INDIA.

Many writers well acquainted with Central Asia and with Russian movements in that region have repeatedly warned Englishmen of the rapid approach of Russia towards our Indian frontier, and of the ulterior object of her onward march. By a large class of politicians such warnings are laughed at or denounced as products of an unreasonable Russophobia. It is noteworthy, however, that these persons are such as show little appreciation of the greatness of England as a colonial and military power; it is, therefore, natural that they should not be affected by any anxiety about the loss of something of which they do not know the value. Those who really care for the safety and integrity of the British Empire will find food for serious reflection in an article by Arminius Vambéry, contained in the current number of the Nineteenth Century, and entitled "Will Russia Conquer India?" The writer, whose knowledge, judgment, and impartiality on this subject are unquestionable, therein draws attention to the following important facts:—(1) That within the last twenty years only Russia has absorbed the khanates of Taskhend, Bokhara, Khiva, Khokand, and Merv; (2) that in the many hardy and hitherto indomitable nomad tribes whom she has subdued Russia has obtained the services of hosts of the best cavalry in the world, who would be an invaluable aid in an expedition against India; (3) that by means of the railway communications already completed, in progress, or projected, Russia will soon be able to throw an army from Odessa, as its starting-point, into Central Asia in six days, without any great exertion, and without any interruption either by natural difficulties or hostile tribes; and, after the completion of the Michailovsk-Herat Railway, 520 miles long, the entire distance between the eastern shore of the Caspian Sea and Herat, the key of India, will be traversed in forty-eight hours at the most. The extension of the latter line to Herat was believed in England to be impossible, on account of the intervention of mountains from 10,000 to 15,000 feet high between Sharakhs and Herat, but these imaginary Alps prove to be merely shabby little hills 900 feet high; so that the only possible interference with the Russian designs is in the form of English protests—to which, M. Vambéry says, "the Russians, from politeness, occasionally pay some regard, but which in no wise shake them in their settled purpose." . . . History is written in vain if it has not warned us of the ultimate goal of Russian policy, both in Europe and in Asia. Friends and impartial spectators have warned us. Even nos amis—les ennemis have also warned us. The outspoken if indiscreet utterances of Russian representatives agree but too well with the tenor of all other warnings and evidences. If our Government will not learn from friends, will it then learn from the enemy? Alas! no trust at all can be placed in the foresight or firmness of the present Ministry. Such is their proved fatuity that they are capable of reversing the lesson of the old proverb, and of rendering it thus: "Nefas est ab hoste doceri." It was by similar culpable blindness and pusillanimity that the Crimean war was produced. Russia was tempted by the English Government's weakness to make a venture which she would not have dared to make if she had been met at first with a bold front and decisive voice. Similar cowardice and indiscretion in our treatment of Russian ambition now may produce in the very near future a great catastrophe for ourselves. For Russia to-day is both more invulnerable, and more able to do harm to us, than she ever was. India is the future battle-ground of England's fate, and Egypt and Herat are the keys of our Indian possessions. Who, then, can be comfortable and content in thinking that such important keys are committed to the guardianship of such weak and palsied hands as those of the present Liberal Ministry?—The Banner.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S POLICY.

President Cleveland is now engaged in the invidious task of forming his Cabinet, and we may expect to have before long some definite announcement with regard to his future policy. The Democrats, like Mr. Gladstone and his Midlothian speeches, stand committed to certain views which they will not find easy to keep to on assuming the reins of office. Already sufficient has transpired to warrant the belief that Free Trade à outrance will not be adopted by the Cabinet, and that at the beginning, at any rate, only moderate changes in the tariff will be made. Much, of course, will depend upon the personal views of the Secretary of the Treasury. For this post common rumour assigns Mr. Alexander Del Mar, well known in America for his strenuous advocacy of remonetizing silver instead of issuing more paper money. He does not take up a fanatic attitude in this matter, however, but is for introducing silver into circulation, in a free, practical, natural way. During the tenure of office of President Johnson Mr. Del Mar was director of the Bureau of Statistics, a post corresponding with our secretaryship of the Board of Trade, and while in power was instrumental in forcing at a stroke the Washington rings to abandon one hundred millions of plunder they had almost secured by the passing of appropriation acts. Later on he led the crusade against the Tammany ring, and afterwards was instrumental in exposing the worthlessness of the Big Bonanza mines. If these acts made him many powerful enemies, they secured him a host of admiring friends, and at the present moment he is looked upon as the best conceivable finance minister of the Cleveland Cabinet. To English political economists he is well known by his "History of Precious Metals," the best book written on the subject; by his essay on the "Production of Gold and Silver," and a number of publications dealing with mining. Besides being an authority on tariff matters and general finance, he has achieved eminence as a practical mining engineer, and in this respect possesses no equal in the United States. He has travelled in most countries in Europe, and represented the United States at congresses on monetary and financial matters in most of the leading capitals. He thus possesses a wide experience of the world and, in no sense the narrow American politician too often entrusted with the management of affairs in the United States.

As the adoption of his views on money would greatly tend to improve the financial condition of countries having a silver standard, his appointment possesses particular interest for India, and we sincerely trust that nothing will occur to mar its realisation. In the whole Democrat party there is no individual possessing better claims or more distinctive qualifications for the post than Mr. Del Mar. By the public of this country his appointment would be regarded with the friendliest feeling and add one more link to the growing chain binding the two peoples together in mutual harmony. During his continuance in office there would be no repetition of the violent demonetization acts that depreciated the rupee during the Republican administration, and British commerce would gain by a skillful readjustment of the tariff. On this account we shall continue to watch the formation of the Cleveland cabinet with great interest, and trust that it will be ultimately found to consist of elements favourable to the advancement of the good feeling at present animating the two countries. President Cleveland has the best wishes of England in the selection of his subordinates, and in the appointment of Mr. Del Mar to the post of Secretary of the Treasury; they will detect a fresh proof of his determination to put down the corruption of his predecessor and provide America with the best possible Minister of Finance.

THE AURIFEROUS SANDS OF ASSAM.—Although it has hitherto been known that the sands of the Assam rivers are auriferous, the general experience has been that the yield of gold is very small. Hopes of increased productiveness, however, have of late been raised by the reported discovery of some rich washings on the Subansiri river. The published analysis of some samples of the average washings from Subansiri sands showed a yield of no less than 52 oz 11 dwt. 20 gr. per ton! Thus far we have a statement sufficiently startling, and highly suggestive of the richness of these sands. But the question arises as to the bulk of the sand from which the samples were washed down, because, after all, the yield above given can only be considered in reference to the unknown quantity from which the washings were made. This, of course, greatly reduces the value of the result, and leaves it an open question as to whether it is a real advance upon anything which has preceded it. All that has been elucidated is that a minute quantity of washed sand gives a good percentage of gold. Nothing is vouchsafed as to the amount of river sand which was treated for this residue, or of the time and labour consumed in that treatment. It appears to be a fairly well-established fact that the Subansiri sands have generally given the best yields among the many rivers of the Lakhimpur district, which itself is one of the most favoured of the auriferous regions in Assam. According to Mr. W. King, of the Geological Survey of India, there is little doubt that improved methods of running such sands through cradles should make the out-turn better than it ever has been under the crude manipulation of the native washer. But that this will ever come near the anticipations of those who circulated the high results we have quoted, is more than the indications of the rocks of the upland country, or the history of gold-washing in Assam, will allow.—Iron.

COUNCIL DRAFTS.—The tenders for Rs.35,00,000 in bills on India and telegraphic transfers were received on Wednesday last at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—In bills on Calcutta, Rs.8,40,000, average rate ls. 6-937d.; Bombay, Rs.10,90,000, average rate ls. 6-95d.; and Madras, Rs.4,08,400, average rate ls. 6-938d. NOTICES, MEETINGS, DIVIDENDS, &c.

EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY (LIMITED).—The 25th half-yearly general meeting of this company was held on Thursday last, at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr. Pender, M.P., presided, and, in moving the adoption of the report, observed that the gross receipts for the half-year had been £309,569, or an increase over the corresponding period of 1883 of £26,479. Of this amount, £19,000 was attributable to long Government and Press messages, which had compensated them for the decrease in the number of commercial telegrams transmitted. They had £3,498 in shares of the Mediterranean Extension Telegraph Company, which was now in liquidation, but they expected that this item would be realised at a profit before the next accounts were published. Their working expenses had been £84,907, or an increase of £4,058. The general expenses in London had been £2,542 more, principally owing to the action brought against the company by the Central News Company, to which he alluded at their last meeting, the law charges and disbursements having been £2,676. The working expenses at the stations had been £1,994 more. In the salaries and wages at stations there had been an increase of £2,045, but they had opened four new stations—Suakim, Piræus, Patras, and Katakolo—and there had also been six months' expenses at the Glasgow station, against two months' in the corresponding period of 1883. On several other heads there had been decreases. The cost of the Lipari and Messina cables had been £884 in the half-year, as compared with £1,000 in the last five half-years, and the capital cost of these cables, £5,884, had now all been charged to revenue. The expenses in the half-year attending the repair and renewal of cables had been £31,189, or an increase over the previous year of £1,669. After paying all expenses and meeting debenture charges and preference share interest, they were enabled to pay a dividend and bonus at the rate of six per cent. per annum, and to carry forward £30,364 against £13,679 a year ago. Their receipts for traffic with India had been £4,000 less, but from long experience they knew that an increase or decrease in the number of messages sent over the cables depended more or less on the state of trade, and in the period under review there had been marked depression in trade, both in India and England. The account they presented was, however, a good one, owing to the condition of affairs in China; but he would rather trust to activity in trade than to war operations for obtaining a satisfactory return on their capital. When the directors' report was printed a few days ago all their cables were, as then stated, in perfect working order, but several of them were now interrupted. Their ships were, however, placed at proper points to meet immediate repair requirements. They now had their system so arranged in the Mediterranean that if they had one, two, three, or even four cables interrupted, they would still be able to conduct their important traffic with the Continent and their large traffic with India, China, and Australia. During the present pressure of war intelligence and urgent messages on military affairs, they had been enabled to utilise their two cables from Alexandria to Malta and Marseilles, that from Alexandria to Zante and Otranto, from Zante to Trieste, and from Alexandria to Constantinople and Odessa. They had these four important alternative routes to the Continent and Egypt, besides the line via Gibraltar and Lisbon, which, however, had been totally interrupted in the last five days. They had now obtained possession, at a moderate price, of the undertaking of the Mediterranean Extension Telegraph Company, and they had also purchased an interest in the Direct Spanish Telegraph Company, which enabled them to control the management of that company. At their last meeting he spoke of the arrangements which had been made by the company with the Greek Government, which had afterwards asked them to connect some of their outlying islands in consideration of extending their subsidy of £6,500 a year for ten years, making thirty-three years. To this the company had consented, and he believed the new connections would cost them about £6,000. They had also opened a station at Perim, under a guarantee from the Perim Coal Company that their expenses should be paid, and he expected that the traffic from that place would eventually be considerable. Our mercantile fleet and our great ironclads must coal somewhere, and it was the interest of the company, whenever they could do so, to follow the flag. The Marquis of Tweeddale having seconded the motion, a short discussion followed; and in replying to questions the chairman stated, as to the suggestion that another shilling a share should be distributed by way of bonus, that it was of the utmost importance to the company to have a strong reserve fund, both to enable them to effect repairs when necessary and to maintain the market value of the shares. The capital of the company was £5,500,000, and he thought the reserve fund was far short of what it ought to be. If the accountants could be convinced that it was better to place to revenue account, instead of to the reserve fund, the interest earned by the investments forming that fund, he did not think it would be difficult to convince the directors on the point. They received no dividend on their shares in the Direct Spanish Company, but the debentures of that company paid them six per cent. The motion was unanimously adopted, and the retiring directors and auditors were afterwards re-elected.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—A special general meeting of this company was held at the offices, No. 122, Leadenhall-street, a few days since, to consider a resolution which was introduced by Sir William P. Andrew, C.I.E., at the last annual meeting, but which was then ruled out of order in consequence of the necessary notice not having been given as prescribed by the deed of settlement of the company. There was a large attendance of shareholders, and Mr. E. Thornton, C.B., the senior director, was voted to the chair. The Chairman, before calling on Sir William Andrew to move the resolution, stated that the high opinion which led the Board of Directors to put Mr. Sutherland in the position of chairman had been largely augmented by what they had seen of his acts since he had filled that important post. Although the matter before the meeting was purely a shareholders' question, yet it was right to say that nothing would give the Board greater pleasure than to see the motion which stood in Sir William Andrew's name adopted. Sir William Andrew, C.I.E., then moved the following resolution:—"That, in recognition of the eminent services to this company of the chairman, Mr. Thomas Sutherland, M.P., the shares in the Suez Canal Company recently purchased to qualify him as a member of the Suez Canal Board of Directors be, and the same are hereby, presented to him." He urged that he had not until very lately had the advantage of Mr. Sutherland's acquaintance, so that he could have no private feeling in the matter further than a desire to contribute his mite to do justice to the eminent services of a public man. Nothing could be more successful than the management of the company by the Board of Directors, and in carrying out their policy Mr. Sutherland had had the willing co-operation of his colleague, Mr. Bayley, supported by an able and experienced staff. But the object of the resolution was to mark especially the great services which had been rendered by Mr. Sutherland, who had been to a large extent instrumental in placing the proprietors in possession of one of the grandest, finest, and most admirably-found fleets in the world. Major-General Sir F. R. Pollock, K.C.S.I., seconded the resolution, and read a letter from Dr. Carson, an influential Irish shareholder, warmly supporting it. After several speeches highly complimentary not only to Mr. Sutherland but to his coadjutor in the management, Mr. Henry Bayley, and the body of directors, the resolution was carried unanimously. Mr. Thomas Sutherland, M.P., expressed his acknowledgments for the honour which had been conferred upon him, and gave an able résumé of the position and fleet of the company now in comparison with some years ago. The satisfactory result obtained he attributed to the thorough co-operation of his colleagues on the direction, and to the esprit des corps which had always animated the service as a whole. The proceedings terminated with votes of thanks to Sir W. P. Andrew for his action in the matter, and to Mr. Thornton for his able conduct in the chair.

The Government of India have decided that receipts and cheques issued on behalf of cantonment funds are required to be stamped according to the provisions of the Stamp Act in force.

THE Presidency Jail inquiry at Calcutta into certain alleged cases of ill-treatment of prisoners has reached a stage at which the committee engaged in it are believed to have formed some definite conclusions, and these, it is believed, must prove somewhat unfavourable to the local officials concerned.

SIR CHARLES ARCHIBOLD left Lahore on the 5th ultimo on his winter tour. From Kushalgarh the party will proceed by boat down the Indus to Isakhel, where the camp awaits their arrival.

No time is apparently to be lost in building the hostel for the accommodation of female medical students from the munificent donation of Maharani Surnomoye. An official declaration has already been published that a piece of land, measuring about two beeghas, is to be taken up for the purpose adjoining the Medical College and Eden Hospital, Calcutta.

THE great care which has been taken by the Government of India of emigrants starting for any Colonies from the port of Calcutta is well shown by the fact that the last Gazette of India contains no less than 105 pages of rules and forms relating to their welfare in this country, on board ship, and in the Colonies. The draft of these rules, which are published for general information, will be taken into consideration by Government on the 6th of February.

THE natives of India have some difficulty in accounting for the annual incursion of distinguished visitors from England. However, as far as Don Carlos is concerned, one Behar paper has no such difficulty. It tells its readers that "the Spanish ex-King" is about to visit Behar to study the "military tactics of the Volunteers," and that he will probably try to induce some of the planters to aid him in the recovery of his lost kingdom. This, a contemporary remarks, is a new aspect of the military question. India, it seems, is to become a recruiting ground for European warfare, and peripatetic monarchs are to cull the flower of our auxiliary forces.

MOFUSSIL NOTES.

(From the Indian Planters' Gazette.)

THE rubbee crop promises well throughout Behar, though the rice crop has, as a rule, not fulfilled the ryot's expectations.

MESSRS. BOURNE AND SHEPHERD intend sending a representative to the Mozufferpore Meet to photograph groups, horses—in fact, everybody and everything.

WE regret to learn that Mr. Anthony Edwards of Motihari broke his leg at Samastipur by stumbling over a box. The latest news reports that he is doing well.

MADRAS.

RAJAH RAMPAL SINGH, Talukdar of Rampur, in Oudh, has returned to Madras from England.

MR. GRANT DUFF intends paying a visit to Pondicherry shortly. Extensive preparations are being made by the French authorities for his Excellency's reception.

CAPTAIN HEXT, R.N., the Director of the Indian Marine, arrived at Madras on Saturday last on an official visit, and left for Bombay by Saturday evening's mail train.

THE Madras Government, following the example of the Bombay Government, has issued a resolution directing that all prisoners charged with murder shall be provided with counsel at the State expense, if they are too poor to pay the fees.

It is stated that the Madras Government has resolved to try to bore an artesian well in Madras. Mr. Louie Cornet, who has bored one or two wells successfully at Pondicherry, has been engaged for the purpose; and, in accordance with the suggestion of Dr. William King, of the Geological Survey, well will be sunk in the People's Park.

SOME of the leading native gentlemen of Bellary have formed a club on the lines of the Cosmopolitan Club in Madras. About seventy members are on the list, and, thanks to the liberality of that successful merchant, Mr. Sabapathy Moodelliar, a bungalow has been placed at the disposal of the members free of rent. The committee have decided to form a fund with the entrance fees of the members, the monthly subscriptions being set apart for the expenses of the club. The institution is a success.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—We regret to hear that Sir Frederick Roberts has been suffering during the last few days from slight intermittent fever. His Excellency is now living at Government House, the cool rooms of which were recommended by Dr. Mackenzie as preferable to the Commander-in-Chief's tents on the Island. Sir Frederick had a hard week's work in Hyderabad in December, and the change to Ootacamund caused a slight chill, the effect of which his Excellency probably has not shaken off. However, we are glad to hear that he is convalescent to-day, and will start for Kristnarajpuram on Monday, where he will have some more work in the sun. The order for the Proclamation Parade of all the local troops which was fixed for to-day was countermanded yesterday, and the parade will probably be held on Saturday next.—Mail, January 16.

MR. EARDLEY NORTON, the coroner of Madras, in the course of a lecture delivered at the Madras Presidency College on December 10th, made the following interesting reference to the later career of his father, Mr. John Bruce Norton:—"Till his eyesight failed him he practised in the Privy Council, where he ever was accorded a most patient and courteous hearing. He filled the chair of Lecturer to Inns of Court on Hindu Law. You may not know that he applied for the Chief Justiceship of Bengal at the time when it was given to its present excellent incumbent, Sir Richard Garth. I do not know that my father would have been successful. His application has reached me with a series of most sympathetic letters from men whom it is a privilege to know. But he was forced to withdraw his application when the doctors pronounced upon him the dread verdict of impending blindness. Even then his energy was unabated and I have heard him argue and win an appeal in the Privy Council when he was stone-blind."

BOMBAY.

MR. HART will act as Private Secretary to Lord Reay.

No arrangements have yet been made as to the military staff of the new Governor.

THE HON. SIR WILLIAM WEDDERBURN, Bart., assumed charge on the 9th ult. of the office of a judge of the High Court in the room of Mr. Justice Kimball.

H.E. SIR JAMES FERGUSSON presided on the 12th ult. at a lecture delivered by Mr. Jewanjee Jamsetjee Mody, the high priest of the Colaba fire-temple, on the Parsee religion.

Two powerful horses which His Excellency the Governor was driving bolted down the Malabar Hill towards the Point the other day. His Excellency escaped unhurt, but the carriage was much damaged and the horses badly cut.

GENERAL LITTLETON ANNESLEY, the Adjutant-General, has been removed from the camp-of-exercise at Chickli, suffering from a severe attack of pleurisy.

On the 7th ult., Lord Randolph Churchill met a number of representative native gentlemen in Bombay and listened to an exposition of their views regarding various questions affecting the welfare of India.

HIS LORDSHIP left Bombay on the 9th ult., for Indore, on a visit to Sir Lepel Griffin. On Monday night a grand entertainment was given at the Indore Residency by the Maharajah Holkar in Lord Randolph's honour.

IN A Resolution recently issued, regarding a proposal to locate a cholera hospital in the vicinity of the European General Hospital, Bombay, the Government favour the opinion of the Sanitary Commissioner, who apprehends no evil consequences, against that of the Surgeon-General, who considers that the carrying out of the proposal would "terminate in calamitous results."

SEVERAL camps of exercise have been established in various parts of the country for the instruction of troops. At Chinchwad, near Poona, a large camp, composed of troops of all branches of the service, is in full operation; at Mhow a cavalry camp was opened on Friday; and at Kristnarajpuram, near Bangalore, an artillery camp has been established.

THE Secretary for Berar reports that the prospects of the khari crops are favourable, except in places where they have suffered from excessive rain. Cholera has appeared in the Akola and Balapur taluks. Cattle-disease prevails in the Basim district.

SOME excitement was caused in Bombay on the 12th ult. by a wide-spread rumour that an attempt had been made upon the life of Sir Munguldas Nathooobhoy, the well-known Hindoo knight. The rumour arose from the fact that whilst Sir Munguldas was sitting in a room of his bungalow a bullet entered through the window, breaking the glass, but doing no other damage. It is believed that the bullet was fired from a catapult by some lad in the adjoining street.

THE Pioneer says:—"Major Bissett has left Ajmere for Bombay to take over charge of the Bombay and Baroda Railway, with its amalgamations, from Mr. Wood. Lieutenant-Colonel Moberley, late Examiner of Accounts on the Rajputana Railway, has for the present been appointed Deputy Agent, and stationed at Ajmere. Further information as to the staff, location of offices, and other details, which are anxiously looked for, Major Bissett has promised to announce as soon as instructions have been received from the Board of Directors at home.

OWING to the receipt of information to the effect that the Royal Commission appointed to conduct the Indian and Colonial Exhibition of 1886 intend sending out their own agents for the purchase of articles for exhibition, all local work in connection with the Exhibition has been stopped, and the Bombay Government has intimated that the contribution of a lakh of rupees which it has made towards the affair will be withdrawn unless it is allowed to employ its own agency for the purchase of specimens for exhibition.

IN Bombay the elephant as a means of conveyance has long been done away with, but he still flourishes in Poona, where he is the cause of as much alarm to horses as the steam-roller in Bombay. An incident which occurred on the 10th ult. bears testimony to this fact. While an elephant belonging to the Transport Department was going down St. Mary's-road a carriage happened to come in the opposite direction. The horse took fright and bolted, and the carriage soon came to grief by being overturned. The only occupant was a gentleman, and he may congratulate himself that he escaped with only a few bruises. When a governor or a member of Council has met with a similar accident the elephant in Poona will soon become a mere reminiscence.

THERE was an influential gathering on the 14th ult. at the Town Hall on the occasion of the annual meeting of the Bombay Centre of the St. John's Ambulance Association. A very encouraging report of the past year's work was presented by the secretary, Mr. Harold King, in which every reasonable hope was held out that the ambulance work in the city would not prove ephemeral. Seven classes had been held at which 181 pupils had attended, including the Governor and a number of ladies; and of these 54 had passed the prescribed examination entitling them to certificates of proficiency. His Excellency the Governor, who presided, in moving the adoption of the report, impressed upon his hearers the importance of maintaining such a useful organisation in their midst; and alluded to the kindness with which many distinguished medical gentlemen have devoted their short hours of relaxation to the instruction of classes. He expressed a wish that the society might in the coming year be enabled to give instruction in the vernacular to native ladies and others. On the suggestion of the Governor a subscription was raised during the proceedings to remove an adverse balance against the treasurer.

BURMA.

REFUGEES from Bhamo are finding their way to Mandalay in large numbers. Theebaw has sent an army to put down the revolt.

CAPTAIN ENSOR, who lately officiated as Port Officer of Akyab, has been appointed to the Port Officership of Bassein.

A ROBBERY of money and jewellery to the extent of Rs. 1,250 has been committed at the Akyab Treasury. The police guard stationed at the building are suspected of having been concerned in the crime, and six of them have been arrested.

SOME of the boatmen employed in conveying the Scots Fusiliers to Toungoo were found gambling at the village of Kawah, but the police in attempting to effect their arrest were severely handled. It is said that Inspector Moung Tsee had one of his ears cut off, and a Sergeant was picked up in an insensible condition; and the gamblers escaped.

FROM the proceedings of the last meeting of the Akyab Municipal Committee we learn that the estimated receipts amount to Rs. 1,18,900-0-0, and the revenue, including the opening balance, to Rs. 1,26,700 against Rs. 1,40,100 in 1884-85. This difference is due to the opening balance in 1884-85 having been nearly four times as large as in 1885-86. The difference is, however, reduced by estimated larger receipts under heads. The estimated expenditure is Rs. 1,25,500 leaving an estimated closing balance of Rs. 1,200. This provides for pensions for the officers and servants of the Municipality under Section 35 of the new Act and calculated in accordance with Government Rules.—Rangoon Gazette.

CEYLON.

THE Legislative Council sat on the 8th ult., the Governor having come from Kandy for the purpose, and returning on the following morning. All the members, except the Government Agent, C. P., and the Hons. Van Lungenberg and Downall, were present.

THE Hon. R. A. Bosanquet gave notice of the following question and motion:—"To ask if the Government intend to prosecute the publisher of the Ceylon News, or to take any official notice of the gross libels upon the administration of justice which have from time to time been published in that paper; and to move for any correspondence which may have passed between the Government and the Attorney-General's Department in reference thereto."

HIS EXCELLENCY has created a very sore feeling throughout certain classes of the Civil Service by some of his recent appointments. A large number of officers have been passed over in favour of a couple of civilians who, from the chance of residing at Kandy, have, it is supposed, come more especially under the notice of the Governor. Sir Arthur Gordon is credited with holding the doctrine, that for what he does in Civil Service appointments he is responsible to the Queen alone. His Excellency may have formed this opinion on his experience in petty colonies such as those in the West Indies and Fiji, where the Service is a small affair, but in the first of Crown Colonies with a regular Covenanted Civil Service after the model of India, it is argued that a Governor's position is very different. No Presidency Governor would venture to override the claims of Indian civilians without due cause shown, and it is argued that men under contract to serve Her Majesty the Queen, according to rules and regulations laid down, have rights and privileges which even a Governor may not contemn repeatedly. Very possibly the matter may become the subject of discussion in the House of Commons, that is, should the offended civilians manifest sufficient cohesion to remonstrate jointly, and so get a question asked direct of Lord Derby in Parliament.

HARBOUR DEFENCE OF COLOMBO.—It is pointed out in connection with the controversy over the location of our coal stores and harbour defences that it would be a most difficult matter to fire, by means of shells or any shot from a man-of-war, stores of coal under a tropical sun, and that, therefore, the risk run of destruction from the proximity of the coal stores to the harbour and shore is not so great as we were led to suppose by home correspondents. In the case of the P. and O. agent at Galle, what he dreaded some time ago was a sudden landing of an enemy and the theft or destruction of his coal, which, of course, could then be leisurely effected. To guard against this Captain Bayley planned to remove a certain reserve a short distance into the interior, and this might be advisable in the case of Colombo. The great improvement however required at Colombo in the construction of the Northern Arm, and the consequent completion of Sir John Coode's Harbour design, and next the proper defence of the port by heavy batteries on Mutwall Point and Galle Buck or wherever the Military authorities may decide as best. For the Northern Arm we are glad to learn an unanimous opinion here prevails, even the Master Attendant and local commercial firms who led the opposition some years ago being now favourable. A comparatively narrow entrance and close harbour are also approved of and the case of Prince's Dock, Bombay, is pointed to, as conclusive evidence of the good sanitary condition of a large body of water more completely enclosed than our harbour would be.—Observer.

A KURRACHEE paper hears that the Camp of Exercise, which Brigadier-General Luck, C.B. had proposed to be held at Jherruck next month, is to be given up. It is to be regretted that such is the case.

THE GRAVE OF GENERAL CONWAY.—A short time ago we noticed the fact that General Sir Frederick Roberts, on learning through the columns of a Madras paper that the grave of General Conway, an old Madras officer, was still carefully preserved by the inhabitants of a village called Nakry-Kal, which was supposed to be in the Nizam's territory, had written to his Highness requesting that his thanks might be conveyed to the villagers for the care which they had taken of the late General's tomb. It appears, however, that Sir Frederick has desired his thanks to be conveyed to the wrong person. There is a village called Nakry-Kal in the Nizam's dominions, on the old marching route to Haidarabad, but the village in which the tomb is situated in one of the same name and on the same road, but is in the Kistna district, and within British dominions. General Conway died from cholera, outbreaks of which disease occur in the village where he lies buried nearly every year, and it is said to be in order to propitiate the goddess of cholera that so much care has been taken of the tomb. It is now suggested that the old travellers' bungalow, in which the General died, and which is still standing, although disused for some time, should be converted into a charitable dispensary and hospital, where the people of the village, who at present cannot get medical aid at a less distance than 40 miles, might receive the benefit of professional attendance as a reward for their care of the tomb.—Englishman.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

CAPTAIN E. L. ELLIOTT, D.A.Q.M.G., is appointed to officiate as A.Q.M.G. during the absence of Major Melliss at Baroda on special duty.

SIR CHARLES MACGREGOR, Quartermaster-General, has proceeded to Darjeeling on a short visit of inspection.

In this year's competition of the Northern India Rifle Association the winner of the Championship is again Major W. Hill, of the 2nd Goorkhas, with the fine average of 4.53 per shot.

THE N-1 Mountain Battery, at present encamped near the Artillery Barracks, Kurrachee, will embark for Bombay on the 24th instant.

In connection with the supply of Waler remounts for the Bombay Army, instructions have been issued for an increase of one hundred to the reserve of Australian horses now maintained at the Hosur Depot in the Madras Presidency, from which the horses will be issued to batteries of horse and field artillery on the Bombay establishment.

THE models to be sent from the Madras and Bombay armies to the London Exhibition of 1886 are as follows:—One native officer Madras ("Queen's Own") Sappers and Miners one, non-commissioned officer (Mussulman) Madras Cavalry, one sepoy Madras infantry, 2nd Bombay Lancers, 5th Regiment Bombay Native Infantry, and 29th Regiment Native Infantry.

SOME particulars are published in a contemporary of a cup which has been presented by Major-General H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, open to Bengal cavalry regiments, including the C.I. Horse. The first prize is a silver cup, and then ten prizes consisting of the entrance fees in various proportions, from 16 per cent. downwards, 15, 13, 11, 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, and 5 per cent. The entrance fee is Rs.20 from each regiment; competition open to sections of four mounted men. A regiment may enter as many sections as it likes, and the number of times that any particular section may enter is unlimited. The cup goes to the regiment whose best three sections make the highest average score. These sections are to be made up of twelve men, not changes rung on about half-a-dozen. The money prizes are to be divided among the men of the ten best sections, but more than two money prizes can be won by the same regiment. The cup will be competed for at any station in the Bengal Presidency between the 25th December, 1884, and the 31st March, 1885. The remaining conditions are similar to those published in past years for the Cureton Cup, and need not be detailed.

A DESPATCH, a contemporary states, has arrived from the Home Government regarding the proposed changes in the conditions of service of the Royal Engineers in this country. The principal features are, we believe, the reduction of the period of service to five years; and the increase of pensions for those who elect to serve altogether in India.

THE Bangalore correspondent of the Times of India telegraphs on the 11th ult.—the 15th Madras Native Infantry left yesterday for Madras by route march. General Rowlands has published a complimentary order bearing high testimony to the good conduct and discipline of the regiment in Bangalore. The regiment took part in the second Afghan campaign.

THE 5th Bengal Cavalry, under Major J. Vanrenen, arrived at Gumbaz on the 2nd ult. The headquarters of the 10th Bengal Lancers, under Colonel G. C. Ross, were to march on the 6th idem for India via the Han Pass and Barkhan. Major Carr's squadron of the 5th Punjab Cavalry returns to Dera Ghazi Khan with the Lancers.

It is notified that the separate corps of Volunteers in British Burma are no longer organised under one administrative battalion. The "South Andaman Volunteer Rifles Corps" will continue to be attached to the "Rangoon Volunteer Rifle Corps" for administrative purposes.

THE Pioneer says:—Regarding the court of inquiry ordered to assemble to investigate certain complaints against General Marter we feel bound to explain, in justice to that officer, how matters stand. General Marter, it will be remembered, commanded until very recently the 1st King's Dragoon Guards at Rawul Pindee, and a field officer of that regiment, whose relations with his commanding officer were somewhat strained, busied himself in formulating charges against him. In the ordinary course these would have been disposed of by the Indian military authorities, but the officer in question sent his complaints home direct to a member of Parliament; and now, in common fairness to General Marter, a court of inquiry has to be held. The matters in dispute will, we doubt not, be sifted quite as thoroughly as the complainant desires—perhaps more so.

It having been brought to the notice of the Governor-General in Council that the present arrangements for conducting the duties connected with sub-marine mining at the ports of Calcutta, Bombay, Rangoon, and Kurrachee are not altogether satisfactory, it has been decided that a subaltern officer of the Royal Engineers shall be stationed at each of the above named ports for special duty in connection with the sub-marine mining services and shall not be liable to removal except in compliance with the orders of the Inspector of Sub-Marine Defences. These officers will be borne on the rolls of the Sappers and Miners; but will be posted to the Public Works Department, and graded as assistant engineers, second grade. They will be under the officer commanding Sappers and Miners for discipline and interior economy; but in all duties of sub-marine mining they will be under the inspector of that branch. The tenure of the appointment will be limited to three years, unless the holder be promoted to assistant engineer, first grade, when he will be relieved by a Sapper officer who is commencing his tour of Indian service.

The following Division Order by Lieutenant-General Sir Robert Playre, K.C.B., was issued at Mhow on the 1st ult.:—Referring to the General Order by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief transferring Brigadier-General Gillespie, C.B., from the Nusseeraabad Brigade to Poona, the Lieutenant-General commanding whilst tendering to General Gillespie his thanks for the cordial support which he has always received from him, begs at the same time to express the satisfaction and confidence which he has derived from having had an officer of General Gillespie's well-known and tried ability associated with him in an important command of the Mhow Division.

A FURTHER decision of some importance to officers of the British service who may wish to enter the Staff Corps has been given by the Government of India. Hitherto officers leaving British regiments to join probationary appointments in native regiments have been obliged to defray their own travelling expenses, on the grounds that they were proceeding to an appointment for their own advantage, and also benefited pecuniarily by the arrangement. In future these officers are to be exempted from the operation of this rule, and they are to be allowed passages at the public expense under the circumstances mentioned.

The recent orders prescribing the conditions on which officers of the British service will, in future, be admitted to the Indian Staff Corps have given rise to certain questions as to how the provisions of the Special India Army Circular, dated the 15th of November, 1884, affect those officers who were probationers or applicants for admission as probationers when the new orders came into force. The decision arrived at by the Government of India is to the effect that officers who were admitted as probationers prior to the 1st of October, 1884, when the new regulations took effect, are to be subject to the previous rules for admission, as contained in India Army Circulars, Clause 62 of 1862. As respects officers who applied for admission prior to the 1st of October, but whose applications were not sanctioned until subsequently, it has been ruled that those officers whose appointment as probationers was sanctioned prior to the 15th of November, 1884, may, should they desire to do so, withdraw their applications and return to their regiments at the expense of the State.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

INDIAN TEA.—Messrs. G. White and Co. report as follows on the Tea Market, from the 22nd to the 29th ult.:—The sales have again passed with spirit, and the demand has become more general for all useful descriptions especially good medium to fine Pekoes, for which there is still an upward tendency, whilst finest Pekoes and Broken Pekoes command very full prices. Good to fine Pekoe Souchongs have also been in request, and present prices show an advance of ¼d. to 1d. per lb. against the same marks selling at the commencement of the month: but this, as in the case of Pekoes, is partly accounted for by the improved quality of those now offering. On the whole the selection has been varied, and has comprised some very desirable parcels, so that the proportion of Pekoes from 10d. to 1s. 2d. per lb., with which the market was previously glutted, is lessened, and quotations for these are in some cases a trifle firmer. Ceylon.—Only a small quantity has been offered, which has met with good competition and realised full rates.

The following is from the Indian Tea Circular of Messrs W. J. and H. Thompson:—Since the 15th ult. 42,000 packages have been catalogued for sale, including 1,040 from Ceylon and 700 of reprinted and second-hand tea. With a more general feeling of confidence the market has experienced a sensible improvement, the dealers being encouraged by a better demand from the country and by the improved character of the teas now coming forward. Competition has been exceptionally brisk for fine qualities, and many sales have been made of Pekoe and Broken Pekoe between 1s. 6d. and 2s. 6d., showing decidedly higher prices than have been obtainable for some time past, notwithstanding the augmented supply of good tea resulting from improvement in the later manufacture from Assam and Darjeeling, and the arrival of some superior "autumn flavoured" teas from Doours and elsewhere. There is also a movement in the value of good liquoring teas of all makes between 1s. and 1s. 6d., especially Pekoes, but inferior qualities remain at former prices. In teas under 1s. there is not any quotable change beyond a hardening tendency for the best Broken and Souchongs, coarse and dull liquoring kinds of both leaf and broken remaining neglected at previous rates. The more varied selection of quality now offering, as compared with the supply at the end of last year, is undoubtedly an attraction to the buyer, and should facilitate the sale of the balance of the crop, making the result of the year's working more satisfactory to producers and shippers than at one time seemed probable. About 41 million lbs. have now been sold, leaving 24 millions to be disposed of—assuming that the receipts from all ports reach our estimate of 65 million lbs. Last year between 23 and 24 million lbs. were sold between Feb. 1 and June 30.

GENERAL J. MACLEOD INNES, Inspector-General of Military Works, has started on a tour to Pachmarhi, Mhow, and Ajmere. The General visits Pachmarhi to arrange for making its military buildings more suitable to the climate, which in summer at the elevation of 3,000 feet is rather of the plains than of the hills. This fact, a contemporary remarks, seems to have been overlooked by Colonel Baigree, the original designer. Pachmarhi is the nucleus of a fine settlement, and seems within measurable distance of becoming the headquarters of a division.

MEETING IN HONOUR OF THE LATE KRISTO DAS PAL

A LARGELY-ATTENDED meeting of representatives of every section of the community of Calcutta, and Bengal was held on Saturday, December 10th, in the Town Hall for the purpose of taking steps to commemorate the memory of the late Rai Kristo Das Pal, Bahadur, C.I.E. Mr. G. E. Keith, the Sheriff, formally opened the meeting, and proposed that his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal take the chair. Maharaja Norendra Krishna seconded the motion, and his Honour accordingly took the chair.

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor then said—Sir Richard Garth and gentlemen,—The object of our meeting here is to formally place on record our sorrow at the premature death of a distinguished citizen of this city and to devise some means of perpetuating his memory in Calcutta. Perhaps I may be allowed to mention that very soon after the death of the late Kristo Das Pal, which occurred, I think, on the 24th of July last, I received an intimation from many of his friends that we should at once call a meeting for the purposes to which I have alluded. It was found, however, that in consequence of the absence of the Government of India from Calcutta, and for other reasons, that there were many gentlemen who were in the Government of India who were desirous to take part in this movement—upon consideration it was determined that it would be much better to postpone the meeting till the cold season. Hence it is that on the official requisition of the Sheriff of Calcutta this meeting has been convened, and I am glad to see in this immense gathering testimony more direct than any speech can offer of the value which was attached, and the respect and regard which was connected, with the name of the gentleman whose early death we meet to deplore. (Hear.) I am not going, gentlemen, to anticipate the speeches of those who are about to move the resolutions which will be put to the meeting, but I cannot forbear to take this opportunity of expressing in the very briefest words my personal feelings connected with our deceased friend. Perhaps there are few Europeans or English gentlemen in India who had the long acquaintance with Kristo Das Pal that I had, and this I can assert, without fear of contradiction, that there was no measure of any great importance connected with either administration or with legislation in which the Government were more assisted than they were during the last fifteen or twenty years by the independent, unbiassed and sensible judgment of Kristo Das Pal. I recall his presence and speech as a member of the Legislative Councils of both the Local Government and of the Supreme Government; I recall his prominent position in the conduct of the municipal affairs of this city, and beyond this I remember that, as the editor of the leading Anglovernacular paper in Calcutta, he exercised a wise and wide influence for good in conducting the intelligence of the public mind upon all great questions of public interest—(applause). Beyond this, too, and perhaps this was the greatest claim upon you, the native gentlemen present, he was the life and soul of the greatest political association in this country. By his wisdom he established a representative political body to guide and direct all those great questions which are connected with land in Bengal. India can badly afford to lose a champion of the calibre and character of Kristo Das Pal, and I am sure I say what all of you here present will feel, that we do well to meet together to-day to do honour to his memory—(loud applause).

Sir Richard Garth then moved the first resolution in the following terms:—"I fear that in responding to the call which has been made upon me by our excellent Chairman, I shall be appropriating an honour which more properly belongs to some one of our distinguished native friends whom I see around me. Those gentlemen, I need hardly say, who have known our much-lamented friend far better and longer than I have, who have watched step by step his brilliant career, and have been associated with him in the labours and anxieties of his most useful life, must, of course, be far better qualified than I am to propose a resolution which purports to express, as publicly and solemnly as it can be expressed, the opinion which this meeting entertains of the high character of that great and distinguished man in whose honour we are here assembled. And yet I am truly grateful, and beg to express my thanks to our native friends for having permitted me to pay this tribute, however inadequate it may be, to the memory of one to whom I consider that we all in this country, Europeans as well as natives, owe a deep debt of gratitude and respect. At the same time, gentlemen, I feel that I should be abusing the trust which you have been kind enough to place in my hands, if I were to attempt anything like a history of the career of this great man. I prefer to leave that office to others who are far better able to perform it. For myself, I am somewhat apt, as you know, to speak of men and things as I find them; and I think I shall do better, in the few remarks which I have to make to-day, to confine myself, as far as may be, to what has passed under my own observation. No one could have lived, as I have lived, in this city of Calcutta during the last ten years without recognising in Kristo Das Pal the great political leader amongst the native community, and at the same time the trusted friend and adviser of the Government. Thoroughly loyal as he was to the British Crown, and a staunch supporter of the British Government, he devoted himself, heart and soul, to the welfare and advancement of his fellow-countrymen. He was, indeed, "the Hindu Patriot," and even those who differed from him in opinion could not fail to admire the talent, the energy, and determination with which he pursued the course which he believed to be right. Whether we viewed him in the columns of his own admirable journal, or listened to his wonderful eloquence at public meetings, or in the legislative assembly, we found there a man who was always ready to denounce oppression, to stand up for the rights, and redress the grievances of his countrymen, and to pursue without fear or favour what he considered to be for the public good. I believe that there was no legislative measure proposed in my time, whether local or imperial, which was not carefully studied by Kristo Das Pal, and upon which he did not afford the Government, in some shape or other, the benefit of his advice and experience. Gentleman, this is not the time or place, as it seems to me, to allude, except in a general way, to political matters, or to the views which our lamented friend may have entertained upon any particular public measure. I am especially anxious, in introducing this resolution to your notice, to avoid saying a single word which could in any way disturb that spirit of unanimity which ought to influence our minds upon an occasion like the present. But I hope I may be allowed to say that, amongst the many distinguished men with whom I have had the honour of associating since I have been in this country, I know no one who had a larger fund of information upon all the leading questions of the day, or who was more ready to discuss them freely, fairly, and temperately, than our much-lamented friend. It has always seemed to me one of the most remarkable traits of his character, the wonderful tact, patience, and temper which he displayed under the most trying circumstances. However strongly he felt, however vigorously and eloquently he espoused his own views of the matter, he would nevertheless discuss the most burning questions, in public and in private, in the journal or the Council Chamber, in a spirit of moderation and fairness, which was an example to all public men. And there is also another thing which I take leave to mention, in which he set us all a bright example. I believe that few public men had more warm and fast friends than he had, of all ranks, amongst all classes, and in all sections of the community. He was in and out amongst us at all seasons. At our social gatherings, where we were in the habit of meeting native gentlemen, from Government House to the humblest amongst us, he was always a welcome and an honoured guest. And at all our public meetings, from the prize-givings at our schools and colleges to the meetings in this hall in aid of the most important public objects, he was ever ready with his advice, his eloquence, and his purse, to render us all the assistance in his power. With all this he was, as we well know, a great party leader, and had strong party views, and yet he never allowed his party views or his political feelings to interfere either with his social relations or the performance of his public duties. Gentlemen, I fear I have trespassed upon your time too long. I trust that in the few words which I have said I have adhered to my professed intentions, and have not encroached unduly upon the province of our native friends who are to follow me. The resolution which I beg to propose to you is this:—"That this meeting desires to place on record its sorrow at the untimely death of Rai Kristo Das Pal, Bahadur. As a member of the Legislative Council, successively of Bengal and of India, as a Municipal Commissioner, as a Justice of the Peace and Honorary Magistrate, and as a public journalist, he rendered most valuable services to the community at large. His zeal, ability, and unremitting devotion to public duty earned for him the highest meed of praise. His rectitude of purpose, his philanthropy and amiability of disposition secured for him the affection of all classes of the community. Gifted with rare intellectual powers, thoroughly familiar with the working of the British Indian Government, and cherishing an ardent desire to promote the well-being of his countrymen, he rendered invaluable services as a sound and highly-trusted interpreter between the governors and the governed. This meeting deeply deplores the loss which the community has sustained by his death."

MAHOMEDAN LAW.—The Times says:—"The third and last volume of 'The Minhādī at-tālibīn,' a leading Arabian authority on the Shafeite ramification of the Sunni law, has arrived in England, and the book is now complete. Thus, by the liberality of the Dutch Government and the industry of M. Van den Berg (the editor and translator), we are enabled, for the first time, to see the Shafeite doctrines as a whole, although frequent allusion is made to them in the celebrated Hamfite treatise, translated into English many years ago, and known as the Hedaya. It is long since our own Government has attempted anything of this kind, and it is notorious that English lawyers find it exceedingly difficult to obtain a competent knowledge of Mahomedan law for want of a proper library. Yet there are in Asia and Africa plenty of original treatises of authority; and it would surely not be impossible, with 'chairs' of Arabic at every university, to find competent translators? The French Government in Algeria and Tunis and our Government in India must have access to all the most valuable sources of Mahomedan law, and it may be hoped that the praiseworthy example of their less powerful neighbour may stimulate them to activity."

THE COMING VACANCIES IN THE INDIAN COUNCIL.

ONE of the few strong points in Lord Ripon's administration—and one that we have frequently cordially recognised in these columns—has been the judgment and the impartiality he has displayed in his appointments to the highest and most responsible offices. Sir Stuart Bayley, Mr. Bernard, Sir Alfred Lyall, Sir Rivers Thompson, Mr. Jones, Mr. T. C. Hope, and many others that might be named, have been selected by the late Viceroy for duties of the highest importance; and in each case the selection has been approved both by the verdict of the Services and the people, and by the results of the appointment. If, as we understand, one of Lord Ripon's last acts was to recommend to the Secretary of State the appointment of the present Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces to one of the coming vacancies in the India Office, the same happiness of choice will have followed him to the end. Sir Alfred Lyall, as one of the few survivors of the grand old Haileybury school, has seen a wide and varied service in India. From Bengal to the Central Provinces, from the Central Provinces to the Home Office, from the Home Office to Rajputana, thence to the Foreign Office, and finally back again to the headship of the North-Western Provinces—he has filled many most important offices, and has adorned them all. It may be admitted that he has at times shown a tendency to be too bureaucratic, to think too highly of the merits and privileges of the Civil Service; but esprit de corps may be pardoned in a member of that body that has mainly created and maintained our Indian Empire—whilst “civilianism” is nowadays not so prosperous as not to need a champion at the India Office. Gifted with literary powers of a high order, he has used them rather as the means of gracefully diverting leisure than for personal advancement; it is, however, well known that on more than one critical occasion they have exercised no little weight in the counsels of the Empire. On the subjects both of the Afghan policy and of the Ilbert Bill, Sir Alfred Lyall was opposed to Lord Ripon—a fact that makes the proposed appointment all the more creditable to both.

The commanding abilities of Sir Ashley Eden are such a tower of strength to the Council in Bengal affairs, that we fear there may be a danger of overlooking the undoubted necessity for bringing in more nominees from the Lower Provinces. Yet, never was that necessity more apparent than at the present time, when measures vitally affecting the present prosperity and future well-being of those regions must shortly come under review. We trust that, in filling up the other vacancies, regard may be had to the vast agricultural interests of Bengal, and a councillor selected who possesses both the confidence of the people and a wide experience of revenue work. And might it not be possible to induce to come to England, to fill a vacancy in the Council, a Native nobleman or gentleman who shall worthily and adequately represent the feelings and opinions of his fellow-countrymen? If such an appointment were possible, we are confident it would be immensely popular in India, as well as helpful to the Secretary of State.

THE TENURES REGISTRATION BILL.

The Bill which has been introduced into the Bengal Legislative Council by the Hon. Mr. Reynolds, under the unassuming title of “The Tenures Registration Bill” will require very careful consideration before it is passed into law. Mr. Reynolds has been one of the principal supporters of the Bengal Tenancy Bill in the Imperial Legislative Council; and the Tenures Registration Bill is a measure which has been carved out of the Tenancy Bill, as it deals with matters on which it is competent to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal to legislate. It is a curious and unusual circumstance that Mr. Reynolds is at one and the same time a member of the Bengal Legislative Council and also as a member of the Viceregal Legislative Council; he sits, as it were, both in the House of Lords and also in the House of Commons.

In applying to the Bengal Council for leave to introduce the Tenures Registration Bill, it was incumbent on Mr. Reynolds to explain what are technically called “the reasons and objects” of the Bill. Sir Rivers Thompson, as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, at the first meeting of his Council, had given a general idea of the scope of the Bill; in which he had laid some stress upon the point that the Bill would enforce the performance of a long-neglected duty—the establishment and maintenance of a record of rights throughout Bengal. This announcement had caused some apprehension in the minds of the zemindars, and apparently the circumstance induced Mr. Reynolds to lay more emphasis on the other objects which the Bill contemplates. He boldly asserted that the Bill is the outcome of the desire and intention of Government to redeem to the utmost the promise which it had made to the zemindars that facilities shall be given them for the realisation of their acknowledged rents. He said that a large proportion of the zemindars' rents consists of the rents of tenures, and the experience of the working of the famous Putnee tenure sale regulation has shown that nothing so effectually secures the punctual payment of rent as a power of summary sale, without the formalities and delays of a suit, whenever the rent falls into arrear. So far so good. But Mr. Reynolds went on to say that it would be impossible for the Government to extend the putnee sale procedure to permanent tenures in general unless such tenures were first registered; and the registration must be, not merely in the office of the zemindar, but a registration in a public office, with proper securities for the interests of all concerned.

It is greatly to be feared that the zemindars who have been asking Government for bread will find that they have been almost unblushingly presented with a stone. In the first place it may be remembered that the rents which the zemindars have found it so difficult to collect punctually, are not the rents of permanent tenures, but the rents of those ryots who cultivate the land without any written engagement; so that practically the relief prayed for by the zemindars will not be given, and the promise of the Government to aid the zemindars will not be redeemed to the utmost. The new Bill professes to follow the principle of the Putnee law. By that law when the rent of a Putnee tenure is not paid on the date fixed, the zemindar applies to the collector of the district to put the Putnee tenure up to auction. By the special terms of the Putnee law, the zemindar is held responsible for his instructions to the collector as to the validity and terms of the tenure as being liable for sale by the Putnee law. The collector is little more than the auctioneer or agent for the receipt of the arrears of rent. This system has worked without difficulty for more than half-a-century. It has been applied not merely to Putnee, but to the subordinate permanent tenures which have been created under the Putnees. Now the zemindars and all interested in the collection of permanent rents are told that they are no longer to be trusted. If they want the aid of the collector to realise by sale-process the rent of any permanent tenure, which is not a Putnee in name, they must submit their neck to the yoke so artfully prepared by Mr. Reynolds. The permanent tenures are to be registered in a public office, with proper securities for the interests of all parties concerned. The cloven foot is unmistakeably visible. The right of private contract between landlord and tenant is not to be respected. Any old permanent tenure which it is desired to register is to be examined, with proper security for the interests of all the parties concerned, which means that the contract is liable to be ripped open whenever the tenant thinks it convenient to object to it.

The zemindar is to apply for registration to the judicial officer who now bears the title of subordinate judge; and the rule seems specially designed to warn him of the litigation that is, in all probability, in store for him. Into this Court the zemindar is now invited to enter, to entitle himself to the aid of Government in recovering his rent from his permanent tenant. It is true that if he succeeds he will have little further to trouble him; but what chance is he likely to have of undisputed success? If the zemindar succeeds in safely registering his title, the subordinate judge will then communicate the information to the District Collector; and the zemindar will have to undergo further expense in satisfying himself that everything is correctly entered in the Collector's Records. How vastly different is all this from the existing Putnee sale procedure, which it professes to imitate, but from which the divergence is so fundamental!

Space is wanting to go fully into the other details of Mr. Reynolds's speech. But we may note that whereas Registration is to be at first optional to the zemindar, the Government proposes to take power to make it compulsory, and eventually to proceed to make that complete record of rights throughout Bengal which Sir Rivers Thompson imprudently predicted. A few weeks ago such an advanced Radical as Mr. Macfarlane pointed to the Permanent Settlement of Bengal as a certain security against internal danger in Bengal in case of the Russian invasion of India. But if the rights and the wealth and the influence of the zemindars are to be frittered away in a fallacious scheme of Registration, what will be the value of this security?

An important decision has recently been given by the Government of India affecting officers who were candidates for the Staff Corps when the new rules for the admission thereto of officers were published in the Special India Army Circular dated the 15th November, 1884. It has been decided that those officers whose admission as probationer for the Staff Corps was sanctioned prior to the 1st October, 1884, shall be subject to the rules for admission prescribed in the India Army Circulars, Clause 62 of 1882. Applicants for admission as probationers, but whose appointment as such had not been actually sanctioned at the date, viz., 15th November 1884, of the publication of the Special Army Circular, are allowed, should they wish it, to withdraw their applications, and rejoin their regiments at the expense of the State.

UNDER instructions from the Secretary of State for India it has been notified that when the families of officers are prevented on account of infectious complaints from accompanying the officers on board a troopship, passages may be provided subsequently on the production of a certificate that they would have accompanied the officer but for the existence at the time of embarkation of an infectious complaint. These passages will be termed "specially entitled passages," and the families will be subject to the same contributions for messing on board ship as if they had proceeded with the officer. This decision, of course, applies to passages both to and from India.

FORTS MICHNI and SHABKADAR have no longer commandants, and the Military Department is thus saved a yearly expenditure of Rs.3,600, the staff or command pay for each having been Rs.150 a month. The forts are still garrisoned by the military. The Border Police, however, are about to take them over, and the cost in future will fall upon the Punjab Government.

THE LIST WILL CLOSE ON THE 10TH FEBRUARY.

THE PUNJAUB AND CASHMERE CARPET COMPANY (Limited).—£10,000 already subscribed. Capital £100,000, in Shares of £5, payable 10s. on application, £2 on allotment, £1 on the 5th of April, 1885, £1 10s. on 5th July, 1885.

THE FOLLOWING, amongst other PRESS NOTICES, have been received :—
INVESTORS' GUARDIAN.

As will be seen from a notice appearing in another part of our impression, this Company is brought out under very distinguished and influential auspices, and the interest taken in the enterprise by Anglo-Indian officials, as well as by the men of business, will be readily understood upon a perusal of the prospectus, for its object is to foster a national Indian industry, which presents a most promising field for the employment of European capital and management. It is not too much to say that this Company will have ready to hand all the essential elements of a successful and lucrative manufacturing concern. There are the raw materials on the spot, in the shape of the unequalled wools of Cashmere and the Punjaub, and the beautiful indigenous dyes. There is an ample supply of skilled labour in the special carpet-weaving caste, and a sufficient number of the exquisite native patterns have been secured. Then there will be comparatively little opposition, for the Indian Government has agreed to abandon the manufacture of carpets in the gaols as soon as the Company gets to work, and as regards the demand, there cannot be a question, since Messrs. Maple and Co. and Messrs. Schoolbred are willing to contract for a continuous supply. The Government employing casual prison labour, and at many disadvantages, makes a profit of 19 per cent. without pushing the trade at all, and we can, therefore, readily credit the estimate of Col. Forbes, the managing director, that the Company will net over 30 per cent. when the six factories, which it is intended to establish, are in full working order. A contract has been made for the construction and equipment of these factories for the sum of £42,000, which will leave an ample balance of working capital, as subscriptions are invited for 20,000 shares of £5 each, proposed to be called up.

SHEFFIELD TELEGRAPH.

The Punjaub and Cashmere Carpet Company (Limited), with a capital of £100,000, divided into 20,000 shares of £5 each, proposes to take a prominent part in one of the most ancient industries of India. Until recently there was some danger of this manufacture dying out, as carpets were almost exclusively made for sale by prisoners in the gaols; but the operations of this Company will, it is believed, "rescue and restore" the art, and at the same time show a good commercial profit on the capital invested. The beauty of texture, colour, and picturesque originality of design in the old native patterns have never been rivalled, and the Company pledge themselves, as far as possible, to work only from native designs, and to use no aniline dyes, nor any but best Indian dyes.

CITIZEN.

The Punjaub and Cashmere Carpet Company has been formed with a capital of £100,000, divided into 20,000 shares of £5 each. The object of the Company is to establish Indian carpet factories in the Punjaub and on the frontiers of Cashmere, and, by the employment of the caste-weavers, to foster and develop the manufacture of carpets, so as to supply a growing demand for art carpets and rugs in Europe and America.

EVENING NEWS.

The prospectus is issued of the Punjaub and Cashmere Carpet Company (Limited), having a capital of £100,000 in 20,000 shares of £5 each. The company has been formed for the purpose of establishing Indian carpet factories in the Punjaub and on the frontiers of Cashmere, and, by the employment of the caste-weavers, fostering and developing the manufacture of carpets, so as to supply the growing demand for art carpets and rugs in Europe and America. The weavers of carpets, it is remarked, form a distinct hereditary class in India, possessed of unrivalled skill in their handicraft, and exhibiting exquisite taste in their designs, and the operations of this Company will, it is anticipated, rescue and restore the art of this manufacture, which is said to be in danger of dying out. The Company is desirous of commencing operations in India as soon as possible, with a view to making a complete exhibit of the carpets of purely Indian manufacture and design at the forthcoming Exhibition of 1886. The Company anticipate a good commercial profit on the capital invested, as there is said to be an ever-increasing demand for Indian carpets of the highest class. The founder of the Company, who has agreed to construct six freehold factories at Lahore, Amrikar, and Pathancote, has a large number of caste-weavers under his control, and has secured some of the fine old Indian carpet patterns.

HUDDERSFIELD CHRONICLE.

The Punjaub and Cashmere Carpet Company (Limited), capital £100,000, in £5 shares, of which 2,000 have been subscribed, is advertised to make and sell the best Indian Carpets. All the well-known Indian officials, such as Lord Lytton and Sir George Birdwood, are associated with the enterprise, and the connections of the Company are in every way respectable. We can commend it to our readers, and advise them all to write for a prospectus to learn further particulars.

THE NORTHERN DAILY MAIL.

The Punjaub and Cashmere Carpet Company (Limited), with a capital of £100,000, of which £10,000 has been privately subscribed, has been formed to manufacture and sell Indian carpets on a large scale. The Company is a strong and influential one, and is backed up by all the Government officials. We think well of it, and can recommend it to our readers.

Applications for Shares, enclosing cheque, should be made to Messrs Elborough and Co., 58, Lombard-street, London, E.C., or to the Agra. Bank, 35, Nicholas-Lane, E.C.

TELEGRAPHS.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1885.

Notes of the Week.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, January 23rd; Madras and Allahabad, January 21st; Calcutta, January 20th; Ceylon, January 20th; Burma, January 16th.

THE Times of this morning announces a most important fact, the significance of which will not, we trust, escape the notice of Lord Kimberley, and the India Office authorities. Telegraphic intelligence has been received that the Barons of Oudh, the famous talukdars of that province, have "taken alarm at the near prospect of the passing of the Bengal Tenancy Bill"—that they have determined to make common cause with the zemindars of Bengal in protesting against the measure—and that a joint-meeting of the landed interests of Bengal and Oudh is shortly to be held. It will thus be seen that the natural results of this incendiary legislation are rapidly showing themselves, and that the fever of alarm is spreading from Bengal to the rest of India. The next news will be that the panic has spread to the great Feudatory States; for if it be shown that a British Government can tamper, however indirectly, with such solemn national pledges as those of the Permanent Settlement, what confidence can our great Feudatory Princes any longer feel in the inviolability of their treaty rights? We cannot believe that two statesmen of the calibre of Lord Dufferin and Lord Kimberley will consent to any further paltering with such mischievous proposals as those of Mr. Ilbert.

WE regret to have to announce the death of M. Van Goedecke, the Chamberlain to the King of the Netherlands, and uncle of Lord Reay. The future Governor of Bombay was present at his uncle's funeral at the Hague on Saturday—a fact which goes to justify the action of the Committee of the Northbrook Club in the recent controversy in regard to the banquet to Lord Ripon, for it was obviously impossible, under the circumstances, for Lord Reay to accept the invitation of the Club jointly with Lord Ripon. We earnestly hope that this unfortunate little incident will be amicably arranged, and that those Conservative members of the Club who felt it their duty to resign will be induced to reconsider that decision. In common fairness and honesty, we cannot but think that the obvious indiscretion of some of Lord Ripon's speeches since his return, and the unseemly violence of his extreme Radical partisans, are such as to make more moderate politicians suspicious of banquets in his honour. But we are assured that no effort has been spared to divest the Northbrook Club banquet of every political significance; and we feel that the presence of Lord Northbrook himself in the chair is a solid guarantee for the rigorous enforcement of that honourable reticence on controverted political subjects, which is so necessary for the harmonious conduct of a non-political club.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times, in his despatch of yesterday, gives some account of the general character of the so-called "amendments" that have been introduced into the Bengal Tenancy Bill by the select committee of the Viceroy's Legislative Council. He states, in rather mild language, a few of the objections that are still taken to the Bill. But he gives no idea of the universal resentment that is felt among the educated classes of Bengal generally, and especially among the agricultural community, at the apparent determination of the small clique of Radical "land-reformers" in the Government of India to force the measure on the country. We deal briefly with the subject in our leading columns, and will return to it next week.

THE Bombay Exhibition is, we learn, to be postponed until the cold weather of 1887-88. This is in accordance with rumours that have been for some time current in London; and the fact is now authoritatively announced by the Calcutta correspondent of the Times.

THE first article in this month's Colburn's United Service Magazine is a particularly opportune and valuable one on "The Cossack and the Sepoy," from the well-known and able pen of Colonel Edward Paske. It gives (1) an outline of the Russian scheme of advance on India; (2) a consideration of the political and strategical complications of the subject; and (3) suggestions of measures of defence combined with attack, that might be adopted by the British Government. We commend the paper to the careful attention of our readers and the responsible authorities.

WE observe with regret the death last week, from small-pox, of H.H. the Princess of Tanjore.

WE have the best authority for stating that there is absolutely no foundation for the assertion, industriously circulated by Reuter's Agency in a telegram from its Calcutta Branch, that the Bengal Tenancy Bill "as revised is free from the features which were strongly objected to by the zemindars." On the contrary, the Bill as at present recast contains most of the worst features to which objection has been taken; and not the zemindars only, but the whole of the agricultural community of Bengal, as well as all the leading English owners of land in that country, are determined to leave no stone unturned to obtain justice from the British Government and the British public.

WE are desired to remind our many readers who take a warm interest in this subject, as involving the honour of the British name in India, that the General Meeting of the Committee, to concert further measures for opposing this iniquitous measure, will be held at Limmer's Hotel, Conduit Street, W., on Friday next, Feb. 13, at 4 p.m. All who sympathise with the movement are invited to join the Committee on this occasion; and can obtain cards of admission on application to Roper Lethbridge, Esq., Hon. Sec., Indian Constitutional Association, 3, Westminster Chambers, Victoria Street, S.W. The Right Hon. the Earl of Wemyss and March will take the chair at the Conference, for which arrangements will be made at this Committee-meeting.

CAN it be possible? Or is it only a huge practical joke on the part of the Russian Government? A telegram from St. Petersburg in the Times of Friday last states that M. de Lessar, the second Russian commissioner and colleague of Sir Peter Lumsden on the Afghan Boundary Commission, is now in—London! It is gravely announced—at this time of day—after Sir Peter Lumsden and Colonel Ridgeway have arrived in the desolate regions of Central Asia long ago, and have been "playing about" at Bala Murghab for weeks, and trying to pretend they rather like being kept waiting—that the Russian Commissioner has been "attached to the Russian Ambassador in London to assist his Excellency in coming to an understanding with the British Foreign Office as to the ethnographical frontier claimed by Russia in the Transcaspian"! Prodigious! "To assist his Excellency"—it might just as well have been written out plainly—"in making long noses at Mr. Gladstone and Lord Granville"! Truly, the Foreign Office under the present régime seems to exist to make the British name a laughing-stock, a hooting, and a derision to mankind.

EVEN the long-suffering correspondent of the Times cannot stand this last most astounding instance of our national humiliation. He telegraphs:—

There could be no better proof of the difficulties into which the want of a clear-sighted policy by Mr. Gladstone's Government has brought the English half of the Afghan Frontier Commission. No preliminary basis for the meeting of the Joint Commission seems to have been prearranged, as was to be expected; and now that Sir Peter Lumsden is already on the spot these preliminary matters have to be gone into in London before Russia will consent to despatch her part of the Commission. As far as one can judge here, if any one is to blame for the delay and the premature appearance of Sir Peter Lumsden on the Murghab without his Russian colleagues it is the British Government, which thought that certain important details could be discussed by the Commission on the spot, while Russia has all along insisted upon the necessity of first settling them in St. Petersburg and London.

It will be observed that the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times, in his amiable desire to excuse the Russian authorities, endeavours to show that Lord Granville's stupidity was something preternatural. But the fact appears to be that the stupidity went no further than this, that our Government once more displayed that fatuous belief in Russia's good intentions that seems to be invincible in Mr. Gladstone—and that once more we are paying the penalty.

We reproduce elsewhere Mr. Batten's excellent letter to the Times, in which he shows the hollowness of Lord Ripon's grossly egotistical remarks at Leeds about the wonders of his financial administration. It is only necessary to confront Lord Ripon with the hard facts, to prove the worthlessness of most of his self-laudation. But it is the duty of those who know the facts to lay them before the British public; it will then be useless for the late Viceroy to attempt to rehabilitate the unhappy memories of a reign of talk in India by floods of talk and turtle-soup in England.

We deeply regret the painful incidents that have taken place at the Northbrook Indian Club, in reference to the dinner proposed to be given to Lord Ripon by the Club. We should not have referred to the matter in this place, but for the correspondence that has taken place on the subject in the columns of the Times. It is an indisputable fact that the majority of the English members of the Club happen to be Conservatives—also that the Club is solemnly pledged strictly to maintain its non-political character. Sir Trevor Lawrence, therefore, was strictly within his right in demanding that steps should be taken by the Committee to divest the proposed banquet of any semblance of that political significance, by which a clique of Radicals have been endeavouring to coerce Lord Dufferin, by dining his unfortunate predecessor at Leeds, at the National Liberal Club in London, and elsewhere. We trust the Committee will still see their way to the arrangement originally come to in the Club to obviate this risk of importing party-feeling into a most useful and pleasant social rendezvous—that, namely, of inviting Lord Ripon and Lord Reay together. We learn that it was distinctly on this understanding that some of the Conservative members of the Club had intimated their intention of attending; and we hope, in the interests of peace and good-fellowship, and for the healing of past sores, that this arrangement may still be adopted—and that, in that case, Sir Trevor Lawrence and the other Conservatives who have withdrawn from the Club may be induced to reconsider their decision.

THERE seems to be no end to the aggressions which the policy of the present Government invites in all parts of the world. We deal with the very serious aspect of affairs in Burma and Siam—into both countries France seems determined to intrude—in our leading columns.

THE Athenæum states that Mr. C. J. Lyall of the Indian Civil Service is about to bring out a volume of translations from the Arabic, consisting partly of choice extracts from the "Hamasa," and partly of entire poems such as the "Mu'al-lagah" of Zuheyr. Some of these translations appeared in the Asiatic Society's Journal in 1878 and 1881.

WE have much pleasure in drawing attention to a report in our home columns of a meeting convened to raise a testimonial to Professor W. C. Maclean, C.B., M.D., on the occasion of his retirement from the Chair of Military Medicine at Netley.

MR. ALLEN, Director of the Bengal and North-Western Railway Company, made a capital speech at Sehwan the other day in proposing the health of Sir Rivers Thompson at a banquet given in honour of the completion of that railway. We will quote one sentence, as happily illustrating—like the speeches at the Memorial meeting in honour of Kristodas Pal—that the stupid animosities born of the unfortunate Ilbert Bill are beginning to give way before the practical common-sense and good-feeling of the English and Indian races. Mr. Allen said:—

I believe, gentlemen, that the great mass of our countrymen here—especially of that noble service, the record of whose benefactions to India is so deeply engrained in the national life that time itself can hardly efface it—I say that the great mass of our countrymen regard their native fellow-subjects with feelings of real friendliness and respect. That they view their eminence in the public service, on the Bench, at the Bar, and in the mart, as the well-won meed of their talents and their worth. Nor will their further progress, great as it is probably destined hereafter to be, kindle any narrow feelings among us of envy or dislike.

THE Englishman has the following account of the Calcutta Freight Market, corrected to January 20:—

At the advance lately established in freights, both for steamers and sailers, there has been a fair amount of business done during the early part of last week. Steamers for January and early February loading have booked cargo freely, and several sailers have been fixed for London and Liverpool. Latterly the market is again much quieter, and shows a declining tendency. Our unfixed tonnage stands at 35,000 tons.

THE following on the Calcutta Indigo Market is taken from Messrs. W. Moran and Co.'s Market Report:—

Four public sales have been held since our last issue, at which 4,306 chests were offered, and 3,975 chests sold. The demand has continued good, and the advance quoted in our last has been maintained for all qualities; the few lots of desirable Oudes that have been offered have realised extreme prices.

THE same firm gives the following account of the Calcutta Tea Market:—

Sales comprising 12,735 chests, of which 12,393 were sold, were held on the 15th instant. Prices paid were irregular, compared with rates given at the previous auctions. There was good inquiry for useful sorts, especially for leafy broken at a slight rise, but other kinds with poor or unserviceable liquors sold greatly in favour of buyers. Small breaks were decidedly neglected. The next auctions will be held on the 29th instant.

THE Times of India has the following obituary till the departure of the mail, January 23:—

Narayan Rao Holkar, son of Sir Kasi Rao Dada Saheb, K.C.S.I., and nephew of the Maharajah Holkar; Surgeon Arthur G. Collington, Medical Officer attached to the Wing of the 29th M.N.I. at Sumbulpore; Babu Haris Chandra, dramatic author and poet of Benares; Mr. J. P. Linton, Translator and Interpreter of the Original Side of the Calcutta High Court; Sir Rajah Sahib Dial, K.C.S.I.

THE LATE KRISTODAS PAL.

Somewhat late in the day a movement has been started in Calcutta to do honour to the revered memory of Kristodas Pal, whose untimely death six months ago was generally felt to be almost a national misfortune. The delay that has taken place in giving effect to the widespread feelings of regret then evoked is, we presume, partly due to a desire to defer action until the arrival in Calcutta of the great officials from Simla and Darjeeling. The meeting held on Saturday afternoon in the Calcutta Town Hall was both large and representative.

Sir Rivers Thompson, Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, filled the chair, and among the speakers were one of the members of Council, Sir Stuart Bayley, the Chief Justice, Sir R. Garth, the official Chairman of the Municipal Commissioners, Mr. H. L. Harrison, and several leaders of the native community, including the Bombay member of the Viceroyal Legislative Council.

We are glad to see that in the speeches due prominence was given to Kristodas Pal's journalistic work, for notwithstanding his long and honourable connection with the Municipality and the Legislature, he will be best remembered in the future as the man who, in the capacity of editor of the Hindoo Patriot, did more than anybody else to enlarge the scope and elevate the tone of native journalism throughout India. Of humble origin, and without powerful patrons, Kristodas Pal, in spite of great difficulties, attained a position which but few can expect to ever attain, and it is to be hoped that the story of a life so full of interest and encouragement to his fellow-countrymen will not long remain unwritten.—Times of India.

Telegraphic Intelligence.

The following telegrams on the Afghan Frontier Commission are from the Times correspondent at St. Petersburg, dated the 1st and 5th inst. :—

"To day's Journal de St. Pétersbourg returns to the absurd rumour of Persian troops being sent for to protect the members of the English Commission on the Afghan frontier, and takes occasion to repeat that the Persian expedition has been sent to keep in order the Turkomans of the Attrek. At the same time, the organ of the Foreign Office reminds English journals that there are three frontier delimitations to be made—first, between Russia and Persia on the Attrek; secondly, between Russia and England on the Afghan frontier; and, thirdly, between Persia and England on the frontiers between Persia, Seistan and Afghanistan."

"M. Lessar, the second Russian Commissioner for the delimitation of the Afghan frontier, will have now reached London, whither, it appears, he started on Sunday somewhat suddenly, instead of going to Tiflis, as was at first reported. He has been attached to the Russian Ambassador in London to assist his Excellency in coming to an understanding with the British Foreign Office as to the ethnographical frontier claimed by Russia in the Transcaspien."

The following telegram is from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Feb. 6 :—

"A committee representing the citizens of Rangoon has addressed a letter to the Chief Commissioner. It calls attention to its letter of October 16, which still remains unanswered, and states that subsequent events have tended to confirm the opinion then expressed. Trade, which was then threatened, is now paralyzed, and there is no hope of its revival until order has been restored in Upper Burmah."

"This prospect fills the committee with alarm and dismay. The case is one demanding immediate attention, and the committee respectfully prays that the Government will take action to save the trade of the province from complete ruin, and Upper Burmah from becoming the prey of brigands or the appanage of some foreign power."

"The Chief Commissioner replied that the memorial would be forwarded to the Viceroy."

The following is the usual weekly telegram from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Feb. 8 :—

"The Select Committee on the Bengal Tenancy Bill has now finished its sittings, and its report and the amended Bill will be presented before the end of the month. There is every reason to hope that the measure will be passed through the remaining stages by March 28, the date fixed for the Viceroy's departure from Calcutta. It seems likely, too, that in the form which it has now assumed, the Bill will meet, if not with general acceptance, at least with little real opposition. The Bengal Government has consented, as I have already informed you, to abandon several provisions to which the zemindars most strongly objected. The latter would have been better pleased had the restrictions on enhancement of rent by private contract, and the clause legalising sub-leases been also struck out, and they appear to object to the supplementary Bill for regulating the appointment of village accountants, which has lately been introduced into the provincial Legislature. It may be doubted, however, whether anything short of the entire withdrawal of the Bill would altogether satisfy the zemindars; and as the Government is not likely to take that course, it would seem to be most desirable in the interests of all parties that the measure should be passed as quickly as possible in the comparatively harmless shape which it has now taken."

"The recent addition to the judicial staff of the Calcutta High Court has enabled that Court to depute one of its members, Mr. Justice Prinsep, on a tour of inspection of the provincial Courts. Lately the Court has been so short-handed that it has been obliged altogether to neglect this very important duty, and some fifteen years have elapsed since the last inspection occurred. On that occasion a number of very grave irregularities were disclosed, and it is probable that the present inspection will show a similar result. The condition of the subordinate Civil Courts throughout India is such as to call for a searching inquiry and a thorough reform. The expense of a lawsuit in one of these Courts is often absolutely prohibitive, while the means by which an unscrupulous defendant can keep his opponent at arm's-length are so numerous that it is not uncommon for creditors to abandon their just claims rather than incur the cost and annoyance of trying to enforce them, and even when a decree is obtained the difficulties are by no means at an end. Indeed, Sir Barnes Peacock is said to have remarked—and the remark has much truth in it—that an Indian litigant's real troubles began when he had obtained a decree. A highly placed legal functionary of Bengal has lately been publishing in a local paper a series of letters showing that this scandalous state of affairs is in great measure due to the inefficient and underpaid Ministerial establishments supplied to provincial Courts. Mr. Justice Prinsep's inspection will doubtless throw fuller light on the subject, and if the High Court can contrive to continue such inspections periodically they will check irregularities and do much good. But something more is needed, and no real and lasting reform can be expected until the Government takes the matter in hand and recognizes the obligation to spend upon the improvement of the Civil Courts the large surplus revenue which it derives from these Courts."

"A number of the leading natives of Bombay held a meeting for the purpose of establishing a political association, Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy presiding. Several speakers dwelt upon the want of such a body, and explained its object to be the advocacy of native rights coupled with unimpeachable loyalty to the Throne. A committee was formed to carry out the objects of the meeting."

"It is announced that the Bombay Exhibition is to be postponed till the autumn of 1887. The Governor has promised to join the Executive Committee in London, and to come out to the Exhibition in a private capacity."

"The Governor of Bombay arrived at Calcutta on Tuesday on a visit to the Viceroy. On the same day Admiral Hewett arrived with Her Majesty's ships Euryalus and Dragon."

"Lord Randolph Churchill arrived yesterday. It is rumoured that he is to be entertained at a public dinner by citizens of Calcutta."

"The Duke and Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Don Carlos left last week by the French mail steamer. They landed at Madras, dined with the Governor, and proceeded on their voyage next day."

"Sir Salar Jung and Mr. Cordery, the British Resident of Hyderabad, are expected here this week. It is stated that the Nizam will visit England in the spring."

"The princess of Tanjore died of small-pox last week."

"The report that King Theebaw has concluded a treaty with France, stipulating among other things for the residence of a French Consul at Mandalay, which I mentioned last week, has gained strength and consistency, and appears to have at last some foundation. The letter of the Rangoon merchants to the Government, a summary of which was telegraphed on Friday, shows that the desire on their part to induce the Government to interfere in Upper Burma grows in strength. There can be no doubt that the trade of British Burma is now in a very depressed state, and that this is in great part due to the anarchy prevailing in Upper Burma, although it may be doubted whether the people in Rangoon are right in attributing it entirely to that cause. There can be no doubt, too, that a military expedition against Mandalay would be a simple and easy affair. Since the last Burmese war the Burman monarchy has lost a large portion of its territory, and is now in population and military strength inferior to many of the Indian feudatory princes. It has been estimated by a high authority that a force of 1,500 men would suffice to subdue Burma, and that the campaign would probably be bloodless or nearly so. But with the Afghan boundary question still unsettled, and with the possibility of being required to send a force to the Soudan, the Indian Government is likely to be unwilling to increase its responsibilities, or to interfere actively without some more urgent necessity than has yet arisen."

"Mr. Holt Hallett has arrived at Calcutta after spending a year in exploring the country between Burmah and Siam. He started from Moulmein, and went first up the Salween river to Yembin, and proceeded thence by Shweeyeen to Hlinaboay Town, 100 miles north-east of Moulmein. He next crossed the hills to Muanghaut on the Meping, a branch of the Meinam river. He went on by boat to Zimme and thence to Bangkok. He describes the greater part of the country as fertile and thickly peopled, and he estimates the gross population of Siam and its tributaries at 7,500,000. The journey was undertaken for the purpose of determining the feasibility of Mr. Colquhoun's scheme for a railway from Moulmein to connect with the proposed Siamese railway from Bangkok to Kianghsen, a town on the Meikong, about 120 miles south of the Chinese frontier. Mr. Hallett estimates the cost of the British portion of the line at £930,000, and believes that if it were once begun the Siamese Government would readily undertake the connecting line in Siam. He considers the traffic would be enormous, and thinks the scheme would greatly increase the prosperity of British Burma. He proceeds home to report to the Chambers of Commerce."

THE VICEROY AND THE VOLUNTEERS.—The following is an extract from Presidency District Orders by Brigadier-General H. C. Wilkinson, C.B., Commanding :—Fort William, 2nd January. "The Brigadier-General Commanding has great pleasure in announcing to the whole of the troops that attended the Brigade Parade yesterday (the 1st of January), that he has received the commands of his Excellency the Viceroy to communicate to them the satisfaction of his Excellency at their appearance, and the manner in which they performed their drill. The Viceroy was pleased to express his pleasure at having had an opportunity of inspecting the troops, and his high appreciation of their soldier-like bearing."

THE EURASIAN COMMUNITY.

The movement started rather less than two years ago for the purpose of improving the political and social condition of the domiciled Europeans and Eurasians of Bombay has so far met with an amount of success which must be very gratifying to all well-wishers of that important section of the community. Thanks to the energy of the honorary secretary, Mr. Essai, and the gentlemen associated with him, some of the objects for which the Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Association was formed have already been attained, and we hope to be able to announce in a short time that the arduous work of organising the Association has been fully completed. The society owes its existence to the series of lectures which were delivered in this city early in the year 1883 by Mr. D. S. White, the well known leader of the Eurasian community in Madras. Scoffers have called Mr. White a visionary and an enthusiast, but although some of that gentleman's schemes have not quite realised the expectations of their author, it is due to him to say that he has taught the Eurasian community the meaning of self-help. He has always preached the doctrine of self-reliance, and in his Bombay lectures he specially dwelt on the mistake which the men of his class had hitherto made of being content with Government service. The account which Mr. White was able to give of the success of the Madras Anglo-Indian and Eurasian Association was very encouraging. That association began with only seven members, but at the end of three years it had five thousand, and no less than twenty-eight branches. With prospects much more depressing than Bombay, says a pamphlet issued by the Madras Society some time ago, and from a community very much poorer, the sum of about Rs. 75,000 has been raised within three years for the purpose of the Association, and has been applied to the founding of a colony, securing employment for over five hundred persons, promoting a building society and a loan association, the latter of which has rescued by timely relief numbers who would have succumbed to the money-lender, and now all over Southern India are branches established upon similar lines.

At the conclusion of Mr. White's last lecture in Bombay a resolution affirming the desirability of forming an association for the promotion and protection of the interests of the domiciled European and Eurasian community of Western India was unanimously adopted. A provisional committee was appointed, and in a very short time the society was duly formed. Although, as compared with Calcutta and Madras, the East Indian community of Bombay is a small one, the society already possesses nearly three hundred members, and it is expected that, as its advantages become better known, the number will rapidly increase. At a meeting held some weeks ago, the opinion was expressed that before long the society will have at least one thousand members. The material condition of the domiciled Europeans and Eurasians of Western India as a body is considerably better than that of similar communities in the other presidencies. We have, unfortunately, some poor whites in Bombay, but their number is, we believe, inappreciable; at any rate there are not enough of them to justify the establishment of a Eurasian colony, such as that which has been founded in the neighbourhood of Mysore. But although there may be no actual distress on a large scale to relieve, there is a great room in Bombay for a provident society such as this. The only fear we have is that the society may be attempting too much, and that it may suffer from a too great dispersion of its forces. But the interests of the members are in the hands of men of established position in the city, and we observe that care has been taken to distribute the work among different persons and not to place it all on the shoulders of a few men. The necessity for this will be at once admitted when we mention that, in addition to its general objects, political and otherwise, the Association has or shortly will have, provident, death, industrial, and building funds, and a loan and deposit society. The Loan and Deposit Society has already been started, and pecuniary assistance granted to members in want of temporary aid. This very important branch of the society's operations will be watched with special interest, and if the experiment succeeds, as we have no doubt it will, a blow will have been struck at the trade of the professional money-lenders, which may have very important results. The Loan and Deposit Society is managed by a board of directors selected from the members of the parent society, and its main objects are to receive money deposits for stated periods, at rates of interest to be fixed from time to time, and to grant loans on approved security. The capital is Rs. 50,000, divided into five thousand shares of ten rupees each, which can only be held by members of the Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Association. Membership of the Death Benefit Fund is obtained by the payment of a small donation. On the death of a member each of the surviving members is called upon to pay to the fund a sum not exceeding a rupee, which is handed over to the relatives of the deceased.

The society has begun well, and it will be a lasting disgrace to the community in whose interests it has been started if through apathy they allow the movement to fail. But we have no such anticipation. Many years ago the author of the "Indo-Briton" wrote as follows regarding the East Indian body:—"Their apathy with respect to their own interests—their desire for the trifling and puerile vanities of life—their sluggish contentment with the little learning they pick up at school—their propensities to sneer at the exertions of their own class—all these have restrained their progress. The greatest fault," he goes on to say, "if there is one greater than another, is the propensity to sneer, to jeer, and to scoff at every attempt which is sincerely and honestly made to bring them together and to induce a community of feeling among them." Happily this description would not be true if applied to the community at the present day, and we hope that the efforts which are now being made by the more vigorous of its members to elevate their class will meet with the hearty encouragement of Government. The few words that Lord Dufferin addressed to the deputation from the Society that waited upon him, when he passed through Bombay, may be accepted as an assurance that so far as his Excellency is concerned no more Roorkee Resolutions, at any rate, will be introduced during his reign. If at any time the Eurasians in India require encouragement in their efforts after self-help, they have only to turn to the extraordinary progress of their brethren in Ceylon. There the "berghers," as they are called, are a most flourishing community. They are, as has been said, the wheels that keep the golden hands of Government in motion. They occupy all the subordinate posts in the public offices. But they do a great deal more than this. They are the life and soul of the mercantile community. They are as energetic as the Parsees of Bombay, and as irrepressible as the Bengalee Baboos. But there they have founded a kind of national life of their own; and their status, which has only been acquired of late years, is mainly due to the development of the very organizations which Mr. Essai and his friends are now endeavouring to acclimatize in Bombay.—Times of India.

THE IMPORTANCE OF INDIAN DRUGS.—At the fifty-second annual meeting of the British Medical Association a paper was read by D. H. Cullimore, M.D., late senior physician to the North-West London Hospital, retired surgeon Indian Army, on the therapeutic action of the Aconitum ferox or Indian aconite, a medicine indigenous to India, to which he wished to call attention. After describing various specimens of this drug, he said:—"The Aconitum ferox seu virosum is, as its name indicates, the most powerful and deadly of all the species of aconitia, as well as the most familiar among the poisonous plants called bikh or bish. So much so is this, that the word bikh, which literally means a poison, has come also to be the vernacular application of the Aconitum ferox. This plant was first identified and described by Wallich in his Plantæ Asiaticæ Rariores. It is a native of the Himalaya Mountains, Sirmor, Kumaon, and Nepal, and one of most celebrated articles in Indian medicine and toxicology. It is generally found at an elevation of from 10,000 to 14,000 feet; its presence being stated, on good authority, to indicate that the fever-range is passed. This fact might possibly suggest its use in malarial fevers. The root is highly poisonous, both internally and when applied to wounds; and its action in this latter respect, when in a concentrated form and fresh, is dangerous in the extreme. A preparation of the root is much used in the hilly districts to poison arrows, for the destruction of wild beasts and tigers, which are often destroyed in this manner when approaching and leaving their watering places. In former times, also, these poisoned arrows were often directed against higher game than tigers, not only during the internecine struggles of the mountaineers, but also against the regular troops of the East India Company. Thus, many years ago, Dr. Berry White, who may still be seen at the meetings of the Epidemiological Society, when in charge of a party of Sepoys, during an engagement with the Abors or Padams, heroically sucked a wound, and suffered distinctly from the action of the poison on his tongue. The Abors inhabit the hilly country bordering on Thibet, to the north of the valley of the Bramapootra river." At the conclusion of the paper Professor Matthew Hay (Aberdeen) said the members were greatly indebted to Dr. Cullimore for his varied observations on the effects and uses of Aconitum ferox.

THE MACLEAN TESTIMONIAL.—At a meeting held on Thursday, January 15, 1885, at the residence of Surgeon-General Sir Joseph Fayrer, K.C.S.I., the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—1. That a representative committee, composed of members of the public medical services, be formed for the purpose of taking steps to mark by a suitable memorial their high appreciation of the distinguished services of Professor W. C. Maclean, C.B., M.D., on the occasion of his retirement from the Chair of Military Medicine in the Army Medical School at Netley. 2. That the following gentlemen be requested to act as a provisional committee for the purpose of carrying out the foregoing resolution, with power to add to their number:—Surgeon-General Sir J. OBITUARY.

COLONEL WILLIAM F. F. WALLER, V.C., Bombay Staff Corps, and late of the 25th Bombay Native Infantry, died at Bath on the 29th ult., in his 45th year. He entered the service in 1857, and in the following year saw considerable service in India, including the siege and storm of Chandaree and Jhansi, battle of the Betwa and capture of Calpee. The Victoria Cross was awarded him for the conspicuous gallantry he displayed at the capture and storm of the fortress of Gwalior in June, 1858. He, with Lieutenant Rose (who was killed), were the only Europeans present and with a mere handful of men they attacked the fortress, climbed on the roof of a house, shot the gunners opposed to them, carried all before them, and took the fort, killing every man.

THE FRERE MEMORIAL FUND.—From a list of subscriptions just received from Bombay we gather that the Indian subscriptions to this fund already amount to more than 27,000 rupees. It is confidently expected that the Indian committee will be able to remit a sum of £2,500 to the London committee before the list closes. Among the subscribers it may be mentioned that the Maharajah of Kolhapore has given 2,000 rupees, and that Sir Didkar Rao, the ex-Dewan of the Gwalior State, has subscribed 1,000 rupees.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

MR. GROWSE'S "BULANDSHAHR."*

The book which Mr. Growse has just completed comprises three chapters, the first of which describes the district of Bulandshahr, its characteristics and its capabilities; the second gives a résumé of the history of the town, and the antiquities there discovered; and the third sets forth the architectural improvements which have been effected in the place during recent years. There is also a Preface, which tells some painful truths regarding the hasty measures of a so-called reform which have been precipitately introduced into India, with no other result than that of setting the people at loggerheads and otherwise disturbing the country.

In the chapter describing the district Mr. Growse gives a pleasant picture of the quiet and unostentatious growth of Bulandshahr, and of the general well-to-do condition of the people. He considers the post office and the railway as the greatest civilisers of the district; for they have reached all classes of the community, whereas our schools have benefited but a single class, and most of our other foreign importations have been more hurtful than beneficial. The following sentences may be commended to the serious consideration of recent disturbers:—"In such a quiet and prosperous part of the country where there is no great injustice to correct, or practical grievance to remedy, it seems the height of unwisdom to be for ever introducing new laws and systems of administration, which, however admirable in theory, have never been recognised as wants by the people themselves. What they want of the Government is the strong maintenance of order, and the persistent extension of material improvements. These are boons which they can understand and appreciate far more highly than the invidiousness of the franchise, and the anarchy of self-government."

The chapter on the history of Bulandshahr is singularly interesting. Mr. Growse argues from the old name Baran, and the situation and traditions of the neighbourhood, that it is the site of the ancient Bārāṇḍvata, and if he is correct, the opinion commonly held by Sanskritists that Bārāṇḍvata represented old Hastināpura or Dehli, must be abandoned. The early importance of the place is attested by the numerous Buddhist and other remains recently unearthed, some of which are peculiar to Bulandshahr, and of exceptional interest. Among these may be mentioned the discovery of an ancient pottery, with numerous specimens of old manufacture. A curious clay seal has also been recovered, the device on which Mr. Growse reads as Matila, and Dr. Hoernle suggests may be Hattiya. In our opinion the letters are Hattipa, and this suggests that it is an abbreviation for Hattipura, a Prakritized form of Hastipura, the equivalent of Hastināpura, and this is a conjecture which would connect Bulandshahr with the ancient capital of India in a remarkable manner. We should certainly like an opportunity of inspecting the seal itself.

The chapter on what is the practical rebuilding of Bulandshahr is the special feature of the volume, and that which gives it all its beauty from the excellent photographs and lithographs with which it is adorned. This is the part of his work, as ruler of the district, into which Mr. Growse has infused most vigour. He has made architecture a study, and found his attention attracted to the many excellent characteristics of native art. He could not fail to regret the well-known decline of Indian arts and manufactures; or to restrain himself from stopping the downward tendency, as far as it lay in his power to do so. In the pursuit of this laudable purpose he was ably seconded by the native gentry, who have liberally contributed to public works, besides adorning their own homes with splendid examples of modern skill and taste. The finest buildings recently erected are Jabāngirābād House, a stone model of the façade of which has been secured by the authorities of South Kensington Museum; the Chaprāvāt Gate, a handsome addition made to his house in 1882 by Manlavī Muhammad Bakhsh; the Gulaoti House, a splendid residence erected by Saīd Mihrān Ali; and, among public buildings, the Market Terrace and its shops, and the charming Bathing-ghāt near the bridge. The Hindu residents have decided on building a second ghāt, to be named after Rājā Lackhman Singh, who has made himself famous for the patriotic ardour with which he has laboured for his country's good, and for his rare scholarship and literary ability.

Mr. Growse's book on Bulandshahr is a work of exceptional merit, and although many of the statements he makes may be unpalatable to those who sway the destinies of Hindustan, they will win for him the hearty approval of sober-minded well-wishers of India, and strengthen the gratitude which the natives of Hindustan already feel for him.

THE REV. T. B. SPEEDY, Chaplain of Chunar, has been appointed Lieutenant in the Ghazipur Volunteer Rifle Battalion, vice Lieutenant W. Jackson, promoted.

His Highness the Maharaja of Durbhungah seconded the resolution. He said:—Your Honour, Sir Richard, Maharajas, Rajas, Nawabs, and Gentlemen.—It would, perhaps, have been better had the task of seconding this resolution fallen into abler hands. There are many here who had been longer and more intimately connected with the late Rai Kristo Das Pal—men who have watched his career almost from the very beginning, and associated with him in the numerous capacities in which he laboured for the public good, and earned the esteem alike of the rulers and the ruled. It is to me a melancholy recollection that I had the honour of being associated with Rai Kristo Das in the public function which was the culmination of his political career, when, indeed, he died in harness, a victim to overwork. As a member of the Legislative Council of India, and a member of the Select Committee on the Bengal Tenancy Bill, I can bear personal testimony to his zeal, ability, and unremitting devotion to public duty, which in the terms of this resolution earned for him the highest meed of praise. The experiment of asking public bodies like the British Indian Association to nominate members for the Legislative Council of India was a great step in advance, in the path of political progress—a serious political experiment upon the success of which depended the realisation of much of our future hope—(hear, hear). The hand of death has broken the seal of silence which etiquette puts upon our lips when we have to speak of living personalities, and I believe I am representing the unanimous opinion of all sections of the community, Native and European, when I say that Rai Kristo Das Pal was an eminent success in the distinguished position to which he was called by the unanimous voice of his political associates. For soundness of reasoning, for command of language, for readiness of rejoinder, and the graces of style, it can be said that Rai Kristo Das could challenge a comparison with any one of the distinguished official members of that Council. This, indeed, was, as I have said, the culmination of his public career—not that he was not destined for higher success, but that he had reached this point when his parting time came, accelerated by his own devotion to public duties. And here, as in the public functions which he had previously exercised, he set an example which, I have no doubt, will always furnish a very strong argument for the political advancement of my educated countrymen—(applause). It is unfortunate for our country that its best men die so young, and that such mournful occasions as this when we meet to record the death of a distinguished ornament to the community, whose loss it simply incalculable, should be so frequent. But the dictates of Providence are inscrutable, and when the loss falls upon us we can only do our sad best to record our sense of grief, and endeavour to discharge our debt of gratitude by erecting a suitable memorial which may be a visible token of our feelings on the occasion—(applause).

Mr. Harrison, in supporting the resolution, said: Sir Rivers Thompson and gentlemen,—As in some respects representing this city, I have been asked to-day to support this resolution. I feel that I must confine myself to matters of which I may be said to have mere personal knowledge. I, therefore, with your permission, will only detain you for a few minutes while I speak about his connection with the Corporation, and more particularly about those singular gifts of writing and speaking which were the chief of those rare intellectual powers with which he was gifted. It has sometimes been said that in the Corporation there is too much speaking and too little work, but as regards Kristo Das Pal I am bound to say that the criticism is by no means just. The work of the Corporation is done in committee meetings, which are ten to one in number as compared with our general meetings. The general meetings are like appellate courts, at which a few of the decisions of the committees, such as involve most important issues, and regarding which it is known that there is a division of opinion, are reconsidered, and on such an occasion, and before the larger body there assembled, he I think, takes a narrow view of what is meet and fitting, who objects to the athletes of the Corporation trying their powers of persuasion on their fellow-citizens, with whom the decision rests. On such occasions it is true to say that eloquence is education itself. In all communities, when the arbitrament of the sword ceases, appeal must be made elsewhere, and the appeal is made to the arbitrament of the pen and the forum. It is the law of political life that at such time, as people progress, those who possess these powers, those who can write as Kristo Das Pal wrote, above all, those who can speak as Kristo Das Pal spoke, such men, I say, will come to the front and take their place, and it is idle to ignore, as it is blind to depreciate, such power exercised by such men. Among such men Kristo Das Pal was, as you all know, a veritable giant. Often after being fascinated by his marvellous fluency in a tongue which might be called foreign to him, were it not a tongue over which he possessed such a perfect command, I have often found it my duty afterwards, as it was a pleasure, to read over the speech which he had delivered, and to admire and study the wonderful skill of concealing the art by which he would lead up his hearers step by step to the point which he was prepared to make. However, gentlemen, I have reserved to the last what I consider to be the highest praise due to him as an actor, a writer, and an orator. I mean that he did what all writers or orators unfortunately have not always done, that is, fully recognise that these gifts are two-edged swords which can be used for the advancement of that which is good, as also for the promotion of all which is evil. He felt that the person who possessed these gifts was bound to use them with discrimination, with judgment, and to take care that he did not make his powers the means of causing the wrong cause to prevail. It is only in such a way as this that a man can earn, as Kristo Das Pal has earned in the judgment and concurrent voice of us all, the name of a true "Hindu Patriot"—(applause).

The resolution was carried with acclamation.

The Hon. Sir Stuart Bayley moved the second resolution. In doing so, he said: Gentlemen, after what has already been said by the distinguished gentlemen who have preceded me, and looking to the number of those who have still to address you, I shall, I am sure, be right in limiting my remarks to the smallest possible compass—yet there are a few words which I wish to say in connection with the resolution which I have now the honour to move, namely, "that subscriptions be raised for the purpose of erecting a suitable monument to perpetuate the memory of the deceased." The mere fact that such a large and influential assemblage is met here to-day shows that we are all united in the sentiment to which this resolution gives expression—(applause). It may be said, and doubtless it is the case, that even without any monument his memory will live in the hearts of his countrymen among whose faults want of appreciation or want of gratitude to benefactors has never been reckoned.—(hear, hear). But we wish to give substantial and permanent shape to the expression of this feeling while our recent loss is yet keen upon us, and we wish to connect that expression of feeling with gifts which shall be useful to the community, and at the same time give an opportunity of exercising to some extent that spirit of sacrifice with which human nature always loves to associate its deepest emotions, whether of love, joy, sorrow, gratitude or helplessness—(applause). I knew Kristo Das Pal for many years, and have never failed to admire the remarkable self-control with which he persistently fought, whether on the winning side, or, what is more difficult, a losing battle. The career of a public journalist and a politician, especially of one whose position in that of leader of the opposition, is not one which in any country conduces to suavity of manner, or rose-water methods, of dealing with opponents. Least of all is that to be expected when a man is struggling to procure from foreign rulers wider and yet wider openings for the enlightenment, progress, and representation of his countrymen. This was the task to which Kristo Das devoted himself, and in the performance of this task he succeeded in giving (or rather restoring)—for I am old enough to recollect the admirable writings of Babu Hurish Chunder Mookerjee—to the Hindu Patriot the unquestionable leadership of the Anglo-Indian Press—(applause). And he not only obtained amidst universal applause, a seat, first in the Bengal Council and afterwards in the Legislative Council of the Viceroy, but in both Councils maintained his position as a most active and formidable debater, whose criticisms were searching and never wanting in force of expression. In both capacities he dealt hard knocks, for some of which I came in for my share. And yet few public characters would look back upon a career of a quarter of a century, and find so little to regret in the way of reckless assertion, vulgar abuse, or denunciations prompted by improper or personal motives. In short, though he was the leader of the opposition, he was the leader of "Her Majesty's opposition," and was as loyal, temperate, and just in his aims and objects as he was courageous and unflinching in his method and his criticisms. In every sense his paper represented his character; he was in truth a Hindu patriot—(loud applause).

The resolution was seconded by Prince Ferozh Shah, and supported by Dr. Mohendrolall.

The third resolution, moved by the Hon. R. Miller, seconded by the Hon. Rao Saheb and N. Mandlik, and supported by Drs. Smith and Saunders, was as follows:—"That the funds raised by the proposed subscriptions be handed over to Government to defray the cost of building a public charitable eye-infirmary in Calcutta, to be named after the deceased, and to defray the cost of a marble bust to be placed in that building".

The fourth resolution, moved by the Hon. Kumar Baikunt Nath Dey, and seconded by Rajah Puma Chunder Sing, was as follows:—"That a Committee be appointed to carry out the objects of the foregoing resolutions."

On the motion of the Maharaja Jotendra Mohun Tagore, a vote of thanks was accorded to his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor for having presided.

An up-country paper hears that the Government of India have taken up the question of volunteering in earnest, and that we shall, doubtless, have in due time a complete plan of reorganisation put forward which will materially improve the position of the auxiliary forces. It is said that suggestions in abundance are forthcoming, and these will, of course, be carefully considered by the military authorities, who are really most concerned in the matter, after, of course, the volunteers themselves.

LORD RIPON'S ADMINISTRATION OF THE INDIAN FINANCES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE TIMES."

SIR,—In his speech at Leeds last week Lord Ripon took credit for various financial reforms in India. He said that with the aid of Sir Evelyn Baring he had "soon brought the financial condition of the country into such a state that they were able in the year 1882 to make the largest reduction in taxation that was ever made at one time in that country." He referred to the abolition of the customs import duties and the reduction of the salt tax. Lord Ripon appealed for confirmation of his account of the matter to a statement of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, who had said to him on his leaving India, "When you assumed charge of the administration the finances of the country were unsatisfactory and disorganized. You leave them in a sound, healthy condition."

In justice to the predecessors in office of Lord Ripon and Sir Evelyn Baring, I ask attention to the following facts and figures, which show the financial results of the past few years, after deducting charges due to war and famine. Whatever view may be held of the righteousness of the Afghan and Egyptian wars, beyond the fact that they had to be paid for, they have no connection with financial administration which is the question at issue. No tax or loan was created to meet war charges.

1877-78 Accounts	...	Surplus 1,802,898	} Lord Lytton.
1878-79 Accounts	...	Surplus 2,347,666
1879-80 Accounts	...	Surplus 5,021,515
1880-81 Accounts	...	Surplus 6,354,611	} Lord Ripon.
1881-82 Accounts	...	Surplus 3,292,568
1882-83 Accounts	...	Surplus 3,183,252
1883-84 Revised Estimate	...	Surplus 1,894,813
1884-85 Budget Estimate	...	Surplus 2,069,300

Lord Lytton assumed charge of the Government in April, 1876, Lord Ripon in June, 1880, but the financial arrangements for 1876-77 were made by Lord Northbrook, those for 1880-81 by Lord Lytton. In this last year the Afghan war and the Frontier railways, called into existence by that war, swallowed up the whole surplus on the ordinary account, and left a deficit of over four millions. In March, 1881, Major (now Sir Evelyn) Baring, in his first financial statement, said:—

"The Government of India is of opinion that at the present moment, when the embarrassment caused by the partial occupation of a foreign country hangs as a dead weight on the whole financial situation, it would be inopportune to attempt any reforms in the fiscal system. . . . The consideration of any changes must, therefore, be postponed until military expenditure is reduced to its normal limits."

Nevertheless, without any reform whatever and by merely maintaining the measures effected by Lord Lytton's Government, that of Lord Ripon found itself in March, 1882, in a position, owing to the cessation of war, to reap the full benefit of those measures. The preliminary Budget estimate for 1882-83 showed a surplus of over three millions, after providing an expenditure of one-and-a-half million on famine relief and insurance. Lord Ripon's Government wisely determined to carry out the remissions of taxation to effect which Lord Lytton had made such strenuous exertions, and which were the direct objects and results of his measures. The history of the Indian customs duties since 1875, when Lord Northbrook lowered the general rate of import duty from $7\frac{1}{2}$ to 5 per cent., but refused to make any special concession to the cotton duties, the resolutions of the House of Commons under Lord Beaconsfield's Ministry, the partial remissions of the cotton duties by Lord Lytton, supported by Sir John Strachey, his finance minister, but opposed by the rest of his Council, amply prove that the free trade which India now enjoys, and for which Lord Ripon takes credit, was the inevitable result of the steps taken by Lord Lytton. In February, 1880, Sir John Strachey declared in the Legislative Council his opinion that the cotton duties were virtually dead, and that the rest must soon follow. The equalization of the salt duties and the abolition of the Inland Customs line, effected by Lord Lytton, rendered possible the further reduction of duty for which the surplus put into Lord Ripon's hands on the cessation of the Afghan war provided the means.

While Lord Ripon's Government deserves full credit for the part it took in carrying out these measures, when the finances admitted of the sacrifice, it cannot be claimed for that Government that it initiated these measures, or that by any improvements in the financial administration it provided the funds to meet them. Still less ground is there for the slur thrown on Lord Lytton's Government by the assertion of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce that when Lord Ripon assumed charge of the administration the finances of the country were unsatisfactory and disordered, and that he had brought them into a sound and healthy condition.—Your obedient servant,

GEORGE H. N. BATTEN.

8, Ralston street, S.W., Feb. 2.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

SIR,—To anyone who is acquainted with the most important factors which cause fluctuations in Indian finance it is highly amusing to read Mr. G. Batten's reply to Lord Ripon's statement on this matter. Leaving aside the question of expenditure caused by war and famine, and amounting to about £49,000,000 from the year 1874 to 1882, I would wish to point out that neither Lord Lytton's nor Lord Ripon's Government has any right to take much credit to itself for the surpluses secured since 1880. They have been due primarily to causes beyond their control, and in a secondary degree to commercial speculation. The chief cause of financial improvement in 1881-2-3 was the increased receipts from the Indian railways owing to the sudden expansion of the Indian wheat trade in consequence of bad harvests in England and America. This year there has been a great falling off, so that by the end of next March there will probably be a deficit on the railway revenue of about £1,000,000. Will this be put down to Lord Dufferin's discredit?

The second cause which has helped to swell the revenues is the gradual depletion of the opium reserve. During the years 1875-7 of Lord Lytton's Government there were splendid poppy harvests, but in 1878-80 there were abnormally large sales to meet the war expenditure; so that since that date the reserve has been gradually disappearing. Sir J. Strachey, in his work on Indian finance (page 271), writes:—"The minimum reserve on December 31 should be 30,000 chests, besides the whole of the crop last gathered, and a still larger reserve might be desirable. The reserve on December 31, 1880, was only 25,183 chests." In the financial statement of March, 1883, Sir Evelyn Baring pointed out that "during the four years 1878-82 the annual sales of Bengal opium had been in excess of the annual production, and that since 1878 the reserve had been steadily diminishing." The estimated reserve for December, 1883, was 13,859 chests, but the actual reserve was only 11,632 chests; and, according to the financial statement of March, 1884 (paragraph 60), the reserve for December 31, 1884, was estimated at 2,296 chests. It is hoped that, owing to a good crop during the past year, this reserve will be further strengthened by the addition of about 2,000 chests, but even with this addition it will fall very far short of the requisite reserve of 30,000 chests. In fact, there is the greatest risk of a financial collapse in the opium revenue in a not very distant future. The gross revenue for opium for the years 1878 to 1885 is as follows:—1878-9, £9,399,401; 1879-80, £10,319,162; 1880-1, £10,498,000; 1881-2, £9,862,444; 1882-3, £9,499,594; 1883-4, £9,483,200; 1884-5, (estimate), £8,594,200. The average for the ten preceding years is rather over £8,400,000, so that it is clear that the Indian Government has been living on its capital for the last seven years. If a bad year comes, will the deficit be put down to Lord Dufferin's discredit?

At a private meeting of natives held in Bombay on the 18th ult. it was resolved to organise a weekly telegraph service to England, in order to keep the English public informed of important political facts and occurrences.

H.E. SIR JAMES FERGUSSON will embark for England on the 27th March instead of the 3rd April, as previously intended, handing over the Government to the Senior Member of Council, by permission of the Secretary of State.

THE annual Convocation of the Bombay University was held on the 20th ult. The Hon. J. B. Peile, in the absence of Sir James Fergusson, the Chancellor, through indisposition, delivered the annual address.

MR. JOHN MARSHALL having resigned the chairmanship of the Bombay Cotton Trades Association, the deputy-chairman, Mr. Cassels, was on Tuesday elected chairman and Mr. Glade deputy chairman.

PUNDIR SHYAMAJEE KRISHNAVARMA, B.A., late Oriental lecturer at Balliol College, Oxford, was admitted as an advocate of the Bombay High Court on Friday, the 9th ult.

THE directors of the Sassoon Mechanics' Institute have, we learn, received a favourable reply from Government in their application for the unexpended portions of the grant originally made towards the institute. The application was made in view of the proposal to erect a lecture-hall at the back of the institute in accordance with the original plan. This project is, therefore, in a fair way of realisation, although liberal support from the public will be required to carry the work through.

WE learn from Indore that Nayaren Rao Holkar, son of Sir Kasi Rao Dada Saheb, K.C.S.I., and a nephew of the Maharajah Holkar, died early on the 12th ult. from liver complaint. The deceased was a promising young man of twenty-three years of age, and, being an only son, his death is a severe blow to his father. As the unfortunate event occurred on the day the grand entertainment was given to Lord Randolph Churchill by H.H. the Maharajah, his Highness was unable to be present to welcome the guest of the evening.—Times of India.

THE Indian Daily News, advertizing to the proposal to establish a native cholera hospital in the compound of the European General Hospital, says:—"There are plenty of open sites near Bombay—Mody Bay, not many hundred yards away, would be a good place—that might be utilised, and it does appear a gratuitous provocation of criticism to ignore them and pitch upon spots where the presence of these institutions will create great uneasiness, and conceivably may do much active harm."

THE Municipal Corporation on the 15th ult., in replying to a communication from Government, passed a resolution in which they stated that they had not the slightest intention of being discourteous when in their resolution passed in October last they requested Government to reconsider the question of appointing honorary assistant surgeons to the Goculdas Tejpal Hospital. They also requested the chairman to communicate to Government the reasons why they made such a request. A committee was afterwards appointed to examine the designs forwarded for the New Municipal Offices and Hall, and to report to the Corporation within a fortnight the result of their labours. Subsequently the budget estimates for 1885-86 were further considered, the total income being passed at Rs. 4,381,750.

BURMA.

MR. TWOMEY, C.S., has arrived at Henzada to take over charge of the Treasury.

DR. C. S. RUNDLE, Civil Surgeon of Henzada, having returned from leave, took over medical charge of that station from Dr. Avinas Ghose on the 7th ult.

THE silver cup presented by Mr. B. F. Duncan to the Akyab Volunteers was shot for on the 29th of December, and won by Mr. J. F. J. Donovan.

MR. BAGLEY, Executive Engineer, P.W.D. Railway Branch, arrived at Rangoon on the 15th ult. by the s.s. Rajpootana from Calcutta. He will relieve Mr. Elston at Engsein, and the latter goes home on a year's furlough.

THE Rangoon Gazette says:—"We have just learned that the Judicial Commissioner has been appointed Chief Commissioner of Assam, and will leave Rangoon in about a month. Mr. Ward has made himself very popular here, and while sorry to lose him we congratulate him on his promotion."

WE (Rangoon Gazette) learn on good authority that Colonel Olcott, the founder of the Theosophical Society, will leave Madras for Rangoon by the steamer Asia. After spending a few days here he will go up to Thayetmyo, where, we understand, he will be the guest of Mr. Pilcher. His visit will be an interesting event for the Buddhist members of the community.

THE Pioneer understands that notice has been given to the Flotilla Company in Rangoon that the mail subsidy of Rs. 15,000 per annum which they have enjoyed for some time will cease and determine at the expiration of twelve months. The Postal Department evidently consider that this payment is too heavy for the amount of work to be performed. "And when," says the Allahabad paper, "it is considered that beyond our frontier the correspondence principally consists of commercial correspondence in connection with the trade carried on by the Flotilla boats themselves, and that in any case the Flotilla management would have to make some arrangement for the carriage of consignees' letters, whether they get a mail subsidy or not, the public advantages derived from the payment are not very apparent. It is not as if the Flotilla was a struggling concern, to which the payment was a matter of vital importance. On the contrary, it is one of the most profitable concerns in the East, and has paid handsome dividends during the past fifteen years, besides adding largely to its fleet out of its earnings. There seems no public necessity, then, for the subsidy, although it appears that possibly the Indian Postal Act might have to be amended to enable correspondence without a subsidy to be carried by inland vessels performing a large portion of their journey in foreign territory.

CEYLON.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—Mr. Deed will draw half the salary of the Superintending Officer, Mihintale, in addition to his full salary as Superintending Officer of Anuradhapura for the period during which he had charge of both districts.

SOME surprise and not a little inconvenience have been caused by the news that the holders of the acting appointments of Colonial Secretary, Government Agent, Kandy, Registrar of Lands, Colombo, and Fiscal at Kandy would at the end of the month revert to their substantive offices, the three latter having but a short time ago been moved at considerable cost to themselves.

THE Chamber of Commerce have resolved at a general meeting to urge on Government the early construction of a northern arm on a plan modified by Sir John Coode, and for the cost of which they showed that ample means could be raised without pressing severely on any interest; for this purpose the Governor has been requested to receive a deputation from that body. The same body have resolved that the new tonnage scale shall only apply to steamers; for sailing vessels the old scale will remain in force.

THE new light on the Colombo clock-tower is now nightly flashing its rays over sea and land; and so brilliant was the light cast on the harbour that the pilots complained that they were dazzled, and could not see to take vessels in. Consequently, a black patch of paint has been put on the lantern on the harbour side to deaden the light. The approach to Colombo by daylight is a striking one; and now, as seen by night, with the flashing and revolving light on the clock-tower, the red light at the end of the breakwater, the row of lamps on Galle Face, and other lights twinkling like stars here and there, the view is not less striking.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR left Kandy early on Saturday, the 10th ult., accompanied by Mr. Murray, P.S., took coach at Matale at seven A.M., and arrived at Anuradhapura at eight P.M. Sunday was spent in visiting ruins and the newly-established botanic gardens and also lands recently opened up for cultivation; on Monday more ruins and lands were visited, and the Governor then rode along the bank of the Yodacla to Palawa, where he breakfasted, afterwards proceeding to Epawala, where the night was spent. On Tuesday Sir Arthur rode to Kekirawa, where he took coach to Matale, returning to Kandy on Wednesday morning. The weather was delightful, and the Governor much enjoyed the tour, which was quite an informal one. After the closing of the Legislative Council, his Excellency is to visit Galle and Matara.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1885.

HURRY-SCURRY IN BENGAL.

WE earnestly hope that Lord Dufferin will not be induced by the insidious representations of the small clique of Radical "land reformers" in the Government of India—who are doing their best to persuade both the Viceroy in India and the British public at home that the Bengal Tenancy Bill has now been so utterly emasculated as to be "only a very little one"—to allow a measure to be "rushed" into law, which is rightly described by the Lieutenant-Governor as the most important that has been introduced to India since the Permanent Settlement of Lord Cornwallis. The telegrams of Reuter's Agency, which may, perhaps, be taken to represent the views of the Government of India, boldly declare that the Bill, as revised in Select Committee, is free from the features so strongly objected to by the Zemindars; but we are authorised to state that this is absolutely contradicted by the Zemindars themselves. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times, with that perfect fairness which always distinguishes his telegrams, states both sides of the question; but his statement of the objections taken to the present form of the Bill by the agricultural community, though conceived in a spirit of fairness, gives no adequate idea of the resentment which is universally felt among the educated classes of Bengal at the attempt which is being made to force upon their landed interest legislation which is entirely foreign to the customs and habits of the country, and which can only result in widespread litigation and general misery. The Times telegram speaks of "the restrictions on enhancement of rent by private contract"; but the private telegrams that have been received in London declare that, in the opinion of the British Indian Association, and of the Indian Constitutional Association, and generally of the whole of the leaders of the vast agricultural population of Bengal, that freedom of contract, not only in questions of rent, but in every other question affecting the land, is very seriously restricted, and, indeed, well-nigh barred altogether. Only last week Mr. Goschen exposed the fallacy of "fair rent," when the term is absurdly used of a rent fixed by an officer of Government; but here, in this prodigy of Radical legislation, we find a rent styled "fair" because it is fixed at the sweet will of a despotic Government, and because (whatever may be the merits or "fairness" of the case) it cannot possibly be enhanced by more than two annas in the rupee! Distraint is virtually abolished, and realisation of rent made dependent on costly and tedious litigation. The so-called "rights" of the tenant-at-will—which he cannot have acquired equitably, for otherwise why is he a "tenant-at-will?"—are enormously enlarged. Sub-letting is encouraged by every possible device. Litigation is fostered by the regulations concerning commutation of produce-rents, and in every other way. And altogether, the Bill makes Bengal a paradise for lawyers, but a hell for the unfortunate agriculturists.

The Times telegram thinks it "likely" that the Bill, in the form which it has now assumed, "will meet, if not with general acceptance, at least with little real opposition." Well, the opposition to the Bill may truly be called "little" in one sense—because the voice of the country is hardly heard at all in the Viceregal Council, because the number of the real representatives of the people in that Council is infinitesimal—and further, because the power of the Viceroy and the Executive Government is practically infinite. But whatever man can do in the way of opposition to an iniquitous Act of a despotic Government has been done—and will, we are informed, still be done—by the representatives of the agricultural interest of Bengal to protest against this measure. While dubious concessions have been made in petty details, the confiscatory and litigious features of the Bill remain unchanged. Nor can it be pretended, after the recent speeches of Mr. Shaw-Lefevre and Mr. Goschen, and other leading Liberal statesmen, and after the writings of the Duke of Argyll, that the tendency of enlightened Liberalism in this country is in the direction of subjecting the land either to confiscation or to ruinous litigation. Mr. Goschen at Edinburgh last week pointed out that the aim of true Liberalism ought to be, to encourage the utmost FREEDOM—freedom of contract, freedom of individual action, freedom from vexatious legislative interference—in dealing with land as with other commodities. The objections of the Bengal Zemindars to Mr. Ilbert's Tenancy Bill are founded on precisely these liberal principles. Will a Liberal Government insist on proving to Bengal, to India, and to the world, that liberality, the cause of freedom, is now permanently divorced from Liberalism?

Since the above was written, an important telegram, quoted in to-day's Times, states that the Talukdars of Oudh have joined the Bengal Zemindars in their opposition to the Bill. This serious fact opens out contingencies so vast, that we must postpone their discussion till next week.

THE FRENCH TREATY WITH UPPER BURMA.

It is to be feared that it is only too likely that the engrossing nature of our national preoccupations in other parts of the world—where our blunders seem to be all coming home to roost at once—may blind the eyes of the British public to the very serious events that are happening in the Transgangetic regions of Burma and Siam. Only last week the Pall Mall Gazette contained a valuable article by Mr. Lepper on the commercial possibilities of this region, which the Pall Mall Gazette rightly calls the "finest unopened market in the world." But we have other interests there, even more important than those of commerce; and it is impossible for any one who reads the daily telegrams in the Times not to feel that the supineness of the Government is endangering not only our trade, present and future, in Further India, but our very existence there as a paramount power. The Temps of Thursday last stated as a positive fact that a treaty had been signed at Paris between King Theebaw and the French Republic, giving commercial facilities in Burma to the French, providing for the settlement of French subjects in that country, and, of course, for the residence of some consular or diplomatic representative of France in Mandalay. We have heard a great deal of the "pretty way," unhappily not always very effective, in which Lord Granville informs our allies that their interference in certain countries within our own sphere of influence will be regarded by England as "an unfriendly act." But surely, if ever such interference is an unfriendly act, it must be so in the present case. Theebaw is a ferocious barbarian, whose insolence has fed on Lord Ripon's humility, until he makes an open boast of his hostility to the British power, and of his willingness to put that power to the test. His territory can only be reached by traversing a British province, and has only retained its nominal independence through British forbearance and long-suffering. His horrible massacres and oppressions have disgraced the British Government, by whom they are permitted; and the effects on our own dominions of the misrule and anarchy rampant in Upper Burma have been such that only a few months ago the Rangoon Chamber of Commerce represented to Mr. Bernard that the trade there had fallen off 80 per cent. within two years, being now hardly one-fifth of what it was in Lord Lytton's time. And this is the country with which France is now pleased to make a commercial treaty, and to enter into diplomatic communication!

And on the very same day on which the report of this treaty finds its way into the English Press through a French paper, we are informed also of an interesting interview that has just taken place between the King of Siam and the French Governor-General of Cochin China—in which the necessity of an arrangement between France and Siam "for the suppression of piracy" is discussed. The King of Siam, we are told, dwelt on the community of interest between Cochin China, Cambodia, and Siam; from which, it may be presumed, we are expected to infer that Siam is to become a country "within the sphere of French influence." Will this little episode be regarded by Lord Granville as "an unfriendly act"? Doubtless our complaisant Foreign Office "has no idea"—they never have nowadays—of any unpleasant intentions on the part of our worthy allies. And we shall probably wake up one day to find French influence predominant throughout Further Asia, and our trade once more driven back by French protectionist tariffs.

THE BENGAL REGISTRATION BILL.

WE drew attention last week to the speech of Mr. Reynolds in the Bengal Legislative Council when asking leave to introduce a Bill for the registration of permanent tenures. At the next meeting of the Council he moved the first reading of the Bill, in a short speech, full of technical details, which it is unnecessary to notice; but, at the same time, his further explanation of certain sections of the proposed enactment shows most clearly that we were not mistaken in asserting that the Bill is pregnant with mischief and danger. It is absurd to say that "it redeems to the utmost the promise which Government had made to the zemindars, that facilities shall be given them for the realisation of their acknowledged rents." If this is "the utmost" that Government desires, or intends, to do to assist the zemindars, in fulfilment of the promises held out by Sir George Campbell, Sir Richard Temple, and Sir Ashley Eden, so that they may be able to collect their rents and the Government cesses with punctuality, we can only say that it is a delusion and a snare. The actual text of the Bill is not before us, but if the report of Mr. Reynolds's speech is correct, it appears that it is open to the tenure-holder as well as the zemindar to apply for registration. It is easy to understand that it may be an advantage to a zemindar to have the power of bringing a registered tenure to sale for default of payment of rent, without having recourse to a civil suit to establish his claim; but it is not easy to conceive why a tenure-holder should go into Court to make himself liable to this new summary sale process, if he has not some ulterior object in view. This ulterior object will clearly be to impugn his lessor's title in some way. Mr. Reynolds says that on application for registration being made to the subordinate judge the Bill makes provision for due notice to be given to all persons concerned to file any objection which they may wish to put forward; it provides for a summary decision of such objections; but it also provides for the framing of issues for a regular decision on such points as are in dispute, which cannot be settled in any other way. With due deference to Mr. Reynolds this sort of procedure is not registration, but an invitation to litigation. Registration, pure and simple, is nothing new under the laws of India, and in the course of the last century millions of deeds, concerning the transfer of land, and every kind of property, have been registered, with the consent of the parties, and without any challenge or invitation to all persons, who may fancy themselves concerned, to dispute the validity of the deed in the Registration Court. But now a totally different course is proposed; and although Putni tenures will, apparently, still be exempt from the new Registration, every other sort of permanent tenure is to be put up "for daws to peck at," especially if it suits the tenure-holder to take this convenient opportunity of reopening a dispute with the landlords. But as if there were not a sufficiently wide door thus opened for disputes, when Registration is first sought for, Mr. Reynolds is so good as to provide for a renewal of these disputes whenever a mutation of names is needed in the Register, in consequence of the transfer or succession, by inheritance or otherwise, of the registered tenure to new owners. There is an old legal maxim that it is the interest of the republic that there should be an end to a legal dispute—but under Mr. Reynolds's Bill, a registered tenure is to be exposed to dangers and difficulties which have not hitherto been attached to any other form of landed property. And it is thus that Government redeems its promise to the utmost to assist the zemindars in the collection of their rents and cesses!

Mr. Reynolds found himself obliged to say something more about the compulsory clauses of the Bill, and he tells us that the Government is disposed to attach much importance to this part of the measure, as a necessary complement to the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Bill. It is thus that the true form of the cat which was hidden in the bag is now revealed. If the zemindars and tenure-holders do not spontaneously avail themselves of the imaginary boon of Registration now proffered to them, the Government takes power to itself to declare that they shall be made to register. But what object has Government in view in this compulsory registration? Not the facilitation of the collection of rent; but in order to complete its own record of landed rights, similar to the record of rights which has been framed in the North-West Provinces, in the course of the famous settlements, which have been carried on for so many years, with so much harassment to the people, and with so many grave errors and blunders on the part of the settlement officers and the Revenue authorities. Let it be admitted, for the sake of argument, that a complete record of rights in the N.W. Provinces has been a success,—good for landlords, middlemen and tenants, and good for Government. But there is a very wide difference between the Revenue System and the whole scheme of landed tenure in the N.W. Provinces, and that which exists in Bengal. In the N.W. Provinces a full knowledge of recorded rights may enable the Government to skin the lamb scientifically at each renewal of a settlement, with the least amount of suffering to the victim, and with the greatest pecuniary benefit to Government. But in Bengal the Permanent Settlement has produced a different state of things. Any increase in the rental of land belongs, under the law, to the zemindar; whilst the Government demand for Revenue cannot be increased. It must be something more than idle curiosity which prompts the Government to initiate a record of the rights of landholders of all denominations. Possibly Mr. Dacosta, who has studied Indian Land Questions so deeply, is not mistaken in his belief that there are some of the Rulers of Bengal who are anxious “to go below the Permanent Settlement,” to use a mild expression, in order to enhance the Government demand for Revenue in that Province?

We must venture to quote some of Mr. Reynolds's remarks on the anticipated record of rights in Bengal. “Possibly,” he says, “some of the present generation may survive to see the day when we shall have in every village and estate of Bengal a record of the rights and interests of every class of the agricultural population, from the zemindar down to the meanest tenant. But that time, though it may some day come, is certainly still very distant. The work will be one of great labour and expense, and the agency for establishing and maintaining the record has still to be created.” We have the highest respect for Mr. Reynolds's motives; but we cannot but regret that he should speak in this light and airy manner of a subject fraught with the gravest importance to the sixty million inhabitants of Bengal. It reminds us forcibly of Mr. Melville Macnaghten's comments on the Bengal Tenancy Bill, when he told us that it is only in India that a civilian officer, who has no personal or practical or permanent interest in land, is empowered to make the laws which determine the rights of the owners and occupiers of the land.

A NEW INDIAN COLLEGE.—Professor Gunion, M.A., of Lincoln College, Oxford, and Professor of Sanscrit at University College, London, has just been appointed Principal of the Bhavnagar Samaldas College, recently founded by the Maharajah of that State in memory of his late Dewan Samaldas Parmanandas. This is the first college in a native State affiliated with the Bombay University.

The question of providing in India qualified female medical practitioners to attend upon native women in sickness has recently been dealt with in a resolution of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal à propos of the bequest of the late Maharani of Surnomoye of a lakh and a-half of rupees towards that object. The importance of the question arises mainly from the habits and traditions of the women of the upper classes, which prevent them from availing themselves of the services of men as medical advisers. The chief impediments to progress hitherto felt in the matter have been want of funds and the difficulty of introducing a serious innovation into the conservative domain of medical practice. The movement has already been encouraged by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, though the only practical assistance he has been able to give has been in the endowment of female scholarships at the Calcutta University. The Maharani's munificent bequest, however, will permit of the establishment of a much-needed hostel for female medical students at Calcutta.—Athenæum.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

INDIAN TEA.—Messrs. G. White and Co. report as follows on the Tea Market, from Jan. 29 to Feb. 5:—There has again been a good inquiry for fine and finest descriptions, which have ruled very firm, whilst good to good medium kinds have been well competed for at rather better rates, but common and undesirable are still depressed. The sales have comprised some very desirable teas possessing full flavour and strength, and to this may be chiefly attributed the eagerness of buyers to secure them even at apparently high prices. There have been several "last of the season" invoices printed which point to an earlier close of the season than was at one time anticipated. The deliveries of Indian and Ceylon growths for January were 6,389,000lbs. against 5,605,000lbs. for the same month last year, so that the statistical position is apparently very favourable, as the deliveries for the past seven months have been at the rate of 5,598,000lbs. per month, or rather over sixty-seven millions per annum. Ceylon.—The quantity placed on the market is still limited, but there is good competition for any useful lots.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1885.

Notes of the Week.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, January 30th; Madras and Allahabad, January 28th; Calcutta, January 27th; Ceylon, January 24th; Burma, January 23rd.

THE news from Burma this week is so disquieting that for the moment it overshadows the even more alarming complications that are developing on the side of Herat and Russia. That a treaty of some kind or other, or at least a diplomatic arrangement, has been arrived at between France and Burma, seems almost certain. That a treaty of the intolerably aggressive nature indicated in the Calcutta telegrams derived from Rangoon appears, however, incredible. That France should actually annex the Shan States on our frontier, and talk about sending troops to guard the mines and guaranteeing King Theebaw against British aggression, would be not only a monstrous insult to this country, but an injury to our commercial interests and our political prestige so grave that it would force even a Gladstone Ministry to take action. We have drunk deep of national humiliation of late; and mere insults seem only to have the effect of making the British Cabinet seek lower depths wherein to grovel. But the Spanish adage teaches that a spur can be found to pierce the hide of even the most obstinate mule; and the "Too-late" expedition to the Soudan shows that the fear of an electioneering cry is the spur that reaches the Cabinet. The ruin of our Burmese dominions, and the installation of France as the paramount power in Further India, would be facts too patent to the constituencies to be explained away, even by the arts of Midlothian.

WE publish to-day, in a Special Supplement, the report of the Preliminary Conference on the Bengal Tenancy Bill, held last Friday at Limmer's Hotel, between representatives of the Indian Constitutional Association and the London Committee formed to oppose the Bill. Its main object was to arrange for a Conference on a wider basis, under the auspices of the Liberty and Property Defence League, which will take place at Willis's Rooms, King-street, St. James's, on Wednesday, February 25th, with the Right Hon. the Earl of Wemyss and March in the chair. All those "who object to the introduction into India of land-laws framed on the lines of recent Irish land-legislation" are cordially invited to attend this most important meeting; and tickets of admission can be obtained on application to Roper Lethbridge, Esq., Indian Constitutional Association, 3, Westminster Chambers, Victoria-street, S.W. For the honour of the British name, pledged to the agricultural community of Bengal in Lord Cornwallis's Permanent Settlement, we earnestly hope that all those who are interested in the well-being of India will make a special effort to attend this meeting—if only to give a fair hearing to the claims of justice and equity.

THE words of the speakers at last Friday's meeting are strikingly confirmed by the summary, given in the Times telegram of yesterday, of the extraordinary document that purports to be the report of the Select Committee of the Legislative Council on the Tenancy Bill. As this report is only agreed to by three out of the eleven members of the Committee—and of these three two are personally unacquainted with Bengal!—its only claim to be considered the report of the Committee seems to lie in the fact that Mr. Ilbert is one of the fateful three. When the dispatch attacking the Church of England in India was sent home as the opinion of "the Government of India," the Secretary of State politely pointed out that it was only agreed to by Lord Ripon and Mr. Ilbert, and that even these two great men could not swallow up the whole Government. But, on the present occasion, Mr. Ilbert goes even further, and the Legal Member speaks for the whole Committee, much as the sole survivor in the "Bab Ballads," who had eaten all his comrades, claimed to be the embodiment of the crew of the Nancy Bell. And, in truth, the colleagues of the Legal Member do verily eat each other up, for if the objections of the eight dissentients are added together, there is less than nothing left of the Bill. Why, then, in the name of common sense, attempt to proceed with a Bill that disgusts everyone except its own fond parent? The only possible answer is, To gratify Lord Ripon's amour propre.

BUT surely this amiable weakness becomes criminal, when the fortunes of millions and the welfare of a vast country are in question? In a comparatively small matter, such as the question whether the Northbrook Club should or should not give Lord Ripon a dinner, we were inclined to strain a point; and—not without some little qualms of conscience—we advised a concession to vanity, as making for peace, and affecting no important question. But it is a very different matter, when legislative action involving the most tremendous issues is concerned. Here, we look for strength and the most resolute conscientiousness in Lord Dufferin and his councillors—conscientiousness that looks neither to the right hand nor to the left, but follows the dictates of duty and honour, without respect of persons or regard for the paltry considerations of personal feelings.

It must, we imagine, be absolutely impossible for Lord Dufferin, whatever pressure may be put on him by Lord Ripon and his friends at home, to pass the Bill in defiance of such a chorus of disapproval as that indicated in the Times telegram. And yet we learn that the measure is to be taken up on the 27th instant, and proceeded with de die in diem until passed! It seems utterly incredible that Lord Dufferin, of all statesmen in the world, should consent to commit such an outrage on decency, let alone justice or honour, at the bidding of a discredited faction.

PERHAPS the most cynical of all the dissents is that of Mr. Gibbon. It has been put forward that the introduction of "Free sale" of occupancy-tenures into Behar would open up a golden age for indigo-planters, as they would be able to buy up the occupancy-rights all around them, and then take the ryots by their throats and force them to sow as much indigo as may be desirable. Of course, all the more far-sighted indigo-planters have seen clearly enough that rights acquired in this way could only be enforced at the cost of reviving all the buried troubles of the old "indigo rows;" and as a body they have honourably and resolutely opposed the Bill. Nevertheless, Mr. Gibbon naïvely remarks that he "objects to any restrictions on the transfer of occupancy-rights!" We have not learnt exactly what "restrictions" of the kind have lately been introduced; but one of the weightiest objections to the Bill, in the latest form in which it has reached this country, was to the encouragement of oppression and cruel rack-renting held out by the provisions for free sale.

SIR RIVERS THOMPSON and Mr. Reynolds, the representatives of the Bengal Government, object to the Bill because the nineteen amendments, suggested by that Government last September, have all been rejected. They say it "cannot be regarded as final"; and surely, this objection alone is sufficient to condemn any idea of rushing it into law—for even the most fanatical supporters of the Bill only advocate such a course on the plea that "something must be done" to lay, at once and for ever, the evil spirit conjured up by Lord Ripon.

Of course Indian public opinion is quite right in passionately urging the British Government to arrange for the fortification of Herat before it is "too late." But English public opinion as passionately urged Mr. Gladstone to save Gordon before it was "too late"; and the same entreaties have been vainly urged in a dozen other matters of the deepest Imperial interest. Nothing will be done that is not too late, until "the too-late Government" becomes "the late Government"; then, but not till then, will British interests have a chance.

THE Englishman has the following account of the Calcutta Freight Market, corrected to January 27:—

Since last mail we have had a remarkably quiet week in our freight market, and rates generally may be said to have a declining tendency. The advance lately obtained has been lost again, we have now gone back to about the same level where we were at the close of last year. Transactions during the week have been very restricted, and are likely to remain so during the next month. Our unfixed tonnage is increasing, and amounts to 38,000 tons to-day.

During the past week three public sales have been held, at which 3,080 chests were offered, and 2,746 chests sold, making the total quantity disposed of to date about 130,000 maunds, viz., 20,000 maunds Bengal, 59,100 maunds Tirhoot, 17,550 maunds Benares, and 33,350 maunds Oudes. There is not much change to report in prices; but the market is weaker and for some qualities rather lower than at the date of our last. There are now only a few hundred chests of European Indigo left unsold, and the season will probably close in about a fortnight.

THE following on the Calcutta Tea Market is taken from the fortnightly report of Messrs. Carritt and Co.:—

Only one auction has been held since the date of our last, 12,735 packages being offered on the 15th instant, of which 12,393 changed hands. There was rather more briskness noticeable in the biddings for desirable parcels, and rates for these descriptions ruled very firm. Poor liquoring invoices, on the other hand, were in rather less request, and occasionally sold in favour of buyers.

THE Times of India has the following obituary till the departure of the mail, January 30:—

The Rev. John Duncan Morrison, chaplain of the Church of Scotland, Madras; Mr. J. J. Cogswell, of Messrs. Haworth and Co., Calcutta; Mr. Cursetjee Nusserwanjee Cama, merchant, Bombay.

DANGER AT HERAT.—In no spirit of panic, the Daily Telegraph protests, but in order that patriotic Englishmen may realise the true situation of affairs, it declares that the gravest peril to the country at the present moment is not Egypt but Afghanistan. It insists on the ominous signs which exist that the long-threatened approach of Russia to our Indian frontier is being pushed forward rapidly. And it proceeds as follows:—"Few, we think, require to be told why Herat should be thought so important that the presence of Russian troops within striking distance of the place must thus be held the most serious incident of the time. No one familiar with the Central Asia problem would need any explanation on the subject. Herat is the heart of the border land lying between British India and Russia in Asia; and by its position, character, and influence, it is the most commanding spot whence India can be either menaced or defended. To have an enemy there is for India to live under a perpetual dread, for all the roads into the Peninsula may be said to lead to and from this famous stronghold."

RAJAH RAMPAL SINGH AT MADRAS.—The Indian Daily News says there was, at least, one sensible point in Rajah Rampal Singh's lecture at Madras, on "India under Lord Lytton and Lord Ripon, and its future." Alluding to the question of railway extension and the application of private enterprise to the work, the Rajah said that, instead of waiting till well-disposed Englishmen came forward to help them in the formation of companies, the people of India ought to help themselves. This is just what the Government is desirous of teaching them to do; but so far, all the efforts to popularise railway stock as a mode of investment have not met with much response amongst the natives. What is wanted is for some of the well-known native leaders to show the way. An ounce of example, we know, is worth a pound of precept. Rajah Rampal Singh's precept, as we have remarked, is excellent; but what about his example? How much Indian railway stock does he hold? Incidentally, we may notice that "Her Highness Rampal Singh" is described as an English lady who has accompanied the Rajah to India. So, if he failed to obtain a seat in Parliament, the Rajah succeeded in getting a wife in England.

Telegraphic Intelligence.

The following extra telegram has been received from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Feb. 13:—

"The Select Committee on the Bengal Rent Bill presented its report and the amended Bill to-day.

"The Bill, as recast, much resembles last year's amended measure.

"The final debate upon it will begin in about a fortnight."

"News received from Rangoon further confirms the rumour as to the alleged treaty between France and Burmah. It is stated that the treaty cedes to France the Shan States, east of the Salween, and also the Mogoung ruby mines, while 500 French soldiers are to be allowed to act as a guard to the miners. The Burmese Government is to be permitted to import arms and ammunition through Tonquin. A Burmese Ambassador is to reside permanently in Paris, and a French Resident at Mandalay. It is further alleged that the French promise the Burmese protection against British encroachments.

"Although most of these details require confirmation they are evidently believed at Rangoon, and are causing much excitement there. The Rangoon Chamber of Commerce has addressed a strong letter to the Chief Commissioner, urging an immediate British interference as the only means of saving the trade of British Burmah from total ruin, and expressing a hope that the British Government will make it quite clear to the world that British influence must be paramount as far as the hills separating Burmah from China and over all the territory between British Burmah and Siam. Public opinion in Rangoon runs strongly in favour of annexation, and seems to consider as the next best course the dethronement of Thebaw and the substitution of the Mengwoon Prince, now a refugee at Pondicherry.

"A report is prevalent in Burmah that Admiral Hewett will proceed on a mission to Mandalay with an imposing escort. This rumour, however, is quite groundless. Sir W. Hewett, in the Euryalus, is to leave Calcutta on Tuesday, but he goes to Bombay. The Dragon, the other man-of-war now here, will probably go to Rangoon, but this must not be taken as indicating any intention of the Indian Government to interfere. On the contrary, the Government would seem to think that matters have not yet reached the stage rendering intervention necessary, and having its hands full already it is reluctant to increase its responsibilities. The condition of Upper Burmah is, doubtless, exercising a very detrimental effect on the trade of Rangoon, but it may be questioned whether it is the sole cause of the present depression."

"The report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Tenancy Bill is, in some respects, perhaps the most remarkable document ever issued from the Indian Legislative Department. Of the eleven gentlemen composing the committee only three sign without a reservation. Only one of these three—namely, Sir Stuart Bayley, has any pretensions to a practical knowledge of the subject. The second, Mr. Ilbert, has a purely theoretical acquaintance with it; and the same remark applies, though in a less degree, to the third, Mr. Quinton, who is a civilian from the North-West Provinces. The remaining eight members dissent on various points; and most of them record separate minutes which show great differences of opinion.

"Sir Rivers Thompson considers the amended Bill unsatisfactory, as giving insufficient protection to all the ryots against the excessive enhancement of rent, and no real protection in other directions to non-occupancy rights. He thinks it impossible to accept it as final. Mr. Gibbon, the planters' member, believes that the amended Bill is an improvement on the original measure, but objects to any restrictions on the transfer of occupancy rights, and to certain other provisions.

"Syed Ameer Ali thinks the Bill an inadequate protection of the ryots. Dr. Hunter objects to some specified provisions; but is clearly of opinion that the Bill as a whole, makes substantial improvements in the existing law, and introduces changes which with certain exceptions, are expedient and just.

"Mr. Reynolds is unable to accept the Bill in the form which it now assumed as adequate or final. It does not effectually protect the ryots, and should only be accepted as an instalment of the legislation necessary to place the law of landlord and tenant on a secure and satisfactory basis.

"The Maharajah of Durbungah and Baboo Peary Mohun Mookerjee sign a joint dissent. They look upon the measure as altogether unnecessary and objectionable. Mr. Evans also dissents on certain points, but records no separate minute.

"As regards the Bill itself, its new form is much like that which it assumed last year, when a preliminary report was made on it by the committee. Nearly all the suggestions made by the Bengal Government in its dispatch of September 15 have been rejected; hence the objection of Sir Rivers Thompson and Mr.

Reynolds. The zemindars, on the other hand, while victorious on many points, still complain of the retention of restrictions on the enhancement of rents by private contract, the practical abolition of distraint, the enlargement of the methods of acquiring occupancy rights, and some other features which still remain. On the whole, having regard to the great difference of opinion which has been provoked, it would seem a wise course for the Government altogether to drop the Bill, but apparently this is not its intention. The debate is fixed to begin on the 27th, and will proceed daily until the measure is passed. A supplementary measure, the Village Accountants Bill, will be pressed on in the Provincial Council.

"The Duke and Duchess of Connaught have gone on a shooting excursion to Bhurtpore, where they and a large party are being entertained by Colonel Euan-Smith, the British Resident, on behalf of the Maharajah. The wild fowl-shooting there is said to be the best in India, and very large bags have been made."

"Lord Randolph Churchill left Calcutta for Allahabad on Friday last. During his stay here he was invited to a banquet by a large number of gentlemen of all shades of political opinion. He declined the invitation, remarking that he hated to make speeches which were mere empty verbiage, that he could not allude to English topics without saying things which might displease those among his hosts who were not Conservatives, and that he could not allude to Indian topics as his travels here were enabling him to measure the depths of his own ignorance concerning them."

"Possibly the Ameer will visit India to meet the Viceroy in the spring, but nothing definite has yet been settled. It is to be hoped that this meeting will take place, and that one of the results may be the conclusion of some arrangement regarding the fortification of Herat, if not its occupation by British troops. There is little difference of opinion here as to the necessity for securing Herat in some way against Russian aggression, and the recent awakening of anxiety on the subject at home has given rise to a hope that something may be done before it is too late."

The following telegram relating to the employment of Indian troops in the Soudan is from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Feb. 15 :—

"Recent events in the Soudan continue to occupy the largest share of public attention. The Anglo-Indian newspapers are unanimous in their expression of regret at the fall of Khartoum and the death of General Gordon, and are all but unanimous in urging the necessity for taking active measures to vindicate British supremacy. The tone of the native Press on the subject is, as a general rule, moderate and loyal. One native journal, it is true, which professes to represent the advanced school of educated Bengalees, stated that 'A British force of 7,000 men, led by such Generals as Lord Wolseley, Sir C. Wilson, and General Earle, has been utterly routed by a savage horde;' and, though the statement appeared in an ostensibly loyal article calling upon Englishmen to come forward and save their country's honour, it is clear that it was made in the same spirit of malicious and barely veiled sedition which too often disfigures the organ in question. The greater part of the native Press, however, shows no signs of following this example, and abounds in expressions of sympathy the genuineness of which there is no reason to doubt."

"A greater difference of opinion exists regarding the propriety of sending Indian troops to the Soudan; and, while the majority of the newspapers approve of the course taken, a considerable minority disapproved of it, generally on the ground that, in the present critical state of Central Asia and Burma, India cannot safely spare the men. On one point, however, there is absolute unanimity among the newspapers and the public, European and native—namely, that on no pretext should India be saddled with any part of the cost of this expedition."

"It is now definitively settled that the Indian contingent shall consist of one regiment of cavalry, four of infantry, and one company of Sappers and Miners. The 9th Bengal Cavalry (late Hodson's Horse), the cavalry regiment selected, has already started from the Punjab. It will arrive in Cawnpore to-morrow, and halt there for two or three days for the purpose of being armed with lances, which are considered the most suitable weapons for African warfare. It will then proceed to Bombay and embark at the beginning of next week. The 15th (Loodiana) Sikhs and the 17th (Loyal Poorbiabs), the two Bengal infantry regiments chosen, will concentrate at Allahabad on an early day this week, and take ship at Bombay next week. The 28th Bombay Native Infantry will go direct from Poona to Bombay. The last announced addition to the force is the 12th Madras Infantry. As before mentioned, Brigadier-General Hudson is to command the brigade. His staff consists of Major R. Stewart, of the Royal Artillery, Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General; Major Norman Stewart, Deputy Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General; Major A. Pearson, of the Royal Artillery, Intelligence officer; Major J. Cook, Brigade Major; and Captain C. Muir, Aide-de-Camp."

"A large amount of tonnage will be taken up at Bombay by Captain Hext, R.N., Director of the Indian Marine; and it may be expected that the last portion of the brigade will sail by the end of the month."

"It is rumoured that the Indian troops will not go to the front, but garrison Suakin."

LATER.

"Since the above was written I have heard on good authority that the native officers of several regiments have petitioned the Government to send their corps for active service to the Soudan, while in some corps the men have petitioned to the same effect. The petitioners include Mahomedans as well as other races."

The following telegram has been received from the Times correspondent at St. Petersburg, dated Feb. 16 :—

"Something like a sensation was produced here yesterday by a report that Russia had taken possession of Herat, and that the value of Russian funds and securities had consequently fallen in Berlin and London. Several persons engaged in business here even received foreign telegrams inquiring about the truth of the rumour."

"I have trustworthy information from thoroughly competent sources that this is a false alarm, and that the Russians have not seized upon Herat. Nor is it the intention of the Russian Government at the present moment to take any such step, which would be a flagrant violation of Russia's pledge, so recently and repeatedly given by the St. Petersburg Foreign Office, that Herat is fully recognised as forming part of Afghanistan, and, therefore as outside the pale of Russian influence. The organ of the Foreign Office, the Journal de St. Petersburg, repeated this declaration in a communiqué published as recently as the 4th of last month, in answer to some observations on the subject made by the correspondent of The Times in Paris."

"Indeed, anyone who will take the trouble to trace the spread of the report referred to, will see that it plainly comes from the sensational statements of Russophobists, based upon an exaggerated misconception of the hint thrown out last month in the remarks of the Paris correspondent above mentioned, and from no other source whatever. Many of the remarks sent to the English newspapers on the subject from various European capitals are simply ridiculous. The discussion of the Afghan boundary is proceeding now entirely in London; and as long as there is a fair chance of the frontier being peaceably agreed upon in accordance with what impartial judges here consider Russia's reasonable wishes—to have the whole of Turcomania ethnographically and physically considered—there need hardly be any danger of the Russians going to Herat. It is said here that to divide Turcomania would be as bad as the division of Bulgaria at the Berlin Congress, the lamentable results of which are only too apparent."

"One cannot, of course, guarantee for twenty-four hours what our present make-shift policy may not at any time force Russia, with what she would, perhaps, consider sufficient justification, into doing as regards Herat. But what we have to do is to make our position in Herat and Afghanistan secure while we have the chance, and not to leave the Afghan administration to guard our peaceful relations with Russia. Russia now virtually recognises that the territory in question is ours, and we must make it so absolutely on our side of the new frontier (as Russia will assuredly do with her possessions on the other), without grudging sufficient men and money for the purpose."

"To-day's Novoe Vremya also contradicts the rumour above referred to in the most positive manner."

At the last meeting of the Legislative Council of the Governor-General, the Honourable Amir Ali moved that the Bill for the voluntary registration of certain births, marriages, and deaths, recently introduced, be made of wider operation, so as to include Mahomedans. As the Bill stands, its operation is confined exclusively to those classes of the community subject to the Indian Succession Act, and the amendment is proposed in view of the important position which the law of intestate succession holds in both the Hindoo and Mahomedan systems. With the Mahomedans, the question relating to the custody of children has an intimate connection with their age, and though among Hindoos the method of keeping a record of births is more regular than among Mahomedans, still, as far as both communities are concerned, the evidential value of such records has been very much questioned.—Statesman.

We observe that the Military College, which has been removed from Kensington to Milford Haven, is now carried on by a company of gentlemen interested in military education, under the vice-presidency of General the Earl of Longford, the Earl of Malmesbury, and the Bishop of St. David's. The situation is admirably suited for those who desire to avoid the evils of London cramming; and if we may judge from the plan formed by the directors, the institution will be a very decided benefit to candidates for the army."

COUNCIL DRAFTS.—The tenders for Rs.40,00,000 in bills on India and telegraphic transfers were received on Wednesday last at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were :—In bills on Calcutta, Rs.24,10,000, average rate 1s. 6.9375d.; and on Bombay, Rs.5,10,000, average rate 1s. 6.9375d.; in telegraphic transfers on Calcutta, Rs. 9,00,000, average rate 1s. 7d.; and on Bombay, Rs. 5,00,000, average rate 1s. 7d.; making a total of Rs. 43,20,000. Tenders for bills on Calcutta and Bombay at 1s. 6 15-16d.; and for telegraphic transfers on Calcutta and Bombay at 1s. 7d. will receive in full. From April 1st to the 11th inst. the Council has sold remittances for Rs.13,29,47,618, realising £10,765,198.

THE INDIAN COUNCIL.—The Times thinks it probable that Sir Donald Stewart, the Commander-in-Chief in India, will shortly return home to take a seat upon the Indian Council.

MR. GERALD FITZGERALD, C.M.G., who has been selected to fill the appointment of Accountant-General of the Navy, served in the War Office from 1854 to 1865, in which year he was selected to proceed to India with Mr. Foster and Mr. Whiffin to report on the accounts of that country. Mr. Fitzgerald served temporarily in India until 1868, when he was appointed to the Financial Department permanently, and rose to the posts of assistant-controller-general in India and deputy-accountant-general of Bengal. In 1877 he was selected to be deputy-controller-general of the finances in Egypt, and he is at present serving in that country.

CHANGES IN THE INDIA OFFICE.—As we were able to inform our readers on December 26 last, a thorough reorganisation of the Correspondence Department in the India Office, the necessity of which engaged the attention of Mr. Godley immediately upon his appointment as Under-Secretary, has been carried out, and received the final sanction of the Secretary of State. The work of the office has been steadily increasing, and the old scale of pay, which was calculated on the theory that the clerks were nominated to their posts at the age of eighteen, proved quite inadequate to attract good men for the public examination, which allows candidates to compete up to the age of twenty-four. The salaries have been raised all through the grades under the rank of secretary, the initial salary of junior clerks being fixed at £200, increasing to £600, while senior clerks rise from £600 to £800, and second assistant-secretaries from £800 to £1,000, and in view of the greater efficiency expected the numbers of the staff have been reduced from forty-two to thirty-six. In future the appointments in the Home Service will be among the most valuable of those which are offered to public competition, and the reform witnesses to the greater importance which is now attached to Indian affairs. Its introduction will be concurrent with some important changes in the India Council. The Hon. E. Drummond's retirement has already been effected, and Sir William Muir's acceptance of the Edinburgh University's offer shortly causes another vacancy. According to the normal course of events, Sir Barrow Ellis's appointment would also expire this spring, but it is possible that his term of office may be extended. Should he be withdrawn, a Bombay official must necessarily be appointed—as it is, the predominance of Bengalis on the Council is very great.—Home News.

CAPTAIN G. H. MORE-MOLYNEUX, of the Bengal Staff Corps, has received orders to hold himself in readiness to leave England for Suakim, where he will be attached to General Newdigate's force.

CAPTAIN H. G. KUNHARDT, R.E., who arrived in England last month on two years' furlough from Bengal, has also been ordered to embark for Suakim at once.

THE INSTITUTE OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—At the meeting on Tuesday, the 3rd of February, Sir Frederick Bramwell, F.R.S., President, in the chair, it was announced that at the monthly ballot George Henry Bayly, B.A., P.W.D., India; Paul William Dangerfield, P.W.D., India; and Lieutenant-Colonel Frederick Tyrell, M.S.C., were elected Members: Edward Penny, P.W.D., India; Cecil Archibald Smith, P.W.D., Madras; Charles Arrow-smith Walsh, Oude and Rohilcund Railway, Associate Members.

THE INDIAN REFORM ASSOCIATION AND LORD RIPON.—A deputation from the Indian Reform Association waited on Lord Ripon, at his residence in Carlton-gardens, on the 10th inst., in order to present an address of congratulation for his return to this country after vacating the office of Vic. roy of India. The deputation included Lord Stanley of Alderley, Mr. Wilfrid Blunt, Mr. Justin McCarthy, M.P., Mr. Burt, M.P., Major Evans Bell, Dr. Congreve, Colonel P. T. French, Rev. James Long, Mr. Martin Wood, Professor Rhys Davies, Mr. Alfred Haggard and several native gentlemen. The secretary (Mr. George Foggo) read the address, which expressed a hope that the Bengal Tenancy Bill might be passed into law during the present session of the Legislative Council, that no heed would be given to the solicitation to appoint another commission of inquiry, and that his lordship's influence might be exerted in favour of the speedy enactment of the measure.—Mr. Haggard (late of the Bengal Civil Service) next spoke, and said it gave him great pleasure to think that at last a law—the Bengal Tenancy Bill—would be carried into effect, which would alleviate in some degree the undoubted miseries of the population. (Cheers.) Having been a personal witness of the Bengal famine, he asserted that anything which was done to improve the condition of the population must be a source of rejoicing to all who had ever taken part in Indian affairs. (Hear, hear.)—Mr. Jamsetjee Digazji said he had long indulged the hope that the people of India might be trained in the forms of representative government, serving their apprenticeship by self-government through the medium of representation in their own local affairs. (Hear, hear.) As to the civil service question, he held that open competitive examinations ought to be held both in India and England.—Mr. Martin Wood (formerly of Bombay) having also spoken.—The Marquis of Ripon, who was received with cheers, said he was sincerely thankful for the aid and support he had received from the association during a critical period of his administration; and he thought an association of that kind was likely to prove beneficial both to England and to India. With reference to the Bengal Tenancy Bill, he thought there was no cause for uneasiness, as that measure would be very satisfactorily dealt with on fair and equitable principles by the distinguished nobleman to whom he had recently, with much satisfaction, handed over the government of India.

THE INDIAN ARMY SYSTEM.—In consequence of a motion made by Mr. Stanhope last May for a copy of correspondence between the Government of India and the Secretary of State in Council respecting the proposed changes in the Indian army system, and of a further motion made by Sir George Balfour, a Blue-book has been issued, extending to 766 pages, dealing with the whole subject of the reorganisation of the Indian army.

NOTICES, DIVIDENDS, MEETINGS, &c.

THE ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—A general meeting of the members of this institution was held yesterday afternoon at the society's house, 22, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, Sir W. Muir presiding. Mr. Sidney Churchill, of the English Government Telegraph Department, Teheran, and P. V. Ramaswami Raja were elected non-resident members. The presentations to the society, acknowledged by the secretary, included a large number from the Secretary of State for India, among them being appendices to the Education Commissioners' reports of Bengal, Madras, Bombay, Punjab, the North-Western Provinces, and Oude. The meeting adjourned until Monday, March 16.

OBITUARY.

GENERAL PHILIP FRANCIS STORY, C.B., of the Bengal Cavalry, died on Friday at Glebeside, Preston, Brighton, aged seventy-six. He entered the army in 1825, and obtained a captaincy in 1832. He served throughout the campaign in Scinde in 1843 under Sir Charles Napier, and was present at the battles of Meeanee and Hyderabad. For these services he obtained the medal and the brevet rank of lieutenant-colonel, and was nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath. He became general in 1874.

MAJOR-GENERAL WILLIAM EARLE, C.B., C.S.I., who was killed in the recent engagement near Birtch, was the third son of the late Sir Hardman Earle, and brother of Sir Thomas Earle, the present baronet; his mother was Mary, second daughter of Mr. William Langton, of Kirkham, Lancashire, and he was born on the 18th of May, 1833. He was educated at Harrow, and entered the Army as an ensign in 1851, obtaining a lieutenantancy in 1854, and was promoted to captain in 1855. He served with the 49th Regiment throughout the Eastern campaign of 1854-55, taking part in the battles of Alma and Inkerman and the siege of Sebastopol, including the memorable sortie of the 26th of October and the assault of the Redan on the 18th of June. For these services he obtained the medal with three clasps, the Sardinian and Turkish medals, and the fifth class of the Medjidie. He acted as aide-de-camp to the Chief of the Staff in the Crimea towards the close of the campaign. In 1857 he removed from the 49th Foot into the Grenadier Guards, in which regiment he was successively Instructor of Musketry and Adjutant until 1863, when he became captain and lieutenant-colonel. He was promoted to a colonelcy in 1870, and obtained the rank of major-general in 1880. He held the post of Assistant Military Secretary at Gibraltar in 1859-60, was Brigade-Major in Canada in 1862 and 1863, Military Secretary in British North America from 1865 to 1870. From 1872 to 1876 he was employed as Military Secretary to the Governor-General of India (Lord Northbrook). For a short time in 1880 he was Colonel on the Staff of the Chatham district, and subsequently, till March, 1881, was in command of the South-Eastern District at Shorecliffe. In August, 1882, he was appointed Brigadier-General to the expeditionary force to Egypt, and in that capacity commanded the base and line of communication, and was present at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir. For these services he obtained the medal with clasp, the nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath (Military Division) in 1882, and he was also a Companion of the Order of second class of the Medjidie, and received the thanks of Parliament. General Earle was in command of the garrison of Alexandria from 1883 until called out to accompany the expedition sent to attempt the relief of General Gordon. General Earle was the Star of India. He married, in 1864, Mary, daughter of General Sir William J. Codrington, G.C.B. The news of General Earle's death was received with extreme and general regret in Liverpool, where the family have lived for many generations.

MAJOR-GENERAL THOMAS PIERCE, late Bengal Staff Corps, died on Feb. 3 at Rhyl, aged fifty-eight. The deceased was the eldest son of the late Mr. Thomas Pierce, of Gresford, Denbighshire. He entered the army in 1844, and served in the Sutlej campaign of 1845-6, taking part in the battle of Aliwal, and also throughout the Punjab campaign of 1848-9, including the affair of Ramnugur, the passage of Chenab, the battles of Chillianwallah and Goojerat, and the pursuit of the Sikhs and Afghans. He became major in 1864, lieutenant-colonel in 1870, colonel in 1875, and major-general in 1876.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

ARMY AND NAVY MAGAZINE,

Colonel Malleon opens the February number of the magazine with a historical account of the campaign that terminated at Innsbruck in 1552. The complete surprise of the presumed impregnable castle of Elrenberg is the chief tactical feature. On "Russia's secret agents in Afghanistan" Mr. Charles Marvin shows the ease with which such agents can and do permeate the country, and how absurd it is to suppose that any surveyed line or boundary can form a barrier. Mr. Hooper's pleasant and instructive series of papers on "Pepys as an Official" are continued. Captain Williams, of the Volunteers, gives some suggestive hints on Volunteer Transport which, if carried out, would at comparatively small cost add largely to the efficiency of a force which must really be half our stand-by in great emergency. Some interesting and novel facts about the Duke of Wellington and our army at the time of Waterloo are given by Mr. L'Estrange. The series of "Hints to Militia Adjutants" are concluded in this number. These hints are not only most amusingly written, but are full of shrewd sense, and worthy of close consideration by all who have to do with our auxiliary forces. The military novel of "Private Lawrie and his Love" is continued. In "A Rare Prize" is given the details of the capture and division of the spoil of a Spanish galleon in 1762, the total value of which was nearly a million of money and an A.B.'s share came to over £800. A prize like that would enliven up the recruiting of our Navy pretty rapidly if such chances occurred nowadays. No wonder the sailors took to regaling on bank-notes on toast.

SUAKIN AND THE SOUDAN.*

One of the numerous blunders made in the conduct of affairs in the Soudan was the employment of half-trained levies of Egyptians under General Valentine Baker against Osman Digma. Colonel Sartorius, of the Bombay Staff Corps, was employed in that unfortunate expedition, and Mrs. Sartorius, with the courage that seems to attach itself to the name, accompanied her husband everywhere, except on the immediate battlefield. Her book has come out at a most appropriate time, when all are anxious to know about Suakin and the prospects before the powerful expedition that is being put in the field "too late." It is not particularly satisfactory to learn that the water supply commences to dry up in February, and that by April men and cattle both have to take to condensed water. Considerable information is given as to the Mahdi, whose rise has been so sudden, and it is stated on the excellent authority of Colonel Stewart's report that about the time of Tel-el-Kebir, a detachment commanded by two Egyptian officers could easily have made him a prisoner. Afterwards difficulties seem to have been thrown in the way both of Hicks and Baker, and it is very clear that the whole expenditure of blood and money might have been obviated if a little help had been given before the Arabs had got their fanatical courage up by continual small successes. The heroic defence of Sinkat by Tewfik Bey is a matter that should be more known and remembered, for it shows what Egyptian troops are really capable of. From the excellent account given of the advance from Trinkitat, and the complete dissolution of the force under Valentine Baker, it is clear that the dispositions were good enough and the arrangements simple, but to form coolly from column to square under attack, though a most simple manoeuvre, requires considerable training—the training that distinguishes troops from mobs. Even with our own cavalry men, who get a certain amount of foot drill, it would seem that at Abu Klea the other day the manoeuvre was not smoothly performed, and the levies under Baker were quite unfit to take the field. But there is hope that in a year or two, when well trained under English officers, the Egyptian army may be able to hold its own ground. On many other points this book will be found to be most interesting, especially at the present time.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

—o—

IN the Adjutant-General's Department there will be this year two vacancies amongst the Assistant Adjutant-Generals, in April and September; leaving the Allahabad and Meerut Divisions open. The Agra Brigade Majorship will be vacant in December.

COLONELS HASTINGS FRASER and W. MUNRO, of the Madras Staff Corps, came into their off- reckonings on the 20th ult. Colonel Munro has been employed in British Burma, civil employ, for years, and has been a Deputy Commissioner since June, 1877; he proceeded on two years' furlough in March, 1883.

THE Secretary of State has wired reducing the period of service of Staff Corps lieutenants from twelve to eleven years for captaincy.

AMONGST the proposals for the reorganisation of the Volunteer Force under consideration by the authorities are suggestions that the force should be placed under the Commander-in-Chief, and that a Volunteer reserve should be formed, into which all those would be drafted who have for various reasons been obliged to give up volunteering, and who, under the present system, have terminated their connection with the force.

THE Government of India have sanctioned a monthly payment of Rs. 100 in lieu of the travelling allowance admissible under regulation to the Roman Catholic priest for ministering to the detachments of British troops stationed at Calicut and Malapuram in the Madras Presidency.

IN reply to an application from the Rev. Gelson Gregson, Secretary of the Soldiers' Total Abstinence Association, for a grant of Rs. 150 a month for a Madras branch of the Association, the Government of India has replied that it is not prepared at present to increase the grant of Rs. 4,800 now granted to the Association for all India.

MAJOR G. E. ROGERS, whose name is known to our readers in connection with the Rawalpindi Court of Inquiry, only joined the King's Dragoon Guards in 1880 from the 3rd Hussars, in which regiment he had served close on eleven years.

COMMANDING officers of the Bengal Cavalry and Punjab Frontier Force cavalry regiments complain bitterly of the high prices they are obliged to pay nowadays for their remounts. It is affirmed that the reason why horses are so dear is that officers from different regiments go to the same fair and bid against one another. To remedy this it has been proposed that there should be a sort of buying committee; representatives from which should attend the various fairs, and send their purchases to a central dépôt, from which the various regiments should be supplied.

"VERITAS" writes to a contemporary:—It appears that the deplorable loss of over forty men by this regiment from cholera in their march from Quetta to Kurrachee was to a great extent due to Sir O. Tanner, the general commanding at Quetta. The regiment left Quetta in three portions, with orders to halt five days at a place named Rindli, between Pir Chowki and Sibi. The first detachment had reached Rindli, and two cases of cholera having appeared the officer in command telegraphed to Colonel Simpson, then halted at South Kirta, the fact. Colonel Simpson immediately telegraphed to Sir O. Tanner at Quetta, asking permission to halt the five days at South Kirta instead of Rindli on account of the cholera there. He received a message to carry out the original orders, namely, to halt at Rindli. On reaching that place thirty men died of cholera the same night; the men who fell victims to the disease were, as often happens, some of the finest in the battalion, sacrificed for the most part to the ignorant obstinacy of the general officer commanding at Quetta.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.S. "JUMNA."—Her Majesty's troopship Jumna, 4,173 tons, Captain U. C. Singleton, arrived in Bombay harbour on Jan. 25th from Portsmouth, which port she left on the 28th December. The Jumna brought 63 officers, 18 ladies, 9 children, 10 warrant officers, 8 ladies, 14 children, 1,141 men, 34 women, and 32 children. She disembarked at Malta the 105th Regiment and embarked the 8th Royal Irish Fusiliers. During the voyage the Jumna experienced fine weather.

WITH the sanction of Her Majesty's Government the Regulations for Military Savings Banks issued with Clause 41, War Office Circulars of 1883, have been revised and made applicable to India, and will come into effect from the 1st April, 1885. The limit of annual deposits has been raised from Rs. 300 to Rs. 500.

THE command of the 2nd Battalion, Seaforth Highlanders, at Lucknow, vacant by the recent death of Colonel G. Forbes, goes to Lieutenant-Colonel A. Murray, who obtained his Lieutenant-Colonelcy in March, 1883; passing over Major T. Mackenzie. Major and Lieutenant-Colonel Kelsey, of the old 72nd, declined promotion out of his old corps.

VOLUNTEERING IN INDIA.

There is reason to hope that the subject of Volunteering, which is now before the Viceroy's Council, will be disposed of during the present cold season. We understand that certain important proposals bearing on the organisation of the force are under consideration. It is suggested, for instance, that the force be placed under the Commander-in-Chief, and this, we believe, is a proposal which will be received most favourably by all who are interested in the Volunteer movement. The general effect of such a step would, undoubtedly, be to raise the prestige of the force, and to give it stability from a military point of view. But there are many advantages of a practical character which would accrue from such a reform, and which would exercise a most important influence on the advancement of Volunteering. What the force really wants more than anything else, indeed, is that it shall be placed under a commander who has not only experience and energy, but the influence necessary to promote its welfare. The Commander-in-Chief would be able at once to bring the organisation into uniformity, and as the channel of communications with the Government would be in the best possible position to gain for the force the fullest recognition of the State. It is not too much to say that with the Commander-in-Chief at the head of the Volunteers an immediate improvement in the tone of the force might be looked for, as well as a considerable accession of numbers. Among the various suggestions which have been made from time to time it has been proposed that an independent Volunteer Department should be formed under Government; but there are many objections to such a scheme, and all the advantages which it would secure are to be derived from the arrangement which is now under consideration. Another of the proposals before the Council is that a Volunteer reserve should be formed, into which all those would be drafted who have for various reasons been obliged to give up Volunteering, and who, under the present system, have terminated their connection with the force. It is certainly a matter of great importance that old Volunteers should not thus be lost sight of, but that they should be maintained on the rolls, and should have the means of preserving touch with the movement. It has long been a complaint in India that the heads of offices have not shown an example to their clerks and others by joining the force, but in the majority of cases the thing has been practically impossible. The want of time and the conditions of the service put Volunteering out of the question for many. When, however, a reserve is established, it will doubtless be found that many men who are now precluded from joining will be able to pass through a course of training, and take their place permanently in the reserve.

These two proposals are, beyond question, of the greatest practical importance, but we believe that there is some diversity of opinion as to the necessity for increasing the capitation allowance, which has also been suggested. There are many Volunteers who consider that the present allowance is very liberal, and that nothing more is required. It is contended that the grant of Rs 20 per efficient and Rs 30 per extra efficient is ample for all legitimate purposes; but that is not properly expended. As a matter of fact, the capitation grants go into the funds of the corps, and are not expended in a way that benefits the Volunteers individually. To devise a means of encouragement which will reach individual Volunteers has always been one of the great problems connected with the movement. The idea of allowing service with the Volunteers to count for pension must be put aside as inapplicable to non-official Volunteers. The proposal to grant home passages in troopships is equally impracticable, for many reasons. Again, to relieve Volunteers of taxation, as has also been suggested, would be to strike at the root principle of the movement. Perhaps, therefore, the proposal to raise the capitation grant is the best, as it is the most feasible of the various suggestions; and if due care is taken that the grant is expended in a manner that will more directly benefit the men than at present, we may hear no more in future of the standing subjects of dispute in Volunteering circles. It must, at least, be encouraging to the Volunteers to know that the organisation of the force is being overhauled; and this, we believe, they owe in a great measure to the exertions of Mr. J. H. Rivett-Carnac, the colonel of the Gbaziipur Volunteers, who has been mainly instrumental in bringing the whole subject before the Government afresh. The lines upon which the Government are moving are those of progress, and the reforms which are now in contemplation will go far to improve the position of our auxiliary forces.—Englishman.

STAFF CORPS PROBATIONERS.

A HIGH military authority who has enjoyed wide professional experience, regimental and staff, both in England and India, writes to us on the subject of remarks we lately made relative to the present system of recruiting probationers for the Indian Staff Corps. Like everyone else the writer first thought the plan of sending the young men to a Queen's regiment for a couple of years a good one. The advantage was very patent. A couple of years training in a good Queen's regiment ought to give a young man a tone and style which he could not acquire elsewhere. He gained what is expressively called "good form." However, "good form," both at a public school and in the army, may be purchased at too great a price. Experience, our correspondent points out, has shown that the practice of passing officers through a Queen's regiment is prejudicial both to the regiment and the young officer. It is difficult to keep up the esprit de corps and discipline of a regiment in which a large number of officers are mere birds of passage. The colonel of a Queen's regiment naturally objects to lose good men, and uses all his influence to persuade his hard bargains to join the Staff Corps. As a rule, the reasons which compel a young man to join the Staff Corps are pecuniary ones. He gets into debt on account of his British regiment being stationed near London or some other expensive quarter, and commences his Indian career crippled in money matters, and having acquired expensive habits. As a rule, the old Indian officer was the son of an Indian officer, and had never had the chance of seeing the fast side of London life. Coming fresh from school and Addiscombe, his pay was a mass of wealth compared to his modest allowance. He had always looked forward to coming to India to rejoin his parents and friends, and he took the same interest in an Indian corps as his father had done before him. The present young man only watches with keen interest the promotion in his old regiment, and never fails to tell you exactly how he would have stood, and laments his hard lot being cast with "niggers." Colonels of regiments can tell what a repugnance and distaste young men have for the Staff Corps. And it is only natural that this should be the case. After having been a member of the mess of a British regiment, amid a number of companions, the change to a native regiment in which most of the officers are married, and where he is comparatively thrown entirely on his own resources and companionship, must be appalling. We have often pointed out the advantage there would be in a station like Poona to have one united mess of two or three native regiments, but the authorities seem to have done nothing to encourage or carry out the plan. No doubt there are difficulties in the way, but people are paid high salaries to overcome difficulties. Most persons have come to the conclusion that the frame of mind of the present men is not conducive either to discipline or efficiency. The best way of recruiting for the Staff Corps is a grave and pressing problem which must be solved. Sir Henry Durand wrote many years ago, "The old system has been swept away, and its faults and merits are a thing of the past, but the faults and feebleness of the new organisation are a thing of the present, and will force themselves on the attention of Government the moment any tension comes upon our Indian military system and establishments."—Times of India.

AN INDIAN TICHBORNE CASE.

A CASE was recently heard before Mr. J. W. Walker, Sessions Judge of Ahmedabad, in which one Bawa Bhabhutgar, a sadhu (religious mendicant), who arrived in Ahmedabad some six years ago, proclaimed himself as Hiralal, the long-lost husband of Bai Nahni, a young widow of the Nagar Brahmin caste, of a somewhat prepossessing countenance, and was welcomed by her with all protestations of love. Hiralal had gone on a pilgrimage to Benares in January, 1877, in company with his wife and mother, and while bathing in the Jumna, opposite Muttra, he was supposed to have been drowned. His body was never recovered, and his wife and mother, having performed his funeral ceremonies, returned home. To their no little astonishment and the rest of their family a few months later the sadhoo previously referred to presented himself at their house, and declared that he was Hiralal, a statement which was believed to be correct, Hiralal's father, who had died some time previously, left behind him considerable property, which was claimed by Manilal Chotamlal, sole surviving son, and for the recovery of which the present suit was brought against the sadhoo Bai Nahni, and her mother. The matter was heard in the first instance before the late Mr. Phillpotts, Sessions Judge, and was subsequently disposed of by Mr. Walker. Before the termination of the suit, however, in the lower court, Manilal Chotamlal, died, and he was subsequently followed to the grave by his wife. His heirs were then made the plaintiffs and were legally represented by Mr. F. R. Vicaajee, barister-at-law, and Mr. Desaibhai Kalidas, pleader. The first defendant the sadhoo, Bawa Bhabhutgar, was represented by Mr. Nurbheram Ragnathdas; the second defendant, Bai Nahni, appeared in person; and the third defendant, Bai Lador, was represented by Mr. Balabhai, pleader. From the evidence adduced it appears that Chotamlal Ulasram, Subordinate Judge of Dholka, died in 1874, leaving behind him Bai Lador, his wife, and two sons, Manilal and Hiralal. In November, 1876, Hiralal, accompanied by his wife, mother, and certain attendants, went on pilgrimage to Benares and other places held sacred to Hindus. One day in the January following Hiralal said he was going to bathe in the river, but he never returned; and it being supposed that he was drowned, his wife and mother went into mourning, and eventually returned to Ahmedabad. A dispute then arose between them as to the family property. The matter was referred to arbitrators, and just about the time when an unsuccessful attempt was made by Bai Nahni to get the arbitrators' award filed in court, the sadhoo, dressed in the peculiar garb of his sect, appeared in Ahmedabad, calling himself Bhabhutgar. He published a notice in one of the local papers in July, 1878, announcing his return as the real Hiralal. In consequence of this Manilal laid a complaint against him of cheating by personation, but Mr. Fernandez, the magistrate, dismissed the case. The sadhoo, during the inquiry, was supported in his claim by Bai Nahni and Bai Lador; and the former, after the dismissal of the case, went to live with him as his wife. The present suit was brought in September, 1880. The sadhoo's version of the story is that in consequence of some disagreement he left his wife and mother at Muttra, and wandered about the country for some time, begging for food. His hardships and sufferings, however, compelled him to return to Ahmedabad, where he lived near the banks of the Nerbudda, begging and selling charms. He was not at first eager to make known who he actually was, and it was only when people flocked round him and urged him on that he put forward his claim. In his judgment, Mr. Walker remarked that in a large city like Ahmedabad, there were always ready a large number of people, who either from the greed of gain or the hope of notoriety and excitement, took up a cause such as this, where a large property was involved. It was extremely improbable that if the sadhoo was the right man he should have remained passive for some time, instead of returning at once to his relatives and friends. In his evidence, Mr. Walker added, he entirely failed to establish his claim; and his examination, long and searching as it was, left no suspicion whatever in the mind of the court that he was an impostor. His behaviour in the witness-box was very strange and unsatisfactory, and when the case was before Mr. Phillpotts, that gentleman recorded in his notes that the sadhoo was very sharp, and answered just as it suited himself. Throughout he was naturally acute and had tried his best to coach himself in all the facts of which Hiralal was expected to have knowledge; he often evaded the questions, trimmed his answers, and made a guess by watching the faces around him. Hiralal had been carefully educated by his father, after whose death he attended the Irish Presbyterian School, and subsequently a private school by a Mr. George. He had a fairly good knowledge of English, and as a Nagar Brahmin he spoke good and pure Gujarati, and his letters and essays in his mother-tongue showed that he wrote it with ease and fluency. The sadhoo's knowledge of English, however, was next to nothing, and his knowledge of Gujarati was very deficient. He took one hour and ten minutes to read two sides of a letter written by Hiralal to a friend, and he required to have at least one word in every three words told him. He could not tell the meaning of such words as "mathematics," "map," "adjective," "noun," and "atlas," which Hiralal had received as a prize, and he gave the most absurd explanations of Napoleon Bonaparte, Columbus, the Cape of Good Hope, America, &c., subjects which Hiralal knew very well. He was not even able to say whether Mr. George, one of Hiralal's former masters, was a European, Parsee, Hindu, or Mahomedan; he had also a very vague knowledge of the life of Chotamlal, Hiralal's father, and he was obviously quite ignorant of facts concerning Hiralal's mother, such as that at one time she was so displeased that she threatened to leave the house and turn school-mistress. The sadhoo sought to account for much of his ignorance by alleging that his memory had been greatly impaired by his constant use of intoxicating drugs. Mr. Walker remarked that unless the defendant had indeed been steeped in the waters of Lethe his mind could not have become a tabula rosa as to his former period of existence. The claimant Orton had forgotten Latin and French; but even he did not go the length of forgetting his own mother-tongue. The sadhoo had been actively getting up his case to the best of his powers; but the most Herculean labour could not make up for the want of early training, education, and association. As to his acts on his arrival at Ahmedabad, it might be broadly said that he did nothing that Hiralal would have done; and as to his local knowledge of Ahmedabad and Dholka, the two places which Hiralal knew best, he had little. It was possible that there was some resemblance between the defendant and Hiralal, but the evidence would not repay scrutiny, and there was simply no comparison between the credibility of the witnesses for the plaintiff and the witnesses for the defendants. Much stress has been laid on behalf of the sadhoo on the magistrate's decision, but Mr. Walker held that it was of no weight in the present suit, and as it had been referred to at length, he felt himself bound to say that the inquiry was imperfect, and the grounds for the magistrate's decision were anything but satisfactory. As to Bai Lador, the Sessions Judge remarked that the case was peculiar, and it was better not to go into her evidence, as she subsequently deposed that she was not satisfied with the sadhoo, or rather that she would not swear either way. As to Bai Nahni, Mr. Fernandez had attached great weight to her evidence, but he entirely ignored a consideration of the point whether a young Hindu widow doomed to perpetual widowhood by the rules of her caste was likely to form a disinterested opinion. Mr. Walker said that on the evidence he had no hesitation in finding that Hiralal was drowned in the Jumna, his body having been borne away by the swift current of the river. The sadhoo was an impostor, who had obtained possession of some of the family property by gross fraud and cheating, and as against him the plaintiff's right to recover to the property was established, even on the finding that Hiralal had disappeared, and had not been heard of for close upon eight years. In conclusion, the Sessions Judge expressed the obligation of the court to Mr. Desaibhai, the plaintiff's pleader, for the extreme care and attention with which he had conducted the plaintiff's case, and also to Mr. Vicaajee for his able address on the whole case. His Honour said he would have nothing to do with the trial of the sadhoo on the charge of perjury, but he expressed a hope that if the sadhoo was convicted of the offence he would receive a severe measure of punishment. Justice will have pursued him with very halting foot if he was convicted. He had put Chotamlal's family to enormous expense and great vexation, and in conducting his defence he had thought fit to make his pleader cast needless aspersions on honest witnesses also, as was their bounden duty, as intimate friends of Chotamlal and his family denounced him as an impostor as soon as they had satisfied themselves by reasonable inquiry that he was not the true Hiralal.

The sadhoo has appealed against the decision of the Sessions Judge, and a stay of prosecution for perjury has been granted by the High Court until the disposal of the appeal.

AVENUES.

An interesting report has lately been made in India by a member of the Woods and Forests Department on the subject of tree-planting with a view to the formation of avenues. In a hot climate like that of India there are, of course, exceptional benefits of a most practical kind to be derived from an arrangement which would line the public high roads with natural screens of foliage protecting them from the fierce rays of the sun; and the State has here such wide powers in the matter of abriculture and command of property that it can much more effectually insist upon the carrying out of its recommendations than the authorities in many other countries, including England.

It is rather curious to see what objects the Government is expected to have in view in thus planting the sides of the public thoroughfares in a large part of Madras, where one might think that nobody would be afraid of draughts. It is assumed that one main purpose to be served by the trees is to be the warding off inclement winds. For this purpose the fig-tree is recommended as the species to be applied, and the stocks are to be nothing more than stout poles ten or twelve feet high, which, when deeply rooted in the ground, are intended to throw out thick branches in each direction, and so to form a dense mass of foliage, blocking the passage of the roughest wind. In damper districts, the ambition of the tree-planter must be limited to finding a plant which will keep itself alive without being anything like so useful as a protection either against storm or sunshine. Here the humble willow is recommended, with some other of the less common trees abundant in a swampy district, which it would be of no great use to quote either under their learned titles or by the names given to them in the vernacular. In ordinary soils, the mango and the Palmyra date, the chestnut, and a host of Indian trees unknown to us can be grown with good effect; but there is an almost complete absence from the list of the trees familiar to our own hedgerows—the oak, elm, and poplar, as well as of the varieties common in streets and boulevards, such as plane trees and times. The intensely practical spirit of the age is reflected in the suggestions of the Commissioner, who founds his advice entirely upon a consideration of the advantages to be got from each sort of tree, combined with the practicability of growing it with speed and permanent success.—Globe.

WANTED—AN ARMY FOR INDIA.

One of the most urgent matters before the Government of India is the state of preparedness of the army. No one can pretend to comprehend the reasons which led Lord Ripon to sanction an extensive reduction of the military force of the Empire. The argument based upon the value of railways is useless, for free movement in India will not enable the Indian army to carry on a campaign external to India. The necessities of India are beyond her borders; it is somewhat inconsequent, therefore, to reduce her strength for reasons which only affect the movement of troops within her own limits. Then, the army is not so splendidly equipped relatively to any possible enemy, as to justify a large reduction in guns, and the obstinate refusal of Government to furnish the troops with machine guns. Further, and chiefly, there is no reason why the Government should shut its eyes to the difference which has sprung up between civil and military employment, between private employ and life in the ranks, and between the soldiers and the policemen. The pay of the men must be raised, the position of the native officer must be bettered. The service has ceased to be attractive, ceased to be popular; and it is most unpopular because the men are overworked; for too much is expected from too few. The result is apparent in the falling-off of the better class of recruits and in the smallness of the men who come forward for service. The action of the Government has created for it a very serious military difficulty in India, and outside of India has had simply deplorable political results. The military power of the Empire has ceased to be respected, because it has ceased to be commensurate with Indian resources or Indian interests. There can be no possible doubt that Russia, for instance, has advanced simply because India has disarmed. Every fresh reduction of the army in India, every advance towards making it a merely garrison police, has been followed by a new aggression in Central Asia. Lord Ripon threw away sixty guns and sixteen regiments, and Russia at once annexed Merv and threatened Herat. Her justification was found in the economical folly of the Government of India. What is the case with Burmah? As the king saw the army lessened in numbers, he became convinced that India would never fight, and he has honestly acted upon that conviction. Persia regards India with indifference, and France pursues in the East a policy which shows that she has also imbibed the belief that India is unable to act energetically beyond her own boundaries. It may be said that this country has sent expeditions to Abyssinia, Persia, and Egypt. Those expeditions only showed how great a strain it was to put even 10,000 men into the field, and they demonstrated to a military power the weakness, and not the strength of India. Besides, instead of being understood by the Government in India, they have been used as arguments for new reductions, they have been taken as excuses for the most unwise and unjustifiable throwing away of strength ever attempted by a great Empire. In its need the Government has called a volunteer force of scattered units into existence—a force that cannot be combined, and that can only give time for reinforcements to be demanded from England. The task, then, before the Government is a hard one. It must consent to be wise, with the wisdom of common sense. It must admit that whatever it may do with its soldiers, it will find a response beyond its borders, and that a problematical ability to send a single army corps across the frontier is not enough for the protection of Indian interests, or even for the safety of the Empire. If Lord Dufferin have the courage with which he is credited, his first care will be to restore to India a force which shall save the people from false impressions and the Government from anxiety.—Indian Daily News.

AN ARTS COLLEGE AT RANGOON.

We understand that before long the Educational Syndicate of British Burma will take measures to establish an Arts College at Rangoon, in which there will be several well-paid professorial chairs and a rectorship with a salary of about Rs. 1,000 per mensem. The proposals were published among the Syndicate debates last year, and ought to attract much attention in the educational department. These debates are published under the signatures of the president and registrar. The Director of Public Instruction, Mr. Peter Hordern, framed a scheme which excluded vernacular teachers, and which provided that the rector should not be a professor in any subject but confine himself to superintendence of the others. There was a belief that the selection of Mr. Hordern would be the head master of one of the schools. The Bishop of Rangoon sounded a note of alarm in a letter to Mr. Jardine, the then president, which insisted that first-rate University qualifications were an absolute necessity in the first rector of the only Arts College ever established in that ignorant region, and that the rector ought to be a professor in some one subject. Mr. Jardine said he was of the same opinion, and reflected upon Mr. Hordern's proceedings, saying that the latter had not consulted any University man in framing his proposal, and had ignored the fact that in the Bombay and Poona Colleges the Principals, Wordsworth and Oxenham, taught in several faculties with the utmost advantage to the students. The Bishop's view was accepted by the Syndicate; but this was many months ago, and it seems strange that if University men in honours are really to be appointed, no notice has been given to the Indian authorities in the different presidencies or to the Universities at home. It is time now that the requirements of the Syndicate should be stated and the proposed pay announced, so that a selection may be made of the best possible candidates.—Times of India.

THE "TIMES" CORRESPONDENT AND THE PROPOSED NATIVE POLITICAL ASSOCIATION.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times will no doubt feel duly flattered to find that Professor Wordsworth and his disciples are organising a telegraphic service to counteract the effects of his weekly telegram. Judging from the extremely unexciting character of the bulletins that gentleman has been sending home for the last six months, it would not have occurred to most people that a special agency was required for saying "No" to his "Aye;" but presumably the Professor and the "leading native gentlemen" who are with him have their reasons for holding a different opinion. It may be a little difficult though for the Anti-Times correspondent Association to find a medium of circulation equal to that of their adversary, unless they are prepared to start an opposition Times by way of preliminary; and for some considerable time to come we fear that the correspondent will continue to possess an unjust advantage over them in this respect. But, perhaps, some London paper may be induced to do the right thing and open its columns to a weekly and inexpensive tale of Indian grievances. We could wish that the project held out any reasonable hope of fostering a larger interest in Indian affairs; but it is hardly promising. In the absence of a further supply of Ibert Bills—which is about the one thing we are justified in reckoning upon during the next five years—native aspirations in the abstract are not an exciting subject. Those who sympathise with them most heartily feel that they are best left to time, nature, and the Government. Versions of current affairs from the Wordsworthian point of view would be more amusing at first; but the novelty wears off, and influence declines from strains that are too often and too obviously repeated, more especially when they take the form of complaints. The Times correspondent is at least free to say what he thinks fit on each question that rises; but the line of his opponents, pledged to see one side only of everything, would be found as uninteresting as everything that is absolutely certain beforehand.—Pioneer.

A CALL OF DUTY.

The Rast Goftar in a long article supports the movement lately started by a number of native gentlemen to have an independent telegraph service between England and India with regard to important political questions. The Rast says:—Our readers know what an amount of harm the Calcutta correspondent of the Times does to the cause of this country. This individual still continues to keep up the feeling of the rulers and the public of Great Britain against this country by sending them false messages through the paper he represents. The movement, therefore, to counteract this evil must have our hearty support. Messrs. Wordsworth and Hume and Sir William Wedderburn, though Englishmen by birth, have each contributed Rs. 300 per year to the general funds raised to defray the cost of telegrams.

We dwell about two months ago on the absolute necessity of arrangements for a weekly telegram from India to London representing the true state of affairs. And it is a satisfaction to us now to be able to say that arrangements are in progress that Bombay and different parts of the presidency, as well as Madras, may contribute to a fund that has already been started. Bengal and the Provinces will also co-operate, we hope. If all goes well we may soon have to consult the Calcutta correspondent of the Times as to the best mode of competing with him. Nothing like emulation.—Indian Spectator.

The French Government having decided upon establishing coal depôts at Pondicherry and Mahi, the foundations of a permanent shed, to be built of brick, were commenced at the former place on the 20th instant. The size of the building is to be 50 feet by 500 feet, and it will hold 3,000 tons. These depôts are designed primarily for the use and benefit of French ships of war cruising in the Eastern seas. The next step, a Madras contingent remarks, will be to fortify the places holding the depôts, and in that case a nice question will arise as to the freedom of France, under existing treaties, to make a small Cherbourg on the eastern coast, and a small Toulon on the western coast of India as bases for the advancement of French interests in the East.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

INDIAN TEA.—Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson report as follows on the Tea Market, till the 13th inst.:—Upwards of 46,000 packages have been brought to market during the past fortnight, 900 of these being Ceylon tea and 1,500 packages second-hand and reprinted parcels. A less active business in the country, and the large supplies at the moment available have checked anything like speculative buying, but upon the whole the dealers have been encouraged to operate by the heavy deliveries and the rapidity with which the crop is being disposed of, and there has been sufficient competition to cause prices slowly, but gradually, to harden for all but the commonest kinds of teas. Demand as before has been strongest for fine qualities, but latterly more attention has been paid to grades between 9d. to 1s., and to showy Pekoes and Broken Pekoes between 1s. and 1s. 3d., which now appear relatively cheap; and prices for these have improved a little. The superior quality of the later manufacture already referred to becomes more clearly marked as the season progresses, and supplies now coming to market afford a better selection than for some time past. The deliveries of Indian and Ceylon during January were 6,489,000lbs, as compared with 5,605,000 last year, the total delivery for the month being one million lbs. heavier. The question whether the current season's supplies will suffice to meet our requirements at the rate of consumption now reached is attracting some attention. On page 3 will be found figures showing the position based upon the actual shipments to Jan. 31 (56½ million lbs.). The result shows the visible supply to be 1½ million lbs. less than last year; assuming, therefore, that the increase in consumption is maintained, stocks will be reduced to a lower point than usual—perhaps to less than two months' consumption—before the autumn supplies are received. It will be remembered that last season London weights were more than two million lbs. above Calcutta; this season, however, so far, we find no appreciable difference. The Justitia (s), lost, carried 500,000lbs.

THE Council General of the French Settlement in India, for voting supplies and regulating the finances of the Government, met at the Hotel De Ville, Pondicherry, on the 12th ult., under the presidency of Monsieur De Nanteuil, when the Governor, Monsieur Richaud, in an able speech, urged the necessity for largely increased grants for educational purposes. His Excellency proposed a system of Free Schools divided into three classes, viz., primary, superior, and normal.

THONGWA, British Burma, must be a fascinating district to govern. The Local District overseer, the Local Funds clerk, and one or two other subordinates have all disappeared within the past few weeks, without claiming arrears of pay. It seemed that the judicial clerk's wife kept a common gaming-house, and these ingenious officials were accustomed to play high, and occasionally to stake Government cash there. When luck was too much for them they fled. The worthy proprietress of the establishment has been fined; but up to the present the Local District overseer and the post-office clerk are at large.—Times of India.

THE ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.—We were in error, it seems, in saying recently that Mr. Syed Mahmood would be leaving the High Court at the beginning of next month on the return of Mr. Straight, for although Mr. Mahmood is acting for Mr. Straight, his original appointment was to fill Mr. Tyrrell's vacancy, and his subsequent translation a pro forma arrangement. The displaced judge will, therefore, be Dr. W. Duthoit, who returns to the judicial commissionership of Oudh, where, it may be trusted, he will speedily have the promised assistance of a colleague, for public opinion in Oudh is unanimous in demanding that no time should be lost in making the additional appointment to the court at Lucknow.—Pioneer.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1885.

A PLAIN STATEMENT OF THE OBJECTIONS TO LORD RIPON'S BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

A CORRESPONDENT writes—"Would it not be well if you were to publish (for the convenience of many English readers who hate spoliation and oppression, but who are not familiar with the mysteries of Indian terminology) a brief statement of the main objections to Lord Ripon's Bengal Tenancy Bill, in a form free from Indian technicalities?" The following is a rough attempt to comply with this suggestion.

I. Present State of Affairs.—The population of Bengal is almost entirely agricultural; and it is estimated that this Bill directly affects the interests of more than fifty millions of human beings.

The ultimate right to the soil is vested, in Bengal as elsewhere in India, in the State; and, in virtue of this right, the State has always exacted from the holders of land a revenue-payment, amounting to a considerable proportion of what the land is supposed to be able to yield.

In many of the other parts of India the "settlement," or assessment of the exact annual amount of this revenue-payment to Government, is made by the officers of Government periodically—generally at intervals of thirty years. The evils of these periodical settlements—their frequent inaccuracy and extortionate character, the oppression and harassment of all interests by which they are accompanied, the utter demoralisation of the country for a long period before the time of settlement, and so forth—have been the theme of more complaints than any other part of our Indian administration. In portions of the Bombay Presidency and elsewhere, special legislation has been more than once forced on the Government, to save the population from the absolute ruin and starvation caused by errors or misadventures in these periodical settlements. And in the North-Western Provinces, it is related of one "settlement" effected by the present Finance Minister of India, Sir Auckland Colvin, that the person, with whom the "settlement" was made, ran away from the estate, leaving it as a gift to the settlement-officer.

In Bengal, however, Lord Cornwallis in 1793 determined to make the settlement once for all; and in the Regulations, recording this "Permanent Settlement" of the revenue, he pledged the faith of the British Government in the most solemn way that no greater revenue-payment than the amount then fixed should ever be demanded by the Government from the Bengal landholders (zemindars) or their successors.

In regard to this Permanent Settlement, it may be admitted on the one side that the Government reserved to itself—and, indeed, could not, in the nature of things, alienate—the right to legislate at a future time, if necessary, to secure the welfare of the tenants (ryots) or any other class of the community. And further, that authorities are divided as to whether the evils of periodical "settlements" of the revenue are sufficiently great to justify the alienation by the State of the "unearned increment" by a Permanent Settlement. On the other side, the Permanent Settlement, whether wise or unwise, was so solemnly guaranteed, that it must be impossible for the Government to break it—especially when it is remembered that it was greatly to the advantage of the Government for many years, and greatly to the disadvantage of the landholders, of whom most of the great families were actually sold up, their estates now being held by the descendants of purchasers. Further, it is an indisputable fact that Bengal has made the most marvellous progress in general wealth and prosperity under this Permanent Settlement—far greater than any other part of India. The capital of the landholders has been freely applied to the clearing of jungle, the draining of swamps, the construction and maintenance of embankments, the digging of tanks, and the general improvement of the country; so that they have turned a swampy jungle into one vast smiling rice-plain.

One consequence of all this has been, that the improvement in the land has been so great, that for many years past the revenue obtained by the Government under the Permanent Settlement has been considerably less than that which it would have obtained from the land if it had stuck to periodical settlements. There are some economists who maintain that the Government, having now found out its mistake, should boldly "cut the coupon"—should declare that Lord Cornwallis's pledges were ultra vires, and therefore invalid; but no Viceroy, we trust, is likely to assent to this extreme measure. But much financial ingenuity has, at various times, been devoted to the interesting problem, "How to 'walk round' the Permanent Settlement, and annex some of the unearned increment, without actual repudiation."

The brilliant device of "taxing the coupon" was hit upon by Sir George Campbell when Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. He enacted that certain taxes, called a Road Cess and a Public Works Cess, should be laid on the land, partly on the ryot or tenant, partly on the zemindar or landholder; and to make matters easy for the Government, he also enacted that the landholder should be forced to pay the whole of these taxes (including the portion to be recovered by him from the tenants) to the Government, in addition to the revenue-payment levied under the Permanent Settlement.

It should be noted here, that, under the famous "Sunset Law," if the landholder does not pay the demands of the Government by sunset of the day on which it is due, his estate is at once put up to auction, to meet the payment.

II. The Proposed Legislation.—Out of the above-mentioned brilliant device of Sir George Campbell has grown the Bengal Tenancy Bill. One of the results of the Bill, if passed into law, will be this: That a considerable portion of the landed property of Bengal will be taken from the landholders (who are protected by the Permanent Settlement, to some extent, from further taxation), and will be handed over to the tenants—or, if the clause establishing “Free sale” be carried, to the money-lenders and other middlemen—who, of course, derive no rights at all from the Permanent Settlement as against the Government tax-gatherer.

Here, then, is a far more brilliant device for “walking round” the Permanent Settlement than Sir George Campbell’s modest “taxing the coupon.” It grew out of the latter device in the most natural way in the world, as follows:—

Before Sir George Campbell’s time, in 1859, a law had been passed to give tenants “fixity of tenure” after twelve months’ occupation, and otherwise to alter the law of landlord and tenant in Bengal. One result of this law, fully admitted by the Government, had been to make it exceedingly difficult for the landlord to realise his rents from his tenants promptly, so as to enable him to meet the Government demands for revenue. This difficulty became absolutely intolerable when Sir George Campbell added the demands for Roads Cess and Public Works Cess to those for revenue. So Government, in order to obtain its own demands, was constrained to promise the landholders that a law should be passed to enable them promptly to realise their rents.

Such was the Bengal Rent Bill, marvellous to relate, and such its simple avowed object, that was prepared and introduced into the Bengal Council in the winter of 1877-78! Delayed in passing, and subsequently transferred to the Viceroy’s own Legislative Council, it has developed into the Bengal Tenancy Bill; and it has fallen into the hands of legislative workmen of such amazing creative genius that, from being simply a Bill to facilitate the recovery of rents, it now proposes, among other little changes, to abolish freedom of contract between landlord and tenant; to substitute costly and tedious litigation for the existing means of recovering rents; to put the rate of rent largely at the discretion of the officers of Government; to encourage the multiplication of vast numbers of taxable middle-men at the expense alike of landlord and tenant, thereby immensely increasing the number of unproductive consumers of the produce of the land; and to put the actual cultivator at the mercy of this new class of inferior landlords (or rather, speculating land-grabbing money-lenders), thereby encouraging rack-renting of the most terrible character. And a so-called “supplementary” Bill has been introduced into the Bengal Council, the “Village Accountants Bill,” which proposes to cover the whole country, at the cost of the unfortunate landholders, with swarms of exactly that kind of inferior officials (under the name of Village Accountants) who are dreaded by the agriculturists as land-sharks or locusts; and it also proposes to institute an inquisitorial and harassing survey on a vast scale and at stupendous expense, nominally for the purpose of obtaining a complete “record of rights,” but with the undoubted result of harassing and impoverishing every landholder, and filling the land with extortion and misery.

The theory of the proposed legislation is, that the agricultural community of Bengal will conduct their business better if they are compelled to have recourse to the Courts and the officers of Government at every turn. Every agricultural contract will practically have to be revised and approved by the officials; and neither landholders nor tenants will henceforward be allowed to call their lives their own, except by official sanction and with the leave of the Court. But this means litigation without end, and, we fear, extortion without end too; it means injury and impoverishment to the landlords, and utter ruin to the tenants. It may, perhaps, result in freeing some of the landed property of Bengal from the restrictions against further taxation, provided by the Permanent Settlement; for the Tenancy Bill admittedly makes over, to persons not protected by the Permanent Settlement, a very considerable portion of the property now possessed by the landholders. But even if this were a desirable and honest policy—and is it?—the general ruin in which it threatens to involve all classes, save only the lawyers and the money-lenders and the tax-gatherers, is a sufficient justification for the detestation with which it is regarded by the whole of the agricultural community of Bengal.

THE REV. E. E. JENKINS, late president of the Wesleyan Methodist Society, is on a visit to Calcutta.

THE Maharajah of Jeypore is expected to visit Calcutta to pay his respects to the Viceroy during the current week.

THE accounts of the European and Anglo-Indian Defence Association have just been made up, and the annual general meeting will shortly be held.

IT is stated that the Select Committee on the Bengal Tenancy Bill will have its report ready by the middle of February. A fortnight later it will be laid before the Council.

MRS. ILBERT, the wife of the Law Member of Council, is about to give a ladies' party in Calcutta, to which Native and European ladies are to be invited.

SIR ROBERT SANDEMAN, accompanied by Mr. H. S. Barnes, has arrived in Calcutta, where he is the guest of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

MR. JUSTICE McDONELL, V.C., of the Calcutta High Court, will probably take six months' leave to England during the ensuing hot weather.

IT has just been discovered that a native contractor has by systematically swindling robbed the Bengal Public Works Department of Rs.2,00,000.

HIS HIGHNESS THE MAHARAJAH BAHADOOR OF DURBHUNGAH has subscribed Rs.2,000 to the Burdwan Famine Relief Fund. The Maharajahs of Durbhungha have also given half that sum to the same deserving object.

IT is understood that the appointment just made of an officiating successor to Mr. Elliot, Chief Commissioner of Assam, does not carry with it any preferential claim to the substantive post when it becomes vacant by Mr. Elliot's retirement.

THE Civilians of Bengal are about to take immediate steps to bring their grievances in the way of slow and retarded promotion before the Secretary of State, with a view to secure the application of remedial measures similar to those applied elsewhere.

A CALCUTTA paper learns that their Excellencies the Viceroy and Countess of Dufferin have consented to be patron and patroness of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, and have notified their intention of being present at the Society's Annual Flower Show, which is to be held on the 6th February at the garden at Alipore.

THE LIEUTENANT-GENERAL has sanctioned the expenditure by the Port Commissioners of Rs.43,518 for the construction of two screwpile jetties at the spurs which have been provided for the accommodation of the Howrah and Ganges Mills.

THEIR Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, accompanied by their suite, left Calcutta on Tuesday Jan. 27th, on their return to Mirat. Sir John Macneill, V.C., arrived in India by the last mail. The resignation of the Mirat command by the Duke of Connaught, from the 1st April next, has been formally accepted by the Government of India.

WHEN the Government break up in March the Public Works Minister will make a short tour in Central India to inspect the newly-opened Itarsi-Bhopal Railway, and will also visit the works of the Kutni-Umaria coal-field.

A NEWS letter from Cabul states that the Ameer is endeavouring to prevent the despatch of letters to and from India, except through the regular post. One man has been fined, it is said, Rs.500 for taking a letter to Cabul; and it has been publicly notified that any unauthorised person who is found carrying letters in future will be put to death. Letters must not be sent by private runners.

THE Government of India have just published a very sensible and desirable order, to the effect that, on active service out of India, the use of postage service stamps on official covers is abolished. No charges will henceforth be made for official articles posted during active service, when delivered from field post-offices. The army would like to see some modification of the present troublesome and ridiculous system of service stamps applied to India—C. and M. Gazette.

THE RAWALPINDI INQUIRY.—Letters from Rawalpindi state that the court, which has now practically finished its labours, has evidently gone most thoroughly into the matter in which General Marter and Major Rodgers are concerned, sitting every day till nearly seven in the evening. Judging from what is said in well-informed circles, General Marter will be none the worse for the inquiry, the charges made not being such as would injure his character or lead to further proceedings—at least, against him. Whether anyone else will suffer, remains to be seen. It is said that the episode in which a horse and a subaltern figured—the only part of the story that was doubtful—turns out to be of no consequence. However, this is only hearsay, though it may after all prove pretty correct.—Ibid.

MOFUSSIL NOTES.

(From the Indian Planters' Gazette).

IN Bhagulpore the weather has been very warm for the past week. Mr. Robinson, the District Engineer, is out on his tour in the North of the District. The October plant in these parts is a very fair one this season.

THERE seems to be no limit to the open-handed liberality of Mr. Dear, who, in addition to the fine hospital he lately erected at Monghyr, is now erecting, on a site facing the bazaar, a handsome clock tower. Monghyr is fortunate in being Mr. Dear's habitat.

MR. GWATKIN WILLIAMS shortly takes over the management of the Maharaja of Durbhunga's Purneah estates, and will in all probability succeed Colonel Money when the latter's term of office expires. The Maharaja is to be congratulated on having secured the services of such a specialist in zemindari management.

THE Behar Light Horse will be glad to hear that their late Adjutant, Major Vousden, though absent in person was present in spirit during the late Mozufferpore Meet. He fully intended turning up, but the inspection of his own Regiment prevented him from doing so. In a letter to the Editor he very often wishes himself back in Behar with "his boys," hopes they had a good time of it, and sends them his love.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS AND MRS. GRANT DUFF were to proceed to Pondicherry on the 8th inst. in the May Erere.

A MADRAS paper hears that preparations upon quite a regal scale are being organised for the reception and entertainment during his stay in Pondicherry of Mr. Grant Duff, Governor of Madras. Two balls, as many dinners, a concert, boat races, fireworks on land and on water, and other festivities go to make up the programme.

MADRAS SCHOOL OF ARTS.—A very fine stained glass window, executed by Lieutenant Tufnell, the officiating superintendent of the school, representing the Crucifixion, has just been completed for the Anglican Church at Arcot. At the same meeting a memorandum will be considered from Messrs. Crawford and Buckland expressing the opinion that the Municipality is legally incompetent to undertake the charge of primary education in Bombay.

HIS HIGHNESS THE NIZAM presided at the distribution of prizes to the scholars attending the Madrasa-i-Aliza at Hyderabad on the 20th ult. At the conclusion of the distribution Nawab Salar Jung addressed the assembly on behalf of the Nizam. He said that having himself realised the immense benefits of education as a pupil of the institution, he was prepared at all times to co-operate with those who made it their duty to train the youthful mind, and give a direction to their capacities from which they might not swerve in after life.

DEATH OF MR. CURSETJEE NUSSEERWANJEE CAMA.—We regret to announce the death on Jan. 24 of Mr. Cursetjee Nusserwanjee Cama, for long a leading member of the Parsee community, who, by his deeds of charity and benevolence, by his active exertions for the promotion of moral and social reforms, and by his cordial support of numerous institutions having for their object anything that tended to the welfare of his countrymen, had succeeded in winning the love and respect of all classes. As a merchant he had won and lost a splendid fortune; and if in the latter days of his life circumstances did not permit him to give his material support to many useful institutions he never failed to take a kindly interest in them, and his sensible counsels were ever held in great esteem.

THE report that it had been resolved to re-establish the British Residency at Mandalay has been contradicted.

COLONEL OLCOTT, having received information by telegram of the sudden illness of Madame Blavatsky, left Rangoon for Madras on the 28th ult., in the steamer Oriental.

THERE has been quite a panic in commercial circles at Rangoon. Failures of native traders in the bazaar are occurring daily, and the present stagnation is inducing petty dealers to abscond.

MAULMAIN Municipality v. W. J. Addis came before the Special Court at Rangoon on the 22nd ult. Their Honors held that the hiring of respondent was for an indefinite term, but that the Judge of the Lower Court was wrong in finding that it was therefore a yearly hiring. The Siamese Government and its officials gave him ready assistance during his late visit, and showed every disposition to fall in with the scheme.

SOME of the Maulmain capitalists are considering the project of constructing a tramway line from Dinewoongin to Mopoon. In that "city of long distances" we should think tramways would pay well, especially as the people seem very much dissatisfied with the class of ticca-garries available for hire.—Rangoon Gazette.

THE amount expended by the eight municipalities in British Burma in public instruction during the year 1883-4 was Rs. 1,69,000, as compared with Rs. 1,35,000 in the previous year; whilst there was an increase in the local educational receipts of from Rs. 18,218 to Rs. 29,443. The increase in expenditure, which was about 77.5 per cent. of the total education receipts shows evidence of the interest taken by the local bodies in education and the better administration of the funds at their disposal; but still there seems to be no reason why the entire funds should not be expended, and the local government has strongly urged this fact upon the attention of the different committees.

DURING the four days that have elapsed since the date of our last summary the Legislative Council has met, the Governor coming down from Kandy for the special purpose. On this occasion Mr. Downall asked what steps Government took previous to the 1st of January to provide against the great inconvenience that occurred to the public consequent on the introduction of the new Postal rates. The Acting Colonial Secretary entered into explanations, the object of which was to show that everything had been done that could have been done to keep the public supplied with new postage stamps previous to the close of last year, and that, whatever delays took place, had not arisen from any shortcomings in the office of the Commissioner of Stamps or the various kachcheries, but must have been caused by the negligence of the outstation stamp vendors—a reply which to the outside world is regarded as far from satisfactory. The Acting Colonial Secretary laid on the table the usual financial statements relating to the colony. The ordinance providing for the preservation of copies of printed books was read a third time and passed. The Acting Colonial Secretary next moved the second reading of the Ordinance to enable the Bishop, Clergy, and Laity of the Church of England in Ceylon to provide for the regulation of the affairs of the said church, which, having been seconded by Mr. Bosanquet, was read and passed through committee of the whole Council. The Ordinance to empower the governor and Executive Council to disestablish general cemeteries, and to add to, cancel, alter, or amend the limits of any established general cemetery was then read a second time, after which the Council went into committee upon it, and the third reading was ordered to be taken at the next sitting, on the 27th instant. The Ordinance to raise a loan of £60,000 sterling for the completion of the Colombo Harbour Works, and the Ordinance to raise £40,000 sterling for the completion of the Colombo Waterworks, were read a second time. Mr. Downall moved the second reading of the Ordinance to ensure the supervision and safe transit of goods, produce, and merchandise from one part of this island to another, which was read in committee of the whole Council, and after one or two slight alterations passed and ordered to be read a third time at the next sitting. The Council was then adjourned to Tuesday, the 27th instant, which, with one other sitting, will close the legislative session of 1884-5.—Times.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

 INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL

OF THE INDIAN CONSTITUTIONAL ASSOCIATION AND THE LONDON COMMITTEE FORMED TO OPPOSE THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL, HELD AT LIMMER'S HOTEL, CONDUIT STREET, W., ON FEB. 13th, 1885.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1885.

THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

A meeting of delegates from the Indian Constitutional Association and the London Committee, formed to oppose the Bengal Tenancy Bill, was held on Friday, February 13th, 1885, at Limmer's Hotel, Conduit-street, Regent-street. Mr. C. T. Buckland presided, and the attendance included Mr. Roper Lethbridge, C.I.E., Mr. T. E. Ravenshaw, B.C.S. (late member of the Board of Revenue), Mr. W. Cornell, B.C.S. (late judge of Midnapore), Mr. J. D. Ward, B.C.S. (late judge of Dacca), Mr. J. Dacosta (late of Calcutta), Mr. C. Chapman, Brigade-Surgeon J. Berry White (late Civil Surgeon, Assam, and chairman of the Jokai Tea Company), Surgeon-General Partridge (late of the Bengal Medical Service), Colonel Jemmett-Brown (late of the Indian Army), Mr. Collingridge (Bengal Zemindar), Major-General Couchman (late Royal (Bengal) Artillery), Mr. W. H. Brereton, Mr. Muspratt, B.C.S. (late judge of Sylhet), Mr. C. W. Arathoon (late of Lucknow), and others.

The Chairman, in opening the proceedings, said:—Gentlemen, with your permission, I will make a few remarks as to the object of calling this meeting, and also as to the prospects of our future opposition to the Bengal Tenancy Bill. One of the principal objects of this meeting is to hold a conference between the London Committee formed to oppose the measure, and delegates from the Indian Constitutional Association of Calcutta (of which Mr. Lethbridge is the chief representative in England), with the view of our adopting a joint memorial to the Secretary of State in Council, praying his lordship to move the Government of India to withdraw the Bill. And further, we wish to make arrangements for a conference with those members of the Liberty and Property Defence League who gave us such invaluable assistance last year in trying to oppose the introduction of the evil principles of Irish land legislation into legislation for our Indian Empire, and with other noblemen and gentlemen interested in this important question. Now we come back to the nature of the progress which has already been made. At the end of last year we had in our possession the Bill as amended by the Select Committee. The Bill was knocked about a good deal, and the chief result was to give a good deal of trouble to all concerned with it. The Government of India had introduced a number of novel points of great importance in the Bill, and invited the expression of opinions from the Government of Bengal and its local officers, and from the general public concerning the measure as thus altered.

Thus the whole question was opened out de novo. Well, the result was the production of a huge blue-book about four inches thick, and containing the most soporific reading that can possibly be imagined. A member of the Indian Council told me it was mostly rubbish—(laughter). There is a great deal, however, of interest in it for our present purpose. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and his secretary, Mr. Macdonnell, an acute Irishman, opposed the Bill as it then stood. They had changed their opinion on some nineteen or twenty points which they now considered essential to the value of the Bill. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has changed his mind three times in the course of about eighteen months or rather less; but independently of him, the measure came before the Chief Justice and the Judges of the High Court, and it is not necessary for me to report how stoutly Sir Richard Garth opposed the Bill. He opposed the measure, root and branch. It was passed on to Mr. Justice Field, Judge of the High Court, who is admitted, I believe, to be most competent to form an opinion upon land legislation. He has produced a minute of 157 sections, clauses, or paragraphs, and it is the most interesting reading possible. He condemns the Bill, which he calls, I think "Mr. Ilbert's second abortive measure." He shows that Mr. Ilbert in drafting or redrafting the measure must have adopted the Irish Land Act for his basis; and had ignorantly, being utterly inexperienced in Indian matters, taken definitions from the Irish Land Act, without paying the slightest regard to the peculiar and exceptional state of affairs as applying to Bengal. He shows most conclusively that it will be productive of infinite litigation and ruin to the landed classes. When we have two such high authorities as Sir Richard Garth and Mr. Justice Field condemning the Bill in toto—such being the state of complicated and diverse opinion—the Bill comes before the Legislative Council in the present session, and a new select committee is appointed. Very good! Now, unfortunately, we come to the very point of the case. We are only imperfectly acquainted with what has happened, or is happening, in the Select Committee; nor can those who are most nearly interested in the Bill be much wiser than we are. The amendments made in Select Committee will perhaps be explained at the meeting of the Viceroy's Council this very day; but how long will it be before any knowledge of these alterations, or of the real nature of the Bill as now altered, can come to the zemindars and the ryots of Bengal—the persons whose fortunes are being thus cavalierly treated by the Government? The Select Committee sits with closed doors, and there is no report—no official report—taken of their proceedings. They are not published. This being the state of the matter, we, and those in India who are most deeply affected by the Bill, are somewhat in the position of the coroner's jury who went to hold an inquest after the body had disappeared; they were unable to find it—(laughter). But we do know that the Bill has been mutilated and changed from what it was. We have had certain telegrams published, perhaps with the view of influencing public opinion. One of these telegrams says that all the things to which the zemindars and ryots object have been removed from the Bill!—(Mr. Lethbridge: That is Reuter's telegram.)—Yes; and Reuter's telegram is obviously most improbable. Another telegram tells us that the Bill has been restored to the condition in which it stood when it came from the hands of the Select Committee last year. This is simply ridiculous, in my opinion, because it is known that the zemindars and ryots all over Bengal and Behar protested against the Bill as it then stood. We do not know what amendments have been or may be made in this Bill; but our object is to protest against the hasty passing of a measure which cannot be known for a long time yet in its entirety—which cannot be known to the zemindars and others who are most seriously affected by it. The amendments to the Bill may be most important; but if they are made the parties interested ought to have an opportunity of seeing and judging how one fits into another. A great many things have to be considered in connection with a Bill of 230 odd sections, therefore it is of the most serious importance that the passing of the Bill should be deferred until its nature has been made known to all classes interested. I will now ask Mr. Lethbridge, as the representative of the Constitutional Association of Calcutta, to move the first of the resolutions on the agenda paper.

Mr. Lethbridge said: It had been hoped that the first resolution to be brought before this meeting this afternoon would have been moved by our old friend and most experienced and esteemed member, Sir George Yule, I am sorry to say that he writes me that ill-health will prevent his coming here to-day; and it devolves upon me to move the resolution in his place. It runs thus:—"That this meeting desires to protest against the precipitate passing of the Revised Bengal Tenancy Bill, now before the Legislative Council of India, before the whole Bill (with the amendments) has been duly published in the official Gazettes of the country, according to established rules precedent, for the information of the zemindars and ryots whom it concerns." First of all I wish to direct your attention to the precipitate nature of the course which we understand is being adopted in India; and upon that point I would ask leave to refer you to a recent speech of Lord Ripon, the late Viceroy of India, which is reported in the Times of last Wednesday. In referring to this speech and other speeches which have recently been made by Lord Ripon I feel bound to say that, in my opinion, these speeches are greatly to be deplored. They seem to me to be distinctly devised with no other object than that of coercing Lord Dufferin; to put such extreme pressure upon him that he will feel himself bound to listen to ignorant clamour in England and pass the Bill before he has mastered its contents. Lord Ripon, in replying last Tuesday to a deputation of gentlemen who had waited upon him, speaking of this Bengal Tenancy Bill, said:—"The measure had been under consideration a great number of years before he ever went to India or before he thought of going there; and, having a great many other things to attend to, he did not take up that question at all until it was definitely brought before him by the Bengal Government (Lord Ripon's Government). They did not feel in the least degree the desirability of hurrying forward the progress of that measure." Those are Lord Ripon's words last Tuesday. That Bill, or something supposed to be like it, had been discussed for many years; and yet, during the four and a half years that he had been Viceroy of India, he did not feel "in the least degree" called upon to hurry forward the progress of the measure; and this, notwithstanding the fact that "the proposals of the Bengal Government," on whom he would lay the blame for the measure, had long been before him! I should like to note, in passing, that I do not think we shall agree with his lordship where he tells us that "the Bill" had been under consideration for many years; for as a fact we know that the Bill has not been under consideration for more than six months in succession in any one settled form. We know that the Bill itself as it now stands is an absolutely different Bill from that of six months ago, and there is no doubt whatever that the general principles of the Bill, of which Lord Ripon now speaks, were never even thought of when the measure was originally introduced into the Bengal Council in 1877-78. The original Bill was a measure introduced in accordance with the pledges of Sir George Campbell and Sir Richard Temple to enable the zemindars the more readily to recover their rents in order to meet the revenue demands of Government. It had become difficult for the zemindars to recover their rents, and certain cesses, for which Sir George Campbell had made them liable, from their tenants; and as the zemindars were liable to be sold up under the sunset law unless they paid their revenue-demands to the very moment, it was universally admitted that the Government should give them some facilities to enable them to pay their rents and to meet the Government demands. It is, therefore, impossible for us to agree with Lord Ripon when he says the Bill had been under consideration for many years. The Bill has been altered from year to year and month to month. But, however this may be, Lord Ripon now leaves the measure in the hands of the Legislative Council and of the present Viceroy for them to do what they like with it. And I entirely fail to see by what right Lord Ripon calls upon his successor in the exceedingly peremptory way in which he called upon him last Tuesday to pass the Bill immediately at the point of the British Radical bayonet. That is an outrage upon the privileges of the present Viceroy of India. I hope you will show that you are not prepared to see this Bill passed in such an indecent and precipitate manner. Lord Ripon says it took four and a-half years on his part to try to pass a Bill, and, after all, he did not pass it; and yet Lord Dufferin, who has not been in India three months, is called upon to pass the measure off the reel in order to gratify Lord Ripon's Radical friends here. With regard to this procedure being precipitate, what is the fact with respect to our own knowledge? We in England actually do not know, except by telegraphic surmises, what the Bill is; and we know that it cannot, as yet, have been placed, in any fair and reasonable manner, within the cognisance of those chiefly concerned—the zemindars and ryots of Bengal. They cannot at the present moment have any idea of what is to be passed in such a manner. I say to pass a Bill under such circumstances is an outrage against which we ought to protest with all our might. I ask you, therefore, to accept this resolution, which protests against the precipitate passing of the Bill. When Lord Ripon speaks of the "principles of the Bill," which he said last Tuesday are "maintained;" when he tells us that the "principles of the measure are secured" and yet "material alterations have been and still may be made," I should like to know what those principles are. He says nothing about what the principles are. He gives no information tending to enlighten the people of England and affords no justification for his appeal to Lord Dufferin to rush the Bill into law. He says no alterations of principles have been made. What principles? If we may judge of them from Mr. Ilbert's Statement of Objects and Reasons, prefixed to the Bill when first introduced by Lord Ripon's Government, the main principle of the Bill seems to be one of almost unmitigated spoliation—based on the idea that the landholders of Bengal have more property than is good for them, and that the State therefore ought to distribute a good slice of it among the lawyers and the money-lenders of the country. Is this one of the principles which Lord Ripon boasts remain unaltered? We have lately had some powerful advocacy of somewhat similar "principles" to be applied to the landed property of this country; and certainly the passing of the Bengal Tenancy Bill would afford an admirable precedent, more recent and even more forcible than that of the Irish Land Acts, for the adoption in England of the "principles" enunciated in Mr. Chamberlain's celebrated speech the other day at Birmingham. Mr. Chamberlain says that landed property must be called upon to pay a "ransom" for the privilege of its continued existence. That is clearly in accordance with Mr. Ilbert's principles. It is not, however, I am glad to say, a principle of any recognised party in England at present. I happen to be a Conservative myself, and I can certainly say it is not a principle of the Conservative party. But I confidently ask those Liberals who read or heard the speeches of Mr. Shaw-Lefevre at the Industrial Remuneration Conference, a fortnight ago, or of Mr. Goschen last week at Edinburgh, to say whether these speeches are not sufficient to show the scorn with which the principles that characterise this Bill are regarded by leading representative Liberals. I think I need say no more to ask you to pass this resolution. I say that if this Bill be passed so precipitately, and in such clear defiance of justice and equity, it will not be passed in accord with the recognised and honourable views of any party in English politics—(cheers).

Mr. Cornell, B.C.S., said: I need only make a few remarks in seconding this resolution. We are all familiar in this country with parliamentary legislation, which is easily understood, but the legislative machine in India is a somewhat more complicated one. The Legislative Council consists of a number of selected officials and non-officials. It is not for me to speak of that august body save in terms of great respect; but in consequence of direct and indirect influence which the Government may exercise in certain cases, the action of the Council may assume the character of a benevolent despotism, hardly at all influenced by public opinion. It receives memorials, and the Press, both in England and India, largely comment upon its proceedings when they are published in English; and one of the most arduous as well as most delicate duties of a select committee is to take notice of these expressions of opinion. Whatever the difficulties may be it is certainly most desirable that this should be done, and when it is not done it appears that the Legislative Council loses its quasi legislative character and becomes merely the registering machine of a despotism. I do not say it is not their duty at times to lead public opinion, and even go in advance of it; but if it is found that all sections of public opinion dissent from a proposed measure I think the Government ought to pause and consider its course before it passes such a measure into law. I consider that the expression of opinion on this Bill by the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Field, and the other officials who are entitled to be heard, has far greater weight—and ought to have far greater weight—than the opinions expressed by a few English Radicals. So far as we know public opinion on the subject it is entirely opposed to the principals of this Bill. So far as we can gather from Lord Ripon's speeches, the principles must be the same as those which have been criticised adversely at other stages of the Bill. We can do little but protest; but we should protest to the last, and in loud and unmistakable terms—(cheers).

Mr. T. D. Ward, B.C.S., in supporting the resolution, said: I must first of all remark upon what I regard as the ludicrous aspect of this question in that the very persons who are immediately concerned disapprove of the proposed legislation in their behalf. It was like pilling a healthy man to make him better. After waiting for this Bill for so many years, it is now sought to rush it at Lord Dufferin, who is told to pass it forthwith. It has been altered so many times that its own mother would not know it. And now at last everybody seems ashamed of it, and everybody says it is somebody else's child—(cheers).

The resolution was then adopted unanimously.

Mr. Ravenshaw, B.C.S., moved: "That a humble memorial to the Secretary of State for India be adopted by this meeting, and forwarded to him for his consideration." He said: This Bill is most distasteful to every one who is entitled from practical experience to have an opinion in the matter; and I hope it may never be allowed to become law.

Mr. Dacosta, in seconding the motion, said: We must not forget the illusory manner in which Lord Hartington contended for maintaining the twelve years occupancy, whilst his wishes were evaded by the officials in charge of this Bill. The rule was retained, but a sub-section was added, which provided that the law presumed that every ryot had complied with the rule until the contrary was proved—a task which the Chief Justice has shown to be practically impossible in a great majority of cases. The newly-amended Bill has not yet been published, and we cannot, therefore, discuss its clauses; but for the purposes of our memorial, I believe the exposure, according to the broad lines of the Bill, which our information enables us to make, may suffice. I think that for the information of the British public a statement of the broad lines of the Bill, as we conceive them, will suffice to convey an intelligible notion of the objects of the measure. The avowed object of the Bill was to assist the zemindar in recovering his rent, and to secure the ryot in the possession of his farm. But instead of this, it provided no means to enable the zemindar to recover his rent, and confiscated his proprietary rights, making them over to a new class whom the Bill would create and invest with power to rack rent their tenants. Of course the sub-committee will be called upon to draft the memorial, and they must choose their own arguments and grounds.

Mr. C. Chapman, in supporting the resolution, said: I think the principles, which we have reason to fear are embodied in the Bengal Tenancy Bill, are principles which should be resisted to the utmost; and the question of a memorial to the Secretary of State is, of course, merely one of procedure. I should like to say a few words as to the mode in which we ought to proceed to make the memorial effective. It always strikes me that we are unable to get a great many gentlemen who are sincerely interested in this question to come forward and attend meetings of this kind because they have some official connection with the Liberal Party or the Indian Government; otherwise many of them would be the first to give us the advantage of their names and influence. Therefore, it is for us to take advantage of speeches like those of Mr. Goschen and Mr. Shaw-Lefevre, and try, if possible, to associate ourselves with such men as Mr. Goschen in presenting this memorial to the Secretary of State. I would make this an electioneering matter. It is perfectly clear that Lord Dufferin, from the time he has been in Calcutta, has not personally had time to devote to this Bill the attention which it deserves. I am afraid that dust is being thrown into the eyes of those who are most interested in this matter.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

Brigade-Surgeon J. Berry White next proposed: "That a sub-committee, consisting of Mr. Buckland, Mr. Dacosta, Mr. Chapman, and Mr. Roper Lethbridge be appointed to make arrangements for a conference on the Bill with the members of the Liberty and Property Defence League, who have shown a deep interest in the welfare of the agricultural community of Bengal, and with such members of both Houses of Parliament and others who agree with us in objecting to the introduction into India of land laws framed on the lines of recent Irish legislation." He said: I think Mr. Ravenshaw wanted to know what the principles were upon which this Bill was based. As an Irishman, who has suffered somewhat by Irish legislation, I may tell him that the principles in question are no doubt those of undiluted confiscation—(laughter). We have all noticed how the talukdars of the neighbouring province of Oudh had taken alarm at the confiscatory proposals of the Bill. So for himself, as one intimately connected with the interests of the province that adjoins Bengal on the other side, Assam, he could say that the people of Assam viewed this Bill with the deepest distrust.

Surgeon-General Partridge, in seconding the resolution, said: In seconding this motion I would urge the point which has been insisted upon by a preceding speaker as to the advantage we should gain by enlisting on our side the expression of opinion by important members of political parties at home. We seem to me to be dealing with a Government who are not desirous of legislating purely from a sense of justice. They are not carrying into law principles which shall be for the benefit of the country to which they are to be applied, but baseless theories that win ephemeral applause, and, therefore, we must endeavour to bring such pressure to bear on them as will show them that public approval cannot be obtained by such selfish devices.

The resolution having been adopted, a vote of thanks to the chairman, moved by Mr. Lethbridge, terminated the meeting.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

Press of other matters prevented us from earlier noticing a thoughtful and statesmanlike article which appeared in the Indian Daily News of the 5th instant on the Bengal Tenancy. It exposes in a masterly style the utter hollowness of the professions which the authors and supporters of the Bill so industriously and ostentatiously put forth about their anxiety for the good of the ryot. We make no hesitation, therefore, to copy here at some length some of the more important passages of the article. They are well worth careful study. Adverting to the raison d'être of the Bill it says:—"To-day in the Bengal Tenancy Bill we have Lord Dufferin referring the measure more directly to Home authority than to the necessities and requirements of this country. It is time, before some terrible mischief is done, that the avowed and cardinal principle of the Indian Administration shall be the strict satisfaction of the requirements of India only; and it is time that a strenuous protest be made against the fatal blunder of experimentalising India in the direction of the most advanced theories of London. India is not a clear field where any man can plough, simply because the fortune of party has given him the seat in the Cabinet which belongs to the representation of India. That word, representation, involves the whole secret of Indian difficulties and Indian misfortunes. If India is to be governed by men who are selected for office in the Cabinet simply because of party movements and party needs, sooner or later a crash must come, because the machine will be worked at a heavier pressure than it can bear, or will be put to work for which it was never intended. The Bengal Tenancy Bill is, we take it, one of the most gigantic mistakes any governing people ever committed towards a subject race. If we are to say that the object of a Bill, or of a law, is anything like what it proposes to be, what it aims at, or what it tries to effect, then this Tenancy Bill is a scheme so un-Indian, so foreign to the circumstances of the Lower Provinces, so obstinately external to the country and the people, as to amount to little short of an outrage. It is a measure which is an endeavour to deal with a supposititious state of things, a nebulous grievance invented for the purpose of supplying an excuse for legislation. The scheme of the Bill has varied according to the knowledge and school of the Lieutenant-Governor in power, and according to the theories of the party holding the reins of authority in London. There has been no steady adjustment of a legal means to an Indian need. The need has varied with the men who have had to describe it, and the remedy has varied with the men who have been intrusted with its application." It is the "nebulous grievance" so persistently set forth that we have hitherto so often and so earnestly, but, alas! so ineffectually protested against in these columns. Is there any hope that the light of truth will at all dawn on the authorities that be?

The effect of the Bill is thus portrayed: "The Bill will destroy the zemindar, and will cause the ryot to experience the pangs of the man who has been deluded by the Dead Sea apples of a thoughtless, a reckless, and a foreign school of political economy. To look only to the condition of the ryot—it will be evident at once that his discontent must become more fierce, more rabid, more active. A man has only to think that he has lost under the law some special benefit to be a bad citizen for the remainder of his life, because a bad and dissatisfied man in every subsequent condition in which he may find himself. At present the ryot, like the peasant all over the world, lives from hand to mouth. He goes to the village money-lender for the means of maintaining his cultivation, and he pays a high interest because the security he has to offer is uncertain, dependent upon the health of himself and family, upon his good luck with his cattle, and upon the seasons. What he now wants is a fixed rate of interest upon the sums he borrows, some means for correctly keeping the accounts between himself and his creditor, security against an enhancement of his rent, and, above all, security against a constant litigation for the same fields. All that he requires to fulfil his duties to his landlord is a compulsory regularity and certainty in the payment of the instalments of his rent. All this might have been brought about by a carefully revised, yet not very extensive, addition to the existing rent law. Compare these requirements of the people with the formidable, elaborate, involved, and revolutionary machinery which, like the German's camel, has been evolved from the depths of the consciousness of men who set at defiance, in their self-sufficient wisdom, the fact that at the very threshold of the question they are dealing in Behar with men and conditions of life as different from men and life in Bengal as Germany differs from Italy, or Hungary from Servia. The ryot, as we have said, now trades as a borrower on the security of his crop. He does this as a matter of course, and only pledges the ornaments of his womenkind when his crops fail him. Give the ryot a marketable and alienable interest in his holding, and you revolutionise his position towards his habitual creditor. The money-lender then would not only for his own safety and security, but as a matter of duty to his debtor, decline to regard the crops in any way but as collateral security. By demanding the security of the ryot's interest in land he would avail himself of the best security available to the man, and would say that the ryot must strive to pay off a debt, because otherwise his stake in the field would be sacrificed. The simple fact that the ordinary means of payment and the chance of payment would be the same as now, would not form an argument which the mahajan would listen to; he would be a fool in his own estimation if he gave up the solid security of land for the precarious security of the crop thereon. That this result should escape the framers of the Bill is nothing less than a marvel. It is a result as inevitable as the diurnal succession of night and day."

How the money-lender will be influenced by the law is thus set forth: "Human nature must greatly change if the money-lender did not soon snatch the morsel out of the ryot's mouth, and if the ryot did not find himself in a worse position than before, because, under the Act, he would lose both land and crops, where he now only loses crops. Such a man would not be contented, would not be submissive, would not be a good subject, would not be persuadable, or amenable to anything but the grinding sense of an ever-present wrong. Having lost more through the law, he would be more bitter against the law-makers; having been made to hope, he would never accept content under his losses, or ever blame his own providence, or the unkindness of the seasons. The money-lender would become his natural enemy, and those, too, would be his enemies whose laws gave the money-lender the power and the right to grind the people under the heel of a short-sighted self-interest. The Bengal Tenancy Bill, therefore, is a wrong to the ryot, and a fruitful sowing of agrarian disorders." It goes on: "We take it that the Bengal Tenancy Bill is a lamentable proof that Englishmen have nearly lost the art of sympathising with subject-races, and that the administration has decided upon obtaining a divorce from the people, to whom it was wedded by nearly a century of conquest and effort for India's good. Take one fact:—Who knows what a tenure is? Who can give a definition of the word tenure which shall be acceptable, reasonable, and generally applicable? In all the wondrous mass of literature about this Tenancy Bill, where is the report or the essay on tenures? Who has attempted to describe the simple fact that the tenures of India represent certain conditions in the life of the people? Who has accounted for the difference between Sylhet and Chittagong, between Chittagong and Jessore, between Jessore and Midnapore or Beerbhoom, between Burdwan and Malda, and between Bengal generally and Behar generally? Surely, it is an absurdity, and a mischief besides, to go on and persist in forcing an external, an uncongenial, and a foreign legislation upon the people as a something needed by tenure-holders, when you have no idea what the tenures are, how far they represent the condition of the people, nor how far they suit the habits and the needs of the people.

We must even at some risk of taxing our reader's patience make another quotation. It contains the advice with which the article concludes. "Brush away the clouds of insularity and English self-sufficiency, which are responsible for the threatened storm of agrarian revolution, and begin where a beginning ought to be made; see where local interests differ, and in what direction of popular progress they point; seek to give relief with the minimum of disturbance and the minimum of unsettling men's minds; strive to make the masses content and prosperous in their own way; lay aside the self-righteous ambition of fulfilling the rôle of a province, and be content to admit, and to carry into practice, the truth that there is no higher function of Government, and no nobler duty laid upon those who govern, than to promote growth from within,—to develop strength from amidst the people, and by a wise interpretation of the requirements of the people, and a prudent and gradual satisfaction of the popular needs, to make the prosperity of the people—not the illusive and temporary gift of strangers,—but the permanent and enduring work of the people's own hands." We have so often written on the subject that we do not think it necessary to comment on these extracts, which so eloquently put forth the case before the public.—Hindoo Patriot.

The Home News states that, notwithstanding rumours to the contrary, the programme of the Indian troopships will remain unaltered, ample transport for the troops about to be dispatched to Suakin being obtainable elsewhere.

Miscellaneous.

THE GALLANT, BUT NEGLECTED NEILL.—It is sometimes contended that the municipality cannot undertake certain public improvements, because the necessary funds are not available. There is, however, one duty which the municipal authorities do not fulfil, and which would cost very little. On the Mount-road stands a statue to "a brave, resolute, self-reliant soldier, universally acknowledged as the first who stemmed the torrent of rebellion in Bengal."—Brigadier-General Neill, C.B., or, as he was called, "the Gallant Neill." A few rupees spent on cleaning it and painting the railings would be well laid out, and prevent the further indignation of officers who knew the general, and many who did not know him. Only recently one of the former inquired of one of the latter who had just returned to an up-country cantonment from Madras, how the statue looked. "Well, I'm almost ashamed to tell you," was the reply.—Madras Mail.

REPORT OF THE EXTERNAL TRADE OF BENGAL.—This, the most important publication during the year on Indian trade, has just been received from India. It deals with a multiplicity of figures and returns which could not be summarized in any ordinary amount of space, but the main facts are as follows:—The external trade of Bengal is carried on entirely by the East Indian Railway and connected lines, and it has been found possible, with the aid of the old traffic returns received, to furnish comparative figures of trade during a recent period. The total quantity of the external trade of Bengal, borne by rail, with other provinces during the past year, as compared with the totals of the two previous years, was as follows:—Imports, 10,968,904 maunds, 1881-82; 13,378,768 maunds, 1882-83; and 17,465,642 maunds, 1883-84, showing a progressive increase of almost 30 per cent. on each year. The exports are not quite so favourable, being for each of these periods 13,839,276, 12,505,605, and 13,599,468 maunds respectively. The aggregate quantity of the trade carried both ways showed a considerable increase of more than 20 per cent., and several of the principal articles of export, such as iron, coals, and gunnies, exhibited a marked improvement. All food grains, however, were bad, and large quantities had to be imported to supply the deficiencies of the year. "The importation of food grains," writes the Collector of Mozufferpore, "has greatly increased during the year, owing to the failure of the crops. Since the middle of the year grain has been pouring into all parts of the district from Lower Bengal and from East Tirhoot. The grain was imported by the villagers themselves for their own consumption, and it consisted chiefly of rice. It was brought from Durbungah, Patna, and some other districts of Bengal, and it may be estimated at more than half of the whole imports of Tirhoot. Besides this, makai, wheat, and jowar have been largely imported from Patna, Nawada, Chupra, and Revelgunge." Much of the trade of Bengal is carried on by the rivers and canals, but gradually the railways are absorbing more and more of the traffic.

BELGAUM.—The 21st volume of the Bombay Gazetteer, which describes the district of Belgaum, is now ready. Thanks to the efforts of Mr. J. F. Fleet, the history of Belgaum has now been carried back to the end of the fifth century of our era. Its interest, however, is not very great, even to the archæologist. It was not until towards the close of the thirteenth century that the native rulers experienced the power and persecution of the Mahomedans; and in 1306 the king, or chief, Ramchandra, was carried off to Delhi to pay homage to the Emperor. In 1472 Belgaum, described as then being a fortress of great strength surrounded by a deep ditch, and close to a pass defended by redoubts, was besieged by a large Mussulman army. The place, although valiantly held, was at last carried, and the chief threw himself on the mercy of the victor. Belgaum was afterwards dependent for a time on the kings of Bejapore. One chief, Asad Khan, is described as having been the mainstay of Bejapore's power during the first half of the sixteenth century. His career is related in an interesting manner. Belgaum suffered greatly at the hands of the Mahrattas, and the condition of the country is described by a contemporary writer, the traveller Gemelli Careri. He found that "there was no safety from daring thieves, and the country disturbed by the raids of Mahratta soldiers." On the decline of the Mogul's power Belgaum passed into the possession of the Nizam, but the Mahrattas soon asserted their supremacy. Belgaum was a place of some importance during the wars with Hyder Ali, and after the destruction of the Mysore power an interesting episode may be mentioned in Colonel Arthur Wellesley's march through the country, when the troops were everywhere received as friends. The celebrated siege of Belgaum in 1818 by General Munro is fully described in this volume. It lasted from the 20th of March until the 12th of April, and it affords one of the few occasions of batteries having been served by dragoons. After the fall of the Peishwa Belgaum became British, and only several risings of an insignificant character have marred the peace and hindered the progress of this province during sixty-five years.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1885.

Notes of the Week.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, February 6th; Madras and Allahabad, February 4th; Calcutta, February 3rd; Ceylon, February 3rd; Burma, January 30th.

In our leading columns to-day we direct the attention of our readers to the important meeting on the Bengal Tenancy Bill to be held in Willis's Rooms, King-street, St. James's, to-morrow, Feb. 25, at 2.45 P.M. We learn that, among many other gentlemen of influence who have intimated their willingness to co-operate with this movement, are the following Peers and Members of Parliament:—The Duke of Wellington, the Duke of Beaufort, the Marquis of Ailsa, the Earl Fortescue, the Earl Stanhope, the Earl of Wharnclyffe, the Earl of Limerick, the Earl of Ashburnham, Earl Percy, M.P., Viscount Bury, K.C.M.G., Viscount Sidmouth, Lord Bramwell, Lord Brabourne, Lord Egerton of Tatton, Lord Sherborne, Lord Stanley of Alderley, Lord Walsingham, Lord Oranmore, Lord Ellenborough, Lord Dorchester, Lord Mostyn, Lord Cloncurry, Lord Lamington, the Rt. Hon. James Lowther, M.P., the Rt. Hon. H. C. Raikes, M.P., Sir Herbert Maxwell, M.P., Sir Charles Mills, M.P., Sir Trevor Lawrence, M.P., the Hon. Sidney Herbert, M.P., Colonel the Hon. L. P. Dawnay, M.P., Lord Algernon Percy, M.P., Denzil Onslow, M.P., General Owen Williams, M.P., Mr. Loftus Tottenham, M.P., Mr. Walter Long, M.P., Mr. Farrer Ercroyd, M.P., Mr. T. W. C. Master, M.P., Mr. G. W. Elliot, M.P. Sir Henry Ricketts, K.C.S.I., and Sir George Yule, K.C.S.I., C.B., both formerly members of the Supreme Council of India, and many other gentlemen who have held important official and non-official positions in India will take part in the Conference.

THE Russo-Afghan crisis is still the absorbing subject of interest, not only among Anglo-Indians, but among Englishmen generally, that distracts the attention that would otherwise be concentrated on the Soudan and Egypt. We deal with this topic briefly elsewhere.

BETWEEN the Government and the commercial community of Calcutta there seems to have been some strange misunderstanding in regard to the costly plans for improving that port. After some twenty-five lakhs have already been spent, it seems suddenly to have dawned on every one that Calcutta does not want the new accommodation, and will be ruined by its cost if Government insists on providing it. The interesting query will be, Who is to be hanged for the twenty-five lakhs?

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times very mildly condemns one of the provisions of the Rent Bill, which has the effect of forcing landlord and tenant into Court over a matter in regard to which they are perfectly agreed! As has been pointed by Mr. Justice Field and all the best authorities, one of the most conspicuous results of this Bill, if it becomes law, will be the enormous increase that will have to be made in the judicial establishments of the country—together with the accompanying multiplication of lawyers of all grades, amlas, and hangers-on of Courts in general. And who will pay for all this? Let those persons honestly answer this question who foolishly fancy they are "befriending the ryot" when they advocate the opening of this flood-gate of extortion and chicanery.

UNDOUBTEDLY the landlords will suffer, too, as well as the tenants. But most of the hardest suffering will fall on the poorest classes. As Mr. Collector Dalton well pointed out, under the Bill an honest landlord will have little chance—and none at all if he is poor as well as honest; the unscrupulous will fare well, but he who is both rich and unscrupulous will be absolutely master of the situation.

THE references of the Native Press to the Russian advance, that are quoted by the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, are exceedingly interesting, as showing the strong feeling on the subject that is current throughout India.

It is suggested that the Government of India would do a sensible thing by handing over the independent Belooch tribes, now under the control of the Deputy Commissioner of Dehra Ghazi Khan, an office of the Punjab Government, to the jurisdiction of the Belooch Political Agency at Khelat, so as to consolidate the whole of the Belooch tribes under one authority.

HIS Excellency the Viceroy has asked M. Clement Thomas, the Chef de Service of Chandernagore, to accept a copy of His Excellency's published political speeches, and also a copy of the Journal of a Holiday in High Latitudes, in recognition of the courtesy and kindness recently shown to himself, the Countess of Dufferin, and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, on the occasion of their visit to Chandernagore.

THE Indian Statesman says:—

A fact that struck us very forcibly before we said one word about the Tenancy Bill was this—that while we had been receiving for a whole year complaints of all kinds from every part of the provinces of the people's grievances—we never received a single word of complaint about the zemindar's supposed oppressions of his tenantry. We waited a whole year to see how matters stood, and not once throughout that time did we receive a single line about rack-rent, evictions, or enhancement of rent. We are wrong. We did receive one complaint, and that one came from Sir Rivers Thompson's Secretariat. We noticed it instantly and sharply, only to find out that the Secretariat had misled us, and that there had been no oppression at all in the case. Our columns have teemed with complaints and grievances of other kinds, but not one complaint have we had about zemindary oppressions.

THE Lahore paper says:—

It is not yet settled, we believe, who succeeds Mr. A. F. D. Cunningham in the Punjab Secretariat. No doubt, some officer with frontier experiences will be chosen. Another post that will shortly fall vacant, on its present incumbent getting a district, is the Superintendentship of the Kapurthalla State, now held by Mr. C. Rivaz, C.S.

THE Times of India has the following obituary till the departure of the mail, February 6:—

Honorary Captain William John Graham, Quartermaster of the Royal Lancaster Regiment; Her Highness Vejaya Mehtemi Mukto Boyè Amonani, Rajah Sabib of Travancore, and member of the Order of the Crown of India; Lieutenant C. H. R. McNair, 14th Sikhs; Mr. Augustus F. Richards, Madras Civil Service.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

The reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 28th January are as follows:—

There has been some rain in parts of Sind and in places in the Central Provinces, and in the Central India States, and in Bengal. Rain has also fallen in most districts of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and in many places in the Punjab. In Madras prospects continue to be unfavourable in parts of Bellary and Anantpur, elsewhere standing crops are generally in good condition. In Mysore the crops are in fair condition, except in the Kolar and Tumkur districts, where prospects are not encouraging. The rice harvest has been completed in Coorg, and threshing has commenced. Coffee-picking still continues on European estates, but there is no demand in the local market for native produce. Rabi prospects continue good in Bombay. In parts of Hyderabad and on the Upper Sind Frontier the standing crops have been injured by frost. Scarcity of fodder continues in several talukas of Dharwar, Belgaum, and Kaladgi, and of drinking-water in parts of Dharwar and Belgaum. In the Berars the Central India and Rajputana States prospects are generally very favourable. The rabi crops are flourishing in the Central Provinces and in the Punjab, and are generally in good condition in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

Telegraphic Intelligence.

"Strong opposition to the construction of the proposed new docks is being organised in Calcutta, and it is now clear that the sense of the mercantile community is decidedly adverse to the scheme. A largely signed memorial has been presented to the Lieutenant-Governor, urging, inter alia, that the docks are not required, that the expansion of the trade of the port has not kept pace with the expectations formed some two years ago, when the project was launched; that on the contrary, the opening of a railway through Rajpootana and Central India has diverted to Bombay much trade which formerly found its outlet at Calcutta; and that Calcutta, already, by reason of the difficulty of access, one of the most expensive ports in the world, will be completely ruined if further handicapped by the necessity of paying interest on a fresh outlay of from £3,000,000 to £4,000,000. It is also asserted by some authorities that the docks are likely to have an injurious effect on the sanitary condition of the city, and especially on the health of the garrison of Fort William. On the whole, the arguments against the project, if not absolutely unanswerable, are at least so strong that the Government, although it has already made a large outlay in acquiring land, should pause before finally committing itself to a very much larger expenditure, which may have results so disastrous.

"At the same time the Government has good ground for complaining that it has been misled by the quiescent attitude of the Calcutta merchants during the preliminary discussions. Although the matter has been under consideration for about two years, and some £250,000 have already been expended, it is only within the last few weeks that the mercantile community has made any sign of disapproval; and should the project be dropped, that community must bear the blame for the waste of money.

"The Rent Bill has been much discussed during the past week. Apparently the measure in the form which it has now assumed gives satisfaction to neither party; and is likely to be bitterly fought, both by the friends of the zemindars, and by those of the ryots. A large number of amendments are on the paper; and the debate, which is to begin on Friday, will probably be the longest ever known in the Indian Legislature.

"Perhaps the most objectionable feature of the recast Bill is that which limits enhancement by private contract to 12½ per cent, while no restriction is placed on enhancement by suit. The result of this will be, that in a case where an enhancement of twenty per cent. would be reasonable, and the ryot would be willing to accept it, he will be powerless to consent, and the matter must be taken into Court. This provision apart, the Bill to the ordinary impartial outsider appears sufficiently harmless; not calculated greatly to benefit or to hurt either party. And if that be so, the wisest course would be to drop it forthwith.

"In view of the attention recently directed to the armies of the native States, the following remarks, extracted from the Calcutta Englishman, have some interest:—

"The Maharajah Scindia annually assembles his forces, in January and February, near his capital. This year the ground selected is a fine, open plain, near the village of Sasera. A camp for all arms has been formed. For the past fortnight a regular army, stated to consist of six battalions of infantry, four regiments of cavalry, and eight batteries, numbering in all about 8,000 men, has been going through a series of drills and field manoeuvres, under the personal direction of the Maharajah. The camps are laid out with great regularity, showing how carefully the British regulations have been followed. The Maharajah took up his quarters in the camp, and materially aided in its success. The great feature is the system of visual signalling, by flags and heliographs. This is probably the first instance of signalling being utilised by a purely native army; and it makes another step in the progress towards efficiency.

"General Roberts arrived in Calcutta on Wednesday last, and will return to Madras this week."

"The telegrams recently received from England regarding M. Lessar's negotiations with the British Government on the subject of the Afghan frontier have attracted much attention here. The all but universal opinion is that Russia is taking advantage of our difficulties in Egypt to press claims which she knows to be preposterous. It is felt that if M. Lessar's boundary be accepted it will become a matter of immediate and urgent necessity to greatly increase the strength of the army, European and Native, and to hold it ready to meet the blow which may then be struck at any moment. The presence of Lord Dufferin in India has, however, greatly improved the prospect of a satisfactory settlement. His military advisers are all agreed as to the proper course to pursue; and as he is not a man likely to be led astray by sentiment, or to be deceived by diplomatic assurance, there is little cause for anxiety, if only the Ministry will follow his advice.

"It is noteworthy that the native Press has lately begun to show much interest in the Central Asian question, and to devote much space to the discussion of the Russian advance, and the best way of meeting it. The advice which the native writers offer is somewhat wild, and displays an imperfect appreciation of the political and strategical bearings of the case. Thus, one newspaper suggests that it would strengthen our position, if we made over the trans-Indus districts of the Punjab to the Ameer, receiving in return Candahar, the Helmund district, and Herat. But whatever be their views regarding the best means of meeting the Russian advance, the native journals are agreed in considering that advance as a real and serious menace to India; and it is probable that the same belief is reflected in the talk of every bazaar from Peshawar to Calcutta.

"The usual crop of rumours reaches us from Cabul. The Ameer is suffering from gout and toothache. Russian agents are said to come and go freely, and to be treated with honour. It is also stated that a general sense of impending trouble prevails in Afghanistan; and that traders have received commissions to purchase arms in India.

"Another rumour now in circulation is that Colonel Prejevalsky, who is exploring Northern Tibet, is commissioned to open communications with Nepal. This rumour, whether true or false, adds one more to the many existing arguments for the necessity of revising our relations with Nepal, and of insisting on that country being freely thrown open to British subjects, and on the British resident being no longer confined to Khatmandoo."

"A number of more or less improbable rumours continue to come from Rangoon. Among other things it is stated that Theebaw has offered 2,000 men for service in the Soudan. He is said to be busily engaged in extorting money from the wealthy traders in Mandalay. The Chinese appear to be still holding out at Bhamo, while murder and anarchy are rife throughout the kingdom. One story is that a robber chief who had murdered a provincial governor has arrived at Mandalay, and that Theebaw is hesitating whether he shall execute him or make him a general."

The following telegram on the movements of the Indian contingent for employment in the Soudan is from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Feb. 22:—

"The first portion of the Indian contingent, consisting of the 15th Sikhs, has been ordered to embark at Bombay to-day in the transports Zambesi, Sirdhana, and Madura. The remainder is to follow during the week. Brigadier-General Hudson and his Staff will leave in the Clive on Tuesday. The 15th Sikhs required to complete their strength fifty men, who were supplied from the 45th (Rattray's) Sikhs. When the commandant of the latter regiment called for volunteers the whole regiment came forward.

"The brigade numbers about 3,000 combatants, but the followers, labourers, corps, and dooly bearers bring the total up to about 6,000 men. India is also supplying for the use of the British troops 3,000 camels, with drivers, and 1,500 additional camel drivers for camels to be purchased in Egypt, and also 300 mule drivers, 300 water-carriers, and an ambulance corps for the carriage of 500 sick. The camels will be embarked at Kurrachee. One hundred men of the Behar Light Horse have volunteered for service in the expedition, and their offer is now before the Government."

THE MEMORIAL OF THE LONDON COMMITTEE AGAINST THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

The following Memorial, signed by Mr. C. T. Buckland, Chairman, on behalf of "the London Committee of Bengal Landholders and others interested in the welfare of the Agricultural Community of Bengal and Behar," was forwarded to the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India last Saturday, Feb. 21:—

"TO THE RIGHT HON. THE EARL OF KIMBERLEY, HER MAJESTY'S SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.

"The Memorial of the undersigned Landholders and others interested in the welfare of the Agricultural Community of Bengal and Behar,

Respectfully Sheweth:—

"That some of your Memorialists are proprietors and tenants of land in Bengal, and that most of them have been connected officially, commercially or in other ways with the Province of Bengal, so that they are deeply interested in its welfare. They therefore desire respectfully to bring to your Lordship's knowledge the concern and apprehension with which they have learnt that it is the intention of the Government of India immediately to pass the Bengal Tenancy Bill, in the novel form which it appears to have assumed on leaving the hands of the Select Committee of the Legislative Council on the 13th instant.

"The telegrams which have, from time to time, been circulated by the English Press, regarding the amendments which have been made by the Select Committee during the present Session, are apparently inconsistent and misleading. But whatever those amendments may be, it is evident that they have entirely failed to give satisfaction, either to the zemindars or to the ryots, and that they have caused a wide divergence of opinion among the members of the Council itself. It is now further reported that the Talookdars of Oude have combined in support of the opposition to the Bill; and your Memorialists are in a position to affirm that the proprietors of tea estates in the neighbouring Province of Assam are also alarmed at the measure, which is believed by them to menace the welfare of all landholders in India.

"Your Memorialists therefore respectfully pray that they may be favoured with any information which it may be in your Lordship's power to give them, regarding the amendments which have been made in the Bill by the Select Committee of the Legislative Council of India during the current Session. And that your Lordship will be pleased, in concert with the Government of India, to delay the final consideration of the Bill in the Legislative Council, until the nature of its provisions has been fully made known to the persons and classes most deeply interested in it by sufficient publication in the English and vernacular gazettes, by discussion in the public Press, and in other ways, according to the recently-repeated pledge of the Indian Government.

"And your Memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray."

THE SANKHYA APHORISMS OF KAPILA.*

Perhaps the most useful work done in India, under the auspices of Dr. Ballantyne, was the publication of a series of fasciculi, which gave the aphorisms of the six great schools of philosophy current in India, accompanied by such explanatory native comments as served to connect the terse dicta together, and to render their meaning clear. At the time this task was undertaken Dr. Ballantyne was peculiarly well circumstanced for carrying it out, because he was surrounded by eager and learned Indian Pandits, who were just awakening to the consciousness that there was an enormous field for study in Western science only to be entered by processes undreamt of by their progenitors. Many of these native scholars had learnt the English language, and were anxious to acquire those methods of thought which had produced results to them astonishing and, in a way, confounding. At the same time Europeans were animated by a passionate desire to fathom the recesses of Sanskrit literature, and to trace the causes which had made the ancient civilisation of India end in stagnation. Beyond question the intellectual bridge, which can enable the Pandit and the European to enter into each other's method of thinking, is to be found in a serious study of the philosophies of India, and in an elucidation of the points of difference existing therein with the basements of true knowledge recognised in Europe.

The treatises which resulted from the united labours of the European professors and the native Pandits at Benares College have ever been recognised as works of high value, and are carefully studied by the Sanskrit scholars who are fortunate enough to possess copies of them. Their present scarcity has induced Messrs. Trübner and Co. to bring out a new edition of the aphorisms of the Sankhya school, which, for several reasons, possess peculiar interest to European students. Although not now the most popular school in India, yet a precedence is accorded to the Sankhya system from its antiquity. To the Western mind, however, its chief interest lies in the fact that it makes some approach in its methods to our modern inductive system, and also in its fundamental agreement with the Berkeleyan philosophy by its maintenance of the theory that what we call matter is really only an aggregation of qualities, which exist as qualities, but do not exist as actual substance.

The foregoing is sufficient to show that these aphorisms, with their translation, possess an interest outside the circle of pure Sanskritists; and hence it has been a desideratum to eliminate from these books every source of error. Dr. Ballantyne appears to have held strong opinions on some points, and to have been at times too sparing of his labour. The latter peculiarity led him to adopt, for half of his work, a printed text, including its typographical errors. This rendered a thorough revision of the whole book absolutely essential; and Dr. Fitzedward Hall has accomplished that task with faithfulness. No one is so well fitted for such a work; for he is admittedly the most profound student of Hindu philosophy now living. He has laboured with unflagging earnestness, even taking upon himself the toilsome task of comparing each sentence with five rare manuscripts in his own possession. The present edition may, therefore, be considered almost in the light of a new work, and one of the highest authority on the subject.

MADAME BLAVATSKY.—We hear that Madame Blavatsky is ill and that Colonel Olcott, who has gone to Burma, has been telegraphed for, and returns to Madras at once. Mr. Khandalavala, Sub-Judge of Poona, is writing the pamphlet promised several weeks ago, in which the Blavatsky-Coulomb case will be treated at length on behalf of the Theosophists.—Mail.

MR. COMMISSIONER FORGETT ON THE RUSSO-AFGHAN CRISIS.

A LETTER TO THE RIGHT HON. EARL DUFFERIN, K.P., GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA.

"2, Leinster-place, Bayswater, W., 25th September, 1884.

"MY LORD,—India is a dependency on which national and individual interests largely centre, and the anxiety that it should be safeguarded is undoubtedly a matter of deep and general solicitude, in which, being an Indian pensioner, and that pension dependent on the safety of India, I—in common with a host whose source of livelihood is from India—intently and especially share.

"It has been our boast that England has been the only power that has been able to arrest Russia in her course of wrong and aggression. That which inspires us with feelings of pride is to the Russians the cause of humiliation and deep-felt indignation, more especially as they consider it their mission to be the dominant power in the world, and the harbingers in the promotion of proselytism and civilisation.

"It is a mere truism that the British Empire in India is the wonder and admiration of the world. The Russians are well aware of its importance to Great Britain. Frustrated in the Crimean War, their aggressive move forward has since been in Central Asia. And obtrusion itself cannot fail to comprehend their object to be the conquest of India. By this undertaking they will be keeping in view the accomplishment of a two-fold object—of giving England enough to do in the defence of India, and of placing it out of her power to impose hostile intervention in again arresting Russian attempt to swoop down upon Constantinople and the Black Sea.

"Their object in regard to India was so manifest that, some thirty years ago, a neutral zone, accompanied by the usual solemn formalities, was carefully elaborated, which neither the British nor the Russians were to overstep; but what became of it? It was cast to the winds the moment it suited Russian convenience.

"Notwithstanding the flagrant violation of this and every other instance of international obligation entered into by Russia, the farce is further played out by the demarcation of the Afghan boundary, presumably in a hopeful trust in Russian probity, while such trust should, long ago, have been classed among the instances of discarded political folly.

"And I have no hesitation in stating that if Mr. Gladstone and his Government remain in office, following their present blind confidence in Russia, the Russians will be in Herat within the next three years, if not sooner, under combinations which will bring about the loss of India; and Constantinople and the Black Sea will, contemporaneously, be swooped down upon and possessed by the Russians, and, as stated in my letter to Mr. Gladstone, of which I enclose a copy, it will, in a few years, be followed by a Naval rivalry which would deaden the commerce of Great Britain throughout the world and spread poverty and pauperism throughout Great Britain.

"Under prospects so portentous, it is difficult to conceive the grounds which influence the Government to place confidence in Russia and to enwrap themselves in lullaby quietude and inaction. Perhaps at the meeting on board the Pembroke Castle the Russian Emperor inspired Mr. Gladstone with the belief of perfect immunity from Russia in regard to India, if England should interpose no obstacle against the acquisition of Turkey by Russia. If such should possibly have been the case, events will prove Mr. Gladstone to have played the part of a traitor to his country, as the Russian Emperor will only be able to keep his promise so long as it suited the convenience of Russian Generals.

"There was a time when no shade rested upon the international pre-eminence of Great Britain: it was a pre-eminence of hearty, universal cognition. The brag against Prussia indulged in during her war with Denmark by Lord Palmerston's Government, of which Mr. Gladstone was a prominent member, placed Europe on the tiptoe of expectation of a fiery outburst; but, at the last moment, and while the heart of one of the best of women was bleeding for her fatherland, the Government beat an ignominious retreat. Such retreat was politically wise, as no British interests were involved; but bounce having been indulged in, Great Britain was rendered an object of ridicule. The episodes of the Franco-German war are too well known to render rehearsal necessary. These circumstances cast a shadow on British international status, and when the Andrassy Memorandum and subsequently the Berlin note were in course of concoction, it was not considered necessary to consult Great Britain. She was consigned to the shades of contemptuous disregard. And what is her condition at the present time? The object of the second meeting of the three Emperors, it is said, is "the maintenance of peace." England was not even thought of!!!

"The political horizon of Europe bears upon it no visible ripple; but gathering incidents in the neighbourhood of Herat, and the state of preparation of the Russians in the Balkan provinces and in Bessarabia, indicate disturbances that will, ere long, conflagrate and bring to light the sham of the alleged intention of peacefulness on the part of the Emperors at the recent meeting.

"For the reasons stated in my letter to Mr. Gladstone India is not to be saved in India. To save India, and safeguard Great Britain, the only remedy is war in Europe, in alliance with Austria and Turkey.

"It may suit Mr. Gladstone's purpose, under a cloud of phraseological subtleties, to enchant the British public with the prospect of prolonged peace. Such a conception may be a superstition with Mr. Gladstone, and it would prove a national calamity if Great Britain should allow herself to be led away by a similar inspiration.

"Your lordship is proceeding to India universally credited with the qualities of a great governor, and your advent is laden with possibilities of no ordinary importance for the future of India. And it is to be hoped that you will not allow yourself to be led away by the belief, that the populations of India contain elements in abundance for the protection of India, and that justice and good government only were needed to secure their loyalty and zealous and effective co-operation. Such views are suppositious, though put forward during recent years especially, and freely indulged in. I was born and lived in India for very nearly fifty-three years, and I take upon myself most emphatically to declare that 'the stronger power invariably has and always will command their allegiance.' The history of the Peshwa of the Deccan affords strong evidence of the influence exercised over Orientals by their belief in the stronger power. His own subjects, notwithstanding the abhorrence of the Hindoo and the Mahomedan of the beef and pork consuming European, whose touch is desecration to the Brahmin, freely joined us and fought against their own Sovereign. A number of his leading courtiers, too—notably Sudasheo Row Mankeshwur and Balajee Punt Natoo—proved disloyal!"

"There has been no breach in the good government and administration of justice to the people of India, and my long Indian experience enables me to aver that they have themselves been in no doubt on the subject, and have been fully appreciative; but their views—of a portion of them, I mean, whom our educational institutions have enlightened—are beginning to institute comparisons between our rule and the benefits to be anticipated from Russian rule (vide extract in my letter to Lord Randolph Churchill), which is indicative of the impression already produced on them by the 'believed to be stronger power.'

"In the matter providing India with an adequate supply of water for the prevention of the calamity of famine, there has been some remissness. I brought it to the notice of Lord Salisbury in the year 1874, when Secretary of State for India; but it was followed by no result. I beg to enclose a copy of my letter, and commend the propositions therein embodied to your Lordship's consideration.

"I have expressed strong opinions in my letters to Mr. Gladstone and to Lord Randolph Churchill on the folly of subsidising the Afghan ruler; and the Homeward Mail of July 29 last contains a notice of "Reflections on Russia" by that eminent and enlightened Indian statesman, Sir Tanjore Madava Row, late Dewan of Travancore, in which my views are strongly corroborated.

"In conclusion I beg to state that, for the reasons stated in my letters to Mr. Gladstone and Lord Randolph Churchill, India is not to be saved by any arrangements for encountering the Russians on the borders of India; nor is Great Britain to be safeguarded from a naval rivalry, but by a war in Europe. If your lordship should countenance any other remedy disaster will be the inevitable result.

"War is abhorrent in all its aspects, and he who advocates a war which is unnecessary and preventible would deserve the execration of man, the malediction of Heaven; but who dare to say that it becomes not a duty, 'a holy, a sacred duty, when country's needs point to, and it is undertaken?'—I have the honour to remain, my lord, your lordship's very obedient, humble servant,

"C. FORGETT,

"Late Commissioner of Police of Bombay."

THE EARTH HUNGER OF THE POWERS.

If "the dark continent" can only be illumined through the earth hunger of the nations, then by all means let Frenchmen, Germans, Spaniards, and Italians partition whatever of accessible Africa is left, among them. But once the morality of annexation of this kind is admitted, where is it to stop? In Africa only, or is it to extend to the four quarters of the globe? India is, or ought to be, keenly interested in the acquisitiveness of Foreign States; for there is, unfortunately, a great deal of debateable land lying to the north and the east, if not the west of us; and already, indeed, the Russian appetite for territory has shown itself so vigorous, that we may soon expect to see it absorbing everything in the way between it and Herat. France and Italy have been curiously looking at Theebaw's benighted kingdom for this many a long day; and the Dutch—perhaps the Germans also—would gladly annex the whole of the Malayan Peninsula, and the opposite coast of Sumatra, if the one was not bound by treaty with England, and the other cared not to be the first to commit a breach of the peace. But we may depend upon it, that if the great war in Europe, so long threatening, should break out, the Malay Peninsula and Burma will become objective points in the struggle of the Powers to catch what they can. Our old treaty with the Dutch, not to annex what they used to call "the spice islands—" that is to say, not to absorb any more of the Malayan Archipelago—would hardly hold good an hour during a great war. It has, in fact, already been set at naught by both Dutch and English, in their recent annexations of territory in Borneo.

The Malay Peninsula, to India, is of much more importance than southern and western Africa; for it is not only much nearer to us, but is a part of that overland route to the furthest East that we prize so highly. The Power that had even temporary possession of the island of Singapore, at one end of the Straits of Malacca, or of Penang at the other end of the same straits, could cut off communication with China, Australia, and Japan, and inflict heavy losses on our commerce. But designing foreigners need not, perforce, seize Singapore to get a piéd à terre in that part of the world from which to harass British commerce. We doubt if there is anything to prevent them taking land on the coast between Singapore and Malacca, or Malacca and Penang; unless it should be a respect for the property of Malay chiefs, which they have not shown for the possessions of African ones. It is, indeed, rather wonderful that "the thundering news from Malacca," about which Mr. Gladstone twitted the late Lord Beaconsfield some time ago, has not actually been heard in England and in India; because, as a mere acquisition without political or strategical influence, the land and products of Malaya are very much more valuable than the late German or Spanish annexations in Africa. The pity is that we have not annexed, or, at all events, placed a protectorate over the whole of Malaya long ago. As it is, we have only an understanding with certain small States here and there, but no Imperial jurisdiction over the whole. It would not be difficult to add the whole Malaya Peninsula to the possessions of the Queen Empress, and a brighter jewel could scarcely be set in her crown; for it is a country of enormous capabilities. Here is every climate, from the tea and coffee bearing regions of the mountains, to the gambier and pepper of the plains. It is immensely rich in minerals, such as tin, copper, and gold; and its timber, of which there are enormous forests is among the most valuable in the world. Unfortunately, it is poorly populated by a thriftless race; otherwise it would be one of the richest countries in the world. But as a field for Indian emigration, we know of none better; if only the whole peninsula was under a British Protectorate. Some may say, that as we have already had a war in Perak, we had better leave Malaya alone; but we doubt the consequences if we do. Nothing is more likely than that, in this event, we shall see foreigners established on its shores; for the Germans, French, &c., have just as much excuse to be in Malaya as in Africa.

With regard to Burmah, we are more secure; because we have British Burmah between the sea and the coveted possessions of Theebaw. That simple monarch fancies that Italians and French will help him to drive the English into the sea; but the truth is that France and Italy are only cognisant of the great value of the trade that might be established, by one in Theebaw's position, with China. France, too, would probably have no objection to be in a position to do us injury in war; and it certainly would not be at all pleasant to have Russia on our north-west frontier, and France on what would correspond to our south-east frontier. We would, of course, make casus belli out of France's interference with Theebaw's affairs; but we could not reasonably do the same, if France chose to establish herself in independent Malaya or Sumatra. She might, however, do us infinitely more mischief from the Straits of Malacca than from Mandalay; and the Kraw Canal, which French Engineers were so anxious to cut across the Malayan Peninsula, would have assisted her in this way as well as in others. It may be said that it is premature to discuss this matter; but surely, when the nations are devouring Africa piecemeal, it is time to discuss it—now or never? There is not a quarter of the globe to which the Powers, with a newly awakened cupidity, are not turning their attention. In Polynesia, the scramble for islands is as brisk as it is in Africa for settlements; and it will be strange indeed if the whole great island of New Guinea is not partitioned within a year or two. We have set the example, it must be acknowledged, ourselves; and, of course, cannot complain if others follow in our footsteps. Arabia, too, is fast falling a prey to the rapacity of the great Powers of Europe; and here again there seems to be a design on British commerce. No wonder, for it is an immense temptation to all, and had need to be guarded as carefully as the gold room of the Bank of England. If there was any hope of this only proving a passing craze, there would not be much to say about it; but it seems done with intent to prepare against some war in which England will play the prominent part. We repeat, then, that it behoves the Governments of England and India to be prepared for new acquisitions in more important places than Africa; and, if necessary to prevent their accomplishment by the simple expedient of forestalling them.—Civil and Military Gazette.

A JUDGE WITHOUT A JURY.

Who is there that has not heard of the Hastie-Pigot case—the hastiest one of its kind that has ever been tried in India? We have no intention of raking up its revolting memory, except to show the dangers that arise from the absence of a jury of intelligent men at such trials. Mr. Justice Norris over and over again deplored that absence in the course of the trial. He felt, what every man of right sentiments must feel, that, on so grave a subject as the moral worth of a woman's character, the judgment of any one man is not to be depended upon. His own conduct was a proof in point. Throughout the earlier part of the trial he sided with the plaintiff. Unless the proceedings were erroneously reported, his sympathy for her was so marked that cool-headed men began to fear a miscarriage of justice on that account. Then Mr. Fish appeared on the scene, and, so eager was the judge to discover the truth, that he allowed what the Privy Council terms "a mine to be sprung on the plaintiff's character." We cannot blame him, as a man, but his want of discretion as a judge has led to some very painful results. Speaking from our own feelings, nobody is perfectly satisfied with the result of this case. That the Privy Council is not so, we conclude from the following extracts from their judgment:—"There was such a miscarriage in the admission of this (Mr. Fish's) and some other evidence, and in not noticing the failing to substantiate some other material allegations contained in the justification, that if their lordships felt coerced to adopt the conclusion generally which Mr. Justice Norris arrived at, they would feel that there had been such an injustice done and such miscarriage, that in place of confirming his judgment it would be their duty, if they heard the appeal at all, to send it for a new trial." They go on to say:—"The evidence to establish the justification was not of that satisfactory character that their lordships could say it has been satisfactorily proved. Under such circumstances, they think they exercise a wise discretion in holding that, as the parties have had the benefit of one appeal to the High Court, there ought not to be in this case a further appeal." The right interpretation of their lordships' sentiments seems to be the following, "Not Proven"—and a very unsatisfactory termination it is of nearly two years' litigation. The plaintiff gets the benefit of the doubt, but not that complete exoneration or conviction that justice demands. Such results do occur at trials where juries preside; but the difficulty in this case is that the levity of the plaintiff's character was assumed as proved, by one man only, and that judgment, though not upheld on appeal, was based on the personal examination of the witnesses at the trial. Their demeanour carried conviction to his mind, which it was impossible to convey second hand to the judges of the High Court or those of the Privy Council. Would it have had an equal effect on the minds of several intelligent men, each resolved to do his best to arrive at the truth, is a question that can never be answered, and in the absence of such an answer, every one who has read a report of the trial has as much right to form an opinion as the judges of the High Court or those of the Privy Council. The latter have not seen the witnesses any more than the public has; they have read the evidence and so has the public; lawyers they certainly are, which the generality of the public are not, but in this case the public does not ask for law but facts. Did certain events take place, or did they not? The judge, who saw the witnesses and heard them speak, believed that they were truthful; other judges, who did not see or hear the witnesses, believed that their statements were "not satisfactory." Now this is toying with very dangerous materials. The witnesses were either true men or perjurers. Which of the two were they? The judges who had never seen or heard them inferred that they were the latter; the judge who had seen and heard them concluded that they were the former; and there were no third parties in the persons of jurymen to decide whether they were worthy of credit or not. If justice under the above conditions is not in a stage of unstable equilibrium we should like to know what is so. A judge jumping to conclusions on evidence that might or might not have been trustworthy, and other judges upsetting his decisions by practically saying, without further examination of the witnesses, that they were liars. The reverence that most people still maintain for the higher courts alone prevents them from seeing the folly of the whole proceeding.—Delhi Gazette.

THE EFFECT OF REDUCTIONS.

The question of the state of the army is one which should engage the special attention of the Viceroy. He cannot speak as he ought on many questions, whilst the force to back his words is at a point absolutely below the garrison requirements of the country. The weakness of the army is the more reprehensible because it is the only armed force in the world which has no reserves. The question bristles with difficulties, but that is all the more reason why it should be strongly and determinedly grappled with. From whichever side it be approached it is surrounded by a fringe of theories, and by a hedge of financial obstacles. There is no real will to bring about an improvement, and hence improvement is always and constantly postponed to every consideration but that which is at the bottom of the existence of all armed forces—the maintenance of the political life of the State. In India the police cannot be made to act as reserve to the Regular forces for the reason that the police has itself no reserve, and is weak to a fault. Probably nowhere, even in England, do the forces at the disposal of the Executive bear such powerful testimony to the law-abiding character of the people as in India. Certainly nowhere else is this so greatly taken for granted, or so uniformly acted upon. With a weak police so absorbed in its daily routine, so frittered away every day in petty yet multifarious duties as to be wholly incapable of systematic drill, or the trained use of firearms,—armed moreover with smooth bores and Enfields, and leaning upon a body of spearmen and bludgeon men, the Army has no reserve in the civil force of the various provinces. It has no reserve in itself, and its pensioners are, as a rule, so thoroughly worn out as to form a reserve only on paper. The Army of India is thus a first line merely, and for years the Government has striven to make that line as thin as possible. That it has succeeded almost beyond its hopes is proved by two or three things. Its foreign difficulties have grown rapidly and steadily, its military service has become unpopular to a degree which would have seemed incredible a quarter of a century ago, and in the existing constitution of native society; and, above all, the people have lost confidence in English wisdom, and are losing confidence in English strength. We cannot to day shut our eyes to the fact that there is an increase of doubt as to English luck, and as to the deservedness of that luck. The people are alarmed, and justly, at the way in which disarmament has been carried out. The Government has proceeded without the smallest remembrance of the fact that there is a great and eager body of public opinion in India which has always to be tranquillised. It has acted as if what it did had no interest and no concern for the natives, as if India were as isolated as England herself, and as homogeneous, and as if no man amongst the vast number of native speculators and wealthy traders cared whether the Government was strong enough to be arrogant or weak enough to be timid. This most culpable mistake is working its evil effects. The people do note, and note with alarm, that England seems to be putting off her military aptitudes; they note the number of guns sent into store; they note the number of regiments broken up; they note the want of machine guns, of great arsenals, of officers, of preparedness, of reserves, and of men; and noting all these things, they are, of course, disposed, first, to believe that the Government is equal to all emergencies, and, second, to place unbounded confidence in the stability of English rule. We have sown the seeds of alarm and doubt, and of course will reap an outturn of confidence, trust, and tranquillity. The natives, to oblige the Government will abandon their inherited astuteness, will surrender their long experience of trouble, will rally to a people who are anxious to distrust themselves, and will turn all their thoughts to the curious and foreign legal and social problems they are asked to accept as the outcome of English wisdom, and the fruit of English rule. Where in the history of the nations was there a Fool's Paradise more perfect or complete? Where was there a blindness so persistent and so proud? Where was there ever such inexcusable self-deception, such a determined ignoring of the opinion upon which all authority must rest? India is no exception—peculiar as she may be in many respects—to the rule that upon the physical strength at the disposal of a Government must rest its moral influence within and without the borders of the territories it has in trust to guard and develop. The Government has sought to treat the country as an exception, and its folly has produced doubt within and danger without, and must now cease.—Indian Daily News.

Correspondence.

THE SAFETY OF ENGLISHWOMEN AND THEIR CHILDREN.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—By the last mail from India the report of Colonel Stanton, Royal Engineers, on Indian railways was received at the India Office: the safety of ladies and children depends upon railways to the sea coast.

An article from yourself might rouse the attention of the English public. Centres of refuge in the interior of India may be useful for a few days, but the history of Lucknow during the Mutiny of 1857 proves that at a distance from the sea coast delicately-nurtured ladies cannot be expected to survive many months of siege.

In the Mutiny river steamers were considered to be places of refuge, but the heat on board was often terrible. In future railways should take all European non-combatants to seaports, to Bombay or Calcutta, or Karachi, Madras or Karwar.

Thousands of British families are at present scattered over India. Has our Government ever consulted how they should be protected in the event of disturbances?—Your obedient servant, February 18th. T.

THE commands of the Convalescent Depôts at Landour and Dalhousie fall in this year in July and October respectively; those at Pchamari, Dalhousie, and Naini Tal will all change their staff officers in February, March, and October.

RAILWAY EXTENSION IN INDIA.—A memorial has been addressed by the Oldham Chamber of Commerce to Lord Dufferin on the subject of the extension of railways. The memorial points out that India, with adequate railway communication, could supply England with wheat, instead of this country having resource to America.

THE Queen has been graciously pleased to approve the appointment of the Right Hon. Sir James Ferguson, K.C.M.G., C.I.E., Governor of Bombay, to be a Knight Grand Commander of the Order of the Star of India.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.—The following is a list of the candidates for Her Majesty's Indian Medical Service who were successful at the competitive examination held at Burlington House on the 9th inst. Eighteen candidates competed for five appointments. All were reported qualified:—E. K. Campbell, 2,590 marks; F. J. Drury, 2,495 marks; F. A. Rogers, 2,230 marks; E. R. W. C. Carroll, 2,220 marks; and H. J. Dyson, 2,160 marks.

A PRIZE of One Hundred Guineas is offered by Messrs. Kendal and Dent, Watch Manufacturers, 106, Cheapside, through the Balloon Society of Great Britain, for the best Essay on "Universal Time, (New Style,) and our future Watches and Clock." MSS. should be sent to the Secretary of the Balloon Society of Great Britain, on or before May 1st, 1885.

THE INDIAN COUNCIL.—It is quite certain that considerable changes are impending in the Indian Council, but there is much doubt as to how the vacancies will be filled. These will be three in number unless Sir Barrow Ellis is re-nominated by the Secretary of State, and it is probable that even in his case the ten-year rule will be rigidly enforced. Sir Alfred Lyall has refused the offer of a seat, and Sir Donald Stewart has apparently not yet made up his mind. But the addition of the present Commander-in-Chief would not solve the problem of providing the necessary successors to the most difficult places. Perhaps if Sir Barrow Ellis is retired, the Secretary of State would look at home and not to India for the most competent Bombay representative.—Home News.

LORD RIPON AT THE NORTHBROOK INDIAN CLUB.—On Saturday evening Lord Ripon was entertained at a banquet given in the Town-hall, Westminster, by the Northbrook Indian Club. Lord Northbrook presided, and among the company present were Lord Kimberley, Lord Napier of Magdala, Lord Lawrence, Lord Dalrymple, Nawab Shamsud Dowlah, Sir Louis Mallet, Sir A. Hobhouse, Sir Ashley Eden, Sir Thomas Brassey, M.P., Mr. J. K. Cross, M.P., Under-Secretary for India, Sir F. J. Halliday, Hon. L. Tennyson, Sir Andrew Clarke, Sir B. H. Ellis, General Charles Foster, Sir W. Andrew, Mr. B. W. Currie, Sir George Campbell, M.P., Sir T. E. Colbrooke, M.P., Sir H. Rawlinson, Sir James Caird, Sir Richard Meade, Sir H. Maine, Sir Robert Stuart, Mr. D. P. Cama, Mr. W. H. Primrose (Lord Ripon's private secretary), and many others. The club being non-political the proceedings were strictly of a social and non-party character. After the usual toast of Her Imperial Majesty the Queen the chairman proposed the health of the guest of the evening, referring to the early career of Lord Ripon and the way in which the chairman and he were brought into immediate contact during the early period of their political life. He took occasion to name the various distinguished members of the club who had met that night to do honour to Lord Ripon. The toast was drunk with great enthusiasm, and owing to the great cheering Lord Ripon was not able to reply till a few minutes after his rising up to do so. After expressing his hearty thanks for the honour done him in this entertainment his lordship referred to the great advantages of the club, which he believed had a great future before it. He alluded to the fact that he was one of the original members of the club when it was first started at John-street by Lord Northbrook, with the co-operation of Sir B. Ellis and Mr. G. S. V. Fitzgerald. Being absent from England, he said, he was not able to attend the club, but now that he has returned he hoped "to mend his manners." He confined himself solely to the social aspect of the club, and avoided all political questions as regards his policy in India. After the dinner a large number of Indians were presented to his lordship, and this terminated the proceedings of the evening.

THE AFGHANISTAN FRONTIER DELIMITATION.

At a meeting of the Westminster Debating Society held last night in the Century Club Rooms, Pall-mall-place, there were present, among other visitors, to hear a discussion with regard to our interests in Afghanistan, M. Lessar, a member of the Russian Delimitation Commission, Mr. A. Kropensky, secretary of the Russian Embassy, General Sir H. Green, General Sir A. Kemball, Mr. Boulnois, late Chief Justice of the Punjab, Col. Monroe, Col. E. Johnson, and Major Durant and Mr. C. Marvin.

Mr. Griffin W. Vyse, late Field Engineer of Southern Afghanistan, opened the discussion with the motion:—"That the immediate occupation of Candahar, by friendly arrangement, is desirable, in the interests of our Indian Empire, and as a safeguard against further Russian advancement." With the aid of a large map of Afghanistan he gave an interesting account of the character of the country and its people, admitting that in some respects his views of the present situation of affairs affecting the delimitation of the frontier had been somewhat modified of late by what he had heard from his distinguished friend M. Lessar.

Mr. A. Kropensky, who spoke in excellent English, remarked during the course of the debate that Russia did not at all want a war, and had no desire to invade Afghanistan. She only wanted a frontier between her territories and Afghanistan. This he hoped England would help to obtain, in English interests as well as in those of Russia—(hear, hear).

M. Lessar, speaking in French, his native tongue, declared that this question of the marking out of a frontier between the two countries, Russia and Afghanistan, had unhappily been quite misunderstood in this country. This question had been mixed up with that of the possession of Herat, but the two were entirely distinct and different. There was no intention of going to Herat or of advancing the frontier nearer to that city than it was now proposed to do in order to include that which was absolutely necessary to Russia. The Russians, he believed, were still at Pul-i-Khatun, and he had not heard of their alleged march on Penjdeh. It must be remembered that the old line as proposed left them with nothing but sand and desert, and he urged that the lands capable of affording pasturage and the salt lakes which the line asked for would enclose were absolute necessities to them. This district, too, which was now uninhabited, was geographically a part of Russian Turkestan. That line once ascertained, they were prepared to declare that they had no wish to go nearer to Herat, and his Government were quite ready to regard Afghanistan as an integral part of the British Indian Empire. With regard to the talked-of extension of the railway to Herat, he could assure them that this was a matter altogether beyond his scope, but personally he should think that the extension of the line from the British Indian frontier would conduce to the interests of both nations and be a guarantee for peace between the two Powers.

Mr. C. Marvin said that the question seemed to be at what point the two railways—the Russian one from Askabad and ours from Quetta—should join one another. One thing appeared to be certain—namely, that unless we advanced towards the Russian frontier the Russian frontier would advance towards us—(hear, hear).

SCINDE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAY.—At a meeting of the holders of £5 paid shares (£15 unpaid) in the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway Company, on Friday, held at No. 134, Palmerston-buildings, Bishopsgate-street Within, E.C., the following resolution was passed nem. con.:—"That this meeting approves the course suggested by the circular of the 13th of February, and that the following gentlemen be requested to act as a committee to take such steps as they may think fit to protect the interests of the stock and shareholders of the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway Company, with power to add either stock or shareholders to their number—viz.:—Samuel Gurney Sheppard, Samuel Montagu, Charles Keyser, and C. Wilkinson."

OBITUARY.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR HERBERT STEWART, K.C.B., died on Feb. 16 at Gakdul, from wounds received in an engagement near Metammeh on Jan. 19. The deceased officer was born on June 30, 1843, the eldest son of the Rev. Edward Stewart, rector of Sparsholt, Hampshire, and was a great-grandson of the seventh Earl of Galloway. His mother was daughter of the late Charles John Herbert of Muckross, county Kerry. He was educated at Winchester College, and entered the Army as ensign in the 37th Regiment (now the Hampshire) in 1863. It is not generally known that Stewart was at one time intended for the Bar, that he kept all his terms and ate all his dinners, but in the end abandoned that life for a military career. He was gazetted lieutenant in 1865 and captain in 1868. For two years from this time he acted as aide-de-camp to the Major-General Commanding the Bengal Presidency, and the year following as Deputy-Assistant Quartermaster-General in Bengal. In 1873 he joined the 3rd Dragoon Guards, on the lists of which regiment his name now stands as Major. In 1878 he passed the Staff College and served as Brigade Major in the Zulu War in 1879, and was present at the affair of Erzuganyan. He was specially employed on the lines of communication after the breaking up of the Cavalry Brigade, and for his services here he was mentioned in Colonel Russell's report, with brevet rank as Major, which rank he gained substantively in 1882. He served as principal Staff officer to the Transvaal field force in the operations against Secocoeni, and as Military Secretary and Chief of the Staff to Sir Garnet Wolseley, and in this capacity he gained further mention in despatches and his brevet of Lieutenant-Colonel, together with a medal and clasp. In 1881 he went to South Africa on special service, and was Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General in the Boer war, for which he was again mentioned. In the early part of 1882 he was appointed Aide-de-Camp to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, and later in the year he again saw active service as Deputy-Assistant Adjutant-General and Quartermaster-General for the cavalry division in the operations in Egypt. Here he was present at all the minor engagements of that campaign, as well as at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir and the capture of Cairo. For these services he was mentioned in despatches, appointed Aide-de-Camp to the Queen, made a Companion of the Bath, gained a medal with clasp, and was decorated with the Third Class of the Osmanieh and the Khedive's Star. In the same year he gained the rank of Colonel. Last year, again, he served in Egypt. Under Sir General Graham he commanded the Cavalry Brigade, and was present at the battles of El Teb and Tamai, for which he was promoted to the rank of K.C.B. and gained additional distinctions.

THE DACCA-MYMENSINGH RAILWAY.—The construction of the Dacca-Mymensingh Railway is being pushed on with vigour, and a portion of the line from the terminus at Bairah—a place about three miles from the sudder station—to Saltee, a distance of about seventeen miles, has been so far completed that trains for the conveyance of materials have lately been running over it. The works on the remaining portion of the line from Saltee to Naraingunge, about eighty-five miles, are fast progressing towards completion. It is believed that another section of the line will be completed by April next. Some two or three bridges over small forest rivers still remain to be constructed. There will be about nine stations along the line between Naraingunge and Mymensingh.—Indian Daily News.

The Chairman, Mr. David Sutherland, congratulated the meeting on the present peaceful condition of the fund, which was no longer agitated by burning questions or angry controversies.

A CURIOUS rumour obtained currency in Calcutta on the 24th ult. among a section of the native trading community. This was no less sensational a story than that the Queen was dead! Mar-ware brokers began to offer Government paper for sale, and nothing but the persistent denial of the rumour by such Europeans as they applied to would satisfy them of the falseness of the news. How the rumour arose no one can say; but it is suggested that the telegrams about the dynamite outrages in London had something to do with it, particularly as the mystic words, "The Tower of London," were mentioned.

CEYLON.

ON the 27th ultimo the Governor left Colombo on a tour through the Southern Province, journeying as far as Matara, but not visiting any of the irrigation works in that part of the island. It is thought probable that one object of his Excellency's journey is to obtain some idea of the prospects of a line of southern railway, which would be a work capable of being brought to completion during his administration.

SINCE our last despatch there has been but one brief and almost formal sitting of the Legislature, at which the business was confined to the asking of one or two questions, the presentation of a petition, the further readings of the Cemeteries, Loan, and Carriers' Ordinances; also the first reading of the bill for the appropriation of Loan Board balances. The report of the Sub-Committee on the Pradial Products Bill was brought up and read, and the Council was adjourned to the 12th February to allow of progress being made with other Committees, as well as with drafts of Ordinances not yet ready. The sitting of this Council will be unprecedented. We understand that there are yet at least five Ordinances, drafts of which have not been published in the Gazette, to be passed before Council finally rises and the business of the Session can be concluded. It is estimated that the work before them will occupy our legislators till about the 15th of March.

A DEPUTATION from the Chamber of Commerce waited upon the Governor in reference to the movement amongst that body for the construction of a northern arm to our breakwater. It is urged that without such an arm it is often difficult and even dangerous to land or ship cargo during the north-east monsoon, owing to the prevalence of strong longshore winds, and that, if it be taken in hand whilst the breakwater staff and appliances are on the spot, it can be constructed for £200,000, the interest and sinking fund for which may easily be raised partly by increased dues on shipping and partly by new dues on cargo boats and on goods landed and shipped. The proposal was not well received by the Governor, who declared he could not take so favourable a view of the future shipping prospects of the port as is held by the Chamber. It did not appear, however, that any proof of the necessity for the northern arm was adduced; assertions were indeed made, but to warrant a further outlay on our harbour works some facts should have been adduced, though, no doubt during two months, December and January, a northern arm in a proper position would be a great convenience. But we ourselves will agree to consider no such scheme until the sanction of the railway to Badulla has been received. The £200,000 which this northern arm is to cost does not include a sum for further dredging of the harbour, a work which is of greater importance than any northern arm, and which is estimated to cost as much as £100,000. His Excellency the Governor, however, dealt with the arguments of the deputation most feebly, asking for assurances as to what the trade of the port would be thirty-five years hence, when he had a dozen very strong arguments to his hand, which he made no use of whatever. We are not likely, however, to be called upon to pay for a northern arm, at least not yet awhile.—Ceylon Times.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE 9th Bombay Native Infantry arrived in Bombay from Poona on Feb. 4th. The regiment will remain in Bombay until November, and then proceed to Aden.

THE Pioneer says:—Some important changes are, we understand, contemplated in the organisation of the Military Works Department, which will have the effect of bringing the department directly under the Commander-in-Chief. The change is one which, we doubt not, will materially contribute to increase the efficiency of an important branch of the service in India.

COLONEL McLEOD INNES, V.C., R.E., Inspector-General of Military Works in India, reaches the age of 55 on the 5th proximo, but does not come under the 55 years' rule. He will thus be enabled to hold his appointment for the full term of five years, until March 13th, 1887, unless promoted in the meantime to the rank of Major-General, of which there appears no present likelihood.—Times of India.

THE responsibility of transferring married hospital assistants for duty to places on the Western coast, Sind, and the Quetta district, and of permitting their families to accompany them at the public expense when the duty is of a permanent nature, is by a recent ruling vested in the Surgeon-General, Her Majesty's Forces, Bombay, who is to accord specific sanction in each case as it arises.

It has been arranged that the pension payments in the Southern Konkan Circle shall eventually be undertaken by a military officer on the unemployed list. This measure will, it is understood, be introduced when the present paymaster of that circle retires from the service.

THE Government of India have, subject to the Secretary of State's sanction, decided that officers of the Indian Army holding any regimental appointment must vacate the same on attaining fifty-two years of age. The former rule, G. O. 209 of 1882, applied to commandants only. The rule has now been extended so as to include all regimental appointments.

THE Government of India has now ruled that its former decision directing that when military officers not entitled to quarters but to presidency house-rent are supplied with quarters, and consequently are not allowed to draw their presidency house rent, the amount of the presidency house-rent was to be credited to the Public Works Department is incorrect. In future no such adjustments need be made.

THE Government of India have approved of the issue of the defective ammunition manufactured at the Kirkee Factory to regiments and batteries in the Bengal and Madras Presidencies for field practice, in the proportion of 30 rounds per soldier of British infantry, 15 rounds for cavalry, 30 rounds for native infantry, and 20 rounds for native cavalry. In addition to the above, it has been decided to issue 800 rounds of the ammunition to each regiment of British cavalry and 1,200 rounds to each regiment of British infantry. Regiments which are at present allowed to purchase ammunition at half price for match shooting purposes may be supplied with the Kirkee-made ammunition at one-fourth the original price, in the proportion of 1,000 rounds per battery and 3,000 rounds per regiment.

THE following General Order was issued from the Adjutant-General's Office at Poona on the 29th ultimo:—In notifying to the Bombay Army the retirement of Brigadier-General A. G. F. Hogg, from the position of Quartermaster-General, which he has held for five years, H.E. the Commander-in-Chief takes this opportunity of recording his high appreciation of the excellent service performed by Brigadier-General Hogg and of the manner in which he has conducted the duties of his department. His Excellency feels sure that the Bombay Army, for whose welfare Brigadier-General Hogg has so earnestly and conscientiously worked, will join with him in regretting General Hogg's retirement from the Quartermaster-General's Department, and in good wishes for his future welfare and advancement.

CAPTAIN BAXTER, R.E., has invented a new field kitchen, which is likely to supersede any of those now in use, on account of its extreme simplicity and portability. It consists of a series of annular kettles, the central tubes of which, when the kettles are placed one over the other, form a continuous flue or chimney. The combustion of the wood or fuel is thus maintained by the strong induced draught; and any sort of combustible matter will burn freely. The kettles are made of diminishing size, so that they can be packed one in the other. The kitchen would be particularly useful in a boat, where a little sand strewed on the bottom would sufficiently guard against fire. A field kitchen, to cook for sixty men, measures, when packed, fifteen inches in diameter by fourteen inches high, and can be carried by one person with ease.

Miscellaneous.

SINHALESE COMPANY FOR EUROPE.—Arrangements have been made with the members who formed the Sinhalese Comedy entitled Princess Johana in Kotahena with great success a few weeks ago to proceed to Europe on a continental tour. The company consists of eighteen persons, who are to receive three sovereigns each a month with free board and free passage there and back. The comedy has been translated into English by Mr. J. M. Perera, of Hill-street, Colombo. A well-known schoolmaster of Grand Pass is also to accompany them as a descriptive lecturer.—Cor.

ARBORICULTURE IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The expenditure on arboriculture in the Central Provinces during the years 1883-84 was Rs. 19,135, against Rs. 18,150 in the previous years. Of the former sum Rs. 15,585 was provided from local funds, and Rs. 2,550 was expended by the Public Works Department in maintaining avenues and groves on the roads under their charge. Most trees were planted out in the Hoshangabad district, and next comes Jabalpur, whilst no planting operations were undertaken in the Nagpur, Chanda, Seoni, Mandla, Betul, and Raipur districts. Private individuals are reported to have planted out 9,434 trees in avenues and 1,982 in groves, upwards half of which were planted in the Hoshangabad district, and the next largest numbers in Nimar. In the returns from some of the districts, however, it appears that the number of trees planted from public funds and by private individuals have been mixed up together, so that it is impossible to arrive at the exact expenditure. In fact the Chief Commissioner admits "that no safe deduction can be drawn from the returns as they stand."

TRAGIC AFFAIR AT KOLHAPUR.—One of those tragedies, which have been becoming far too frequent in India of late, was enacted there last week. A private of the local corps (familiarily known as the K. I.) shot two of his comrades dead while they were going through aiming drill. Of course, there was a woman at the bottom of it. Victim number one had been intriguing with the wife of the murderer, and on that very morning taunted the latter, who came on parade with his musket ready loaded. He fired at the distance of a few paces, the bullet entered the back, passed round the region of the heart, and being diverted by the right ribs, glanced off at a tangent, and went clean through the head of victim number two, who was about fifteen paces off. When the murderer saw the second man, who was a friend of his, fall, he too fell to the ground in an agony of remorse. He was at once secured and has been tried and sentenced to death by the Sessions Judge, Mr. Joshi. Directly the affair was reported to him, the Political Agent, it is said, issued orders for all the ammunition to be withdrawn from all the men in the lines. This was a most wise precaution, for it is well-known that such deeds are infectious. It is to be hoped that Government will adopt the course which was strongly urged in our columns some months ago, and not leave any ammunition with the rank and file, whether native or British.—Deccan Herald.

TO-MORROW'S DEMONSTRATION AGAINST THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

FROM an advertisement in another column it will be seen that to-morrow, Feb. 25, the "London Committee of Bengal landholders and others interested in the welfare of the agricultural community of Bengal and Behar," will hold a Conference on the Bengal Tenancy Bill at Willis's Rooms, under the auspices of the Liberty and Property Defence League and the Indian Constitutional Association. The Earl of Wemyss, President of the Defence League, will take the chair at 2.45 P.M.; and we learn that a large number of gentlemen interested, including many members of both Houses of Parliament, have intimated their intention of being present.

It is very generally felt that the interference with freedom of contract and the confiscation of the rights of property, involved in this attempt to force some of the worst features of recent Irish land-legislation on the peaceful and prosperous agricultural community of Bengal, are so unjust and impolitic in themselves, as well as so utterly subversive of all confidence in British faith, as to deserve the severest condemnation of all honest men. It is altogether idle to pretend that the Bill has been so emasculated as to be rendered innocuous. It still contains all those iniquitous clauses which invalidate all "contracts to the contrary." It still maintains in full force the monstrous theory that rents are not to be considered "fair" unless they accord with the whims and fancies of an officer of a despotic Government. It still insists on the legal presumption, as against a landlord, that every tenant has held for twelve years, and has therefore acquired "fixity of tenure"—although Mr. Justice Field and the highest judicial authorities have conclusively shown that it is often impossible for the landlord, under any circumstances, to rebut this presumption, which is therefore cruelly unjust to him. It still offers every encouragement to sub-letting, thereby creating a new class of drones—men who, by the very nature of their position, are certain to be the worst and most oppressive of rack-renters—to fatten on the toil of the poor cultivators, and to oust the original landholders from their position and interest in the land.

And the worst of it is that the new Bill—for the Bill as recast in Select Committee is virtually a new Bill—cannot be seen in the vernacular, much less considered or studied, in the more remote rural districts for many weeks to come, for its provisions were only published in Calcutta on February 13. And yet it is stated that the Bill will be brought up for final consideration, and debated until passed, next Friday, February 27! This mode of procedure, which appears to have been dictated by Lord Ripon's coercion from home, is curiously in contrast with the flaring "Resolution" put forth by Lord Ripon's Government some two years ago, when it was declared to be the intention of the Government of India that all important legislative proposals should be fully discussed in the public Press before being passed into law. That the Bill as now finally revised is entirely a novel one obviously follows from the following consideration, if from no other: the recommendations of the Select Committee of last year, and those of the Bengal Government published in the Gazette of October 11 last, were diametrically opposed to each other on many of the most important points, and mutually destructive—and no one, until last week, knew for certain which of these two authorities the Government of India would elect to follow as a guide for its final proposals. It seems to us absolutely impossible for the Government, with any regard for decency—putting aside all considerations of justice or equity—to rush this Bill into law without a full and due publication of its details in the vernacular Gazettes, and ample opportunity given for its consideration by the vast populations to whom it is a matter of life and death.

THE RUSSO-AFGHAN CRISIS.

THE crisis in our relations with Russia—the delay of which has only been a question of Russian convenience, ever since the Kandahar "scuttle" threw away all the advantages gained on our frontier by the last Afghan war—seems now to be coming on us in grim earnest. The prescience of Lord Beaconsfield and Lord Lytton indicated the events which are now occurring, as certain to occur whenever the Russian authorities might think the English power hampered by difficulties in other parts of the world; and the criminal blunders of those who sneered at Lord Beaconsfield's political foresight, and who hounded that great man from office, have now provided Russia—at least so it is thought at St. Petersburg—with the wished-for opportunity.

We do not share the Russian belief in England's weakness, even in face of the Soudan blunders and crimes of the present imbecile Administration. If England be to England true—with Lord Dufferin in power at Calcutta, and Lord Salisbury to support him in Downing-street—there is no reason to doubt for a moment our power to retrieve even the fatal Kandahar mistake, provided the national resolution be taken at once, and with that dogged determination which characterises the English race when once fairly roused. But the time is one for immediate action. The last shreds of Ministerial hypocrisy, labouring to defend or disguise the policy of 1880 now utterly discredited by events, must be torn away. The Ameer must be strengthened by every means in our power—the railway to Kandahar pushed on with all speed—Herat fortified by the aid of our engineers—and Russia clearly shown that we have at last assumed that determined attitude which we ought never to have given up.

The demands of M. Lessar for an "ethnographical" frontier—i.e., for the incorporation in Russia of all Afghanistan north of the mountains—amount simply and plainly to a demand for the dismemberment of the dominions of our ally at Kabul. Even the most craven adherents of the present Government have always admitted that we must strive for "a strong, united, and friendly Afghanistan." Will Lord Kimberley and Mr. Cross consent to see this consummation of this purpose in the annexation by Russia of some of the fairest Afghan provinces?

DEPUTATION TO THE VICEROY.—A deputation of the president, vice-presidents, and members of the India Union waited on his Excellency the Viceroy on Saturday, to present an address of welcome. The presentation took place in the Throne Room at Government House. His Excellency was attended by Mr. Mackenzie Wallace, his private secretary, and Mr. Burn, A.D.C. The deputation was headed by his Highness the Maharajah of Durbhungah. His Excellency, in reply to the address, said:—"Maharajah and Gentlemen,—In the first place I must express the great satisfaction which I have experienced from the views of the deputation having been conveyed to me through the instrumentality of one of our great native nobles, who has already taken a most honourable and distinguished part in the administration of the country, and whose talents and capacity are in themselves a proof of the very great advantages which the Government of India may derive from the assistance of the leading nobles and gentlemen of the land. I have already had so many occasions of expressing my desire to meet the wishes and to satisfy the demands of all classes of Her Majesty's subjects in India that I need not again repeat it, but I can assure you that I regard it as a very great advantage that personages like yourselves, who are authorised to speak on behalf of large sections of the community, who exercise a legitimate and useful influence over numbers of their fellow-subjects should come to me, as you have done, with an address in which there is formulated, in a very business-like and practical manner, the various suggestions which you have to offer to the Government of India. It is by reducing your wishes to this shape that we, on our part, will be able best to comprehend in what way we can legislate for the general good of the country. I will not touch upon any of the points which you have raised, as this would not be the proper place for me to do so, but I will carefully consider every one of them in turn, and although the duration of the term of office of a Viceroy is hardly long enough to enable him to do very much for the improvement of the general legislation of the country, I still hope that by the application of my best efforts to the task, I may be able to go away with the conviction that at all events my term of office shall not have been barren of results. I thank you heartily for those personal expressions of good-will contained in your address, and I can assure you that I have no higher ambition than to merit your confidence and to discharge my duty faithfully to the Queen-Emress and to the people of India. The Maharajah of Durbhungah then introduced the members of the deputation severally to his Excellency, and shortly afterwards the deputation took their leave and withdrew.—Indian Daily News.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

INDIAN TEA.—Messrs. G. White and Co. report as follows on the Tea Market, from the 12th to the 19th inst.:—The inquiry for good useful to finest kinds continues fairly steady, but there has been considerable irregularity in the biddings for undesirable parcels, which have in some instances ruled in buyer's favour. The quality, as a rule, is good, especially the Cachars and Sylhets, whilst some of the Darjeelings, possessing the full, cold weather flavour, have realised high rates, notably the Selimbong Mark, the Broken Pekoe of which sold at 3s. 5d., and the Pekoe at 2s. 5½d. per lb. Many of the Assams, though well made in leaf, are still light in the cup, and consequently sell at comparatively low prices, but strong and pungent kinds command high rates, especially an invoice of the Jorehaut Company's growth. Ceylon.—There has been some fine flavoured parcels sold, which show a little improvement in quality on previous shipments of the same marks, and they have commanded good competition. In some instances higher prices have been obtained owing to the small supply on offer, but it is disappointing to notice that the proportion of small breaks is still so large.

The latter briefly responded.

LIGHTS AT THE SANDHEADS.—Sailors coming to the port of Calcutta should direct their attention in an especial manner to the alterations in the lights shown at the Sandheads. The object of the changes which are being introduced is to afford sailors the benefit of each light possessing a distinctive character, so that if any one of them be sighted, all doubts as to the position of a vessel may be set at rest. At present this can only be ascertained by going close to the light ships. We need not point out to sailors how great an improvement this will be.—Indian Daily News.

The Gazette of India this week contains the treaty of friendship and commerce made between Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland and his Majesty the King of Corea. The treaty was signed in November 1883, and is now published for general information; shortly after a revolution which makes it worth very little more than the paper on which it is written. With the sanction of the Secretary of State, an improved scale of ordinary pensions has been adopted for the superior officers of the Indian Telegraph Department.

DINNER TO COL. C. J. BURNETT.—This popular officer was entertained at a dinner at the Club of Western India on the 3rd inst., the occasion being his retirement from the office of secretary of that institution, which he has held since May, 1881. He has made many improvements in the club during the time he has been connected with it. He has superintended the recent enlargement and additions to the billiard, card, and dressing-rooms, and many other minor improvements, and he has spared no pains to make the club what it really is—a financial and social success. Col. Burnett has been succeeded as secretary by Captain Elliot, Assistant Quartermaster-General, and an exceedingly popular officer in the station. We understand that Col. Burnett is to be married shortly, and we take this opportunity of wishing him "all the good that good can give him."—Poona Observer.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, MARCH 3, 1885.

Notes of the Week.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, February 13th; Madras and Allahabad, February 11th; Calcutta, February 10th; Ceylon, February 8th; Burma, February 6th.

"MILITARY opinion is unanimous as to what should be done" to strengthen our position on the Russo-Afghan frontier—so telegraphs the Calcutta correspondent of the Times; and most of our readers will know that that statement is true of military opinion in England as in India. And will our tottering and "disparaged" Government have the courage and the honesty to do that which military opinion demands? It is a case of the Sibylline Books. Lord Ripon and the Gladstone Ministry have been obstinately refusing to retrace the mad scuttling that was born of the Midlothian frenzy; and they endeavour to palter with fate, by taking up, now one part, now another, of Lord Beaconsfield's and Lord Lytton's statesmanlike policy, stealthily and with every protest against its being recognised as in any way anti-Midlothian. But fate is bitter, and will not be refused; and every time they refuse, the price to India and to England increases. We entirely agree with the Times correspondent that the question, if left open much longer, will cost us millions of money, and, what is worse, thousands of valuable lives.

THE speech of the Maharajah of Darbhanga, against the Bengal Tenancy Bill in toto, upon the introduction of that sinister measure into the Viceroy's Council last Friday, ought to be read side by side with the speeches at Willis's Rooms last Wednesday. We cannot help hoping even at this late hour that the Government of India will consent to do what everyone except Lord Ripon now urges it to do—withdraw the Bill.

POSSIBLY Lord Dufferin, himself a magnanimous man, is waiting for Lord Ripon to do the magnanimous thing, and cease that veiled agitation in support of the Bill which has been so energetically prosecuted at the National Liberal Club and elsewhere. But, unhappily, Lord Ripon, with all his many amiable qualities, is almost the very reverse of a magnanimous man. As long as he can get men to come together, and valiantly earn a good dinner by listening to the outpourings of the Radical heart in the direction of India, so long will he not cease to say to Lord Dufferin, "If you do not do as I did, you are no friend to Cæsar."

PROBABLY no other public man in England would have consented to rend asunder a non-political Club like the Northbrook Indian Club—a Club that was doing a really valuable social work—rather than forego the petty vanity of being entertained by it at dinner. After the letters on the subject that appeared in the Times, showing that Sir Trevor Lawrence, Mr. Maclean, and others had actually been forced to retire from the Club by the action of the Committee in inviting Lord Ripon to dinner, most men would have felt it necessary to decline accepting hospitality offered under such distressing circumstances.

BUT Lord Ripon was never magnanimous. Like your true Radical, always a despot at heart, he could not suffer anyone in his entourage at Simla or in Calcutta to entertain strong political views opposed to his own; and it is, of course, notorious that more than one broken career in India was caused by this imperious spirit of intolerance.

WHY will Reuter's Agency persist in calling official members of the Viceroy's Council "independent" members? Surely Mr. Quinton is an official member, if anyone is. Was he not chosen as one of the elect by Lord Ripon himself? Why, then, call him "independent?"

If he had been independent in the full sense of the word, he would hardly have been selected by Lord Ripon. We do not mean for one moment to imply any doubt of the perfect honesty and sincerity with which his vote would be exercised, but in all Lord Ripon's appointments to the Legislative Council, save those made for appearance's sake on the recommendation of the British Indian Association, it was virtually a sine qua non that the nominee should be "sound upon the goose"—that he should always be ready, first of all, to vote for Lord Ripon, and, secondly, to vote for the abolition of landlords.

THE following letter from the Right Hon. the Earl Fortescue on the subject of the Bengal Tenancy Bill appeared in the Standard of Saturday:—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "STANDARD."

SIR,—I should be much obliged by your kind insertion of this letter, to correct an error in your report of what I said at the Bengal Tenancy Bill meeting on the 25th.

I did not say then that "the Bill had united Zemindars and Ryots against the landowners"; for the Zemindars are practically, what they are often called, the landowners of Bengal, and the ryots are their tenants; nor did I say, as reported in some other papers, that the Ilbert Bill had planted the seeds of the Tenancy Bill.

What I did say was, that the Ilbert Bill, the mischievous effects of proposing which had been by no means undone by its extensive later modification, had strongly revived the antagonism of races, which had been gradually subsiding since its fullest development during the Indian Mutiny; but that the Bengal Tenancy Bill had apparently united the Native Zemindars and Ryots with almost all the English there in cordial opposition to its present provisions.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

FORTESCUE.

40, Belgrave-square, S.W., Feb. 27.

MR. MATTHEW ARNOLD has consented to preside at the meeting of the Indian section of the Society of Arts on the 13th inst., when a paper will be read by Mr. Mancherjee M. Bhownagaree on "The Present Condition and Future Prospects of Female Education in India."

GENERAL J. T. WALKER, C.B., F.R.S., LL.D., late Surveyor-General of India, read a paper making special reference to the present position of affairs on the North-west frontier of India, before a large and influential gathering at the Royal United Service Institution on Friday last.

WE take the following items of Personal Intelligence of our Indian visitors from the Journal of the National Indian Association:—

The Examiners for the Boden Sanskrit Scholarship have provisionally elected (subject to receiving satisfactory proof of age) L. G. Bhadbhade, commoner of Balliol College, Oxford.

THE following gentlemen were called to the Bar on January 27th:—Kumar Shri Harbhamji Ravaji of Morvi, B.A., Cambridge (Lincoln's Inn); Khurode Behary Dutt, Calcutta University (Lincoln's Inn); Jijibhai Edalji Modi, B.A. Bombay University (Lincoln's Inn); Mohammed Rafique, B.A. Cambridge (Middle Temple); Jitendra Nath Palit, Campbell Foster prizeman, Common Law prizeman and scholar (Middle Temple); Mohammed Abdul Majid (Middle Temple).

Mr. Abu Reza has joined the Inner Temple.

Departure.—Mr. Mohan med Abdul Majid, for Allahabad.

THE Englishman has the following account of the Calcutta Freight Market, corrected to February 10 :—

A very fair amount of business has again been done in our freight market since last mail, both in steam and sailing vessels. Rates have been throughout very firm, and may be quoted slightly better for steamers during the last few days. Our unfixed tonnage has somewhat decreased, and amounts to 22,000 tons to-day.

THE Times of India has the following obituary till the departure of the mail, February 13 :—

Mr. E. Ashworth, Bengal Civil Service; the Rev. J. D'Erceville, S.J., Tanjore.

Telegraphic Intelligence.

The following telegrams have been received from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated Jan. 26 :—

"It may now be asserted rather confidently that if nothing unexpected happens the Ameer will meet the Viceroy somewhere in the Punjab during the latter's journey to Simla. The place and details of the meeting are not yet settled.

"It is a matter for regret that the meeting could not be arranged to take place earlier in the year, in Calcutta, as the journey hither and the sights of the capital could not have failed strongly to impress the Ameer.

"The difficulty hitherto has been the danger of a revolution in Cabul during his absence, as his sons are still very young, while Parwannah Khan, his only devoted adherent, is a man of little influence.

"It is rumoured that Sir Leppel Griffin will proceed to Jellalabad for the purpose of escorting the Ameer to India."

"So far as is known here, the position on the Afghan frontier is this :—The Russians have advanced up to the Afghan outposts at several points, but no conflict has occurred. The further development of the question depends on the negotiations proceeding between London and St. Petersburg."

The following telegrams have been received from Calcutta, through Reuter's Agency, dated Feb. 27 :—

"Sir Stuart Bayley to-day laid before the Viceroy's Council the report of the Select Committee upon the Bengal Rent Bill. He explained at great length the various amendments, and expressed the opinion that the Bill as amended dealt perfectly fairly with all the interests affected. Under the circumstances he thought the measure might with advantage be passed. The Maharajah of Durbungah, representing the landed interests, then spoke strongly against the Bill, and was followed by Mr. Quinton and Mr. Evans, independent members, who approved its general principles, but criticised adversely some of its details. They thought there was no necessity for the republication of the Bill. The debate was afterwards adjourned until Monday. The newspapers are unanimous in urging the Government to abandon the measure, which, they say, if carried through is likely to lead to grave consequences.

"Monster meetings are being held against the Bill in all parts of Bengal."

"The Nizam and the Punjab Chiefs have offered to furnish a contingent for service in the Soudan."

The following is the usual weekly telegram from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated March 1 :—

"The debate on the Tenancy Bill began in the Legislative Council on Friday. Sir Stuart Bayley, in a long speech, moved that the report of the Select Committee be taken into consideration. After premising that the question of the necessity of the proposed measure had been decided on the second reading, he proceeded to explain and justify the alterations made by the Committee, and asserted that the Bill would benefit the ryots. By facilitating acquirement and proof of occupancy rights, by preventing occupancy ryots contracting themselves out of status, by checking incessant enhancements, by securing improvements, and by preventing multiplication of rent suits, it would give reasonable security to the tenant without injustice to the landlord. He strongly protested against further delay, and asked the Council to reject the amendment of Peary Mohun Mookerjee, which is that the Bill be republished, and consideration of it postponed for three months. There was, Sir Stuart Bayley said, ample evidence from all parts of the province that agitation on the subject could not be safely prolonged, and that whatever was done with the Bill should be done finally, and at once. Mr. Quinton followed on the same side.

"Then came the speech of the principal opponent of the Bill, the Maharajah of Durbungah, who described the measure as disapproved and discredited by all parties, as opposed by the ryots as well as by the zemindars. There was not, he said, a single ryot or zemindar who desired to see it passed. Surely they knew their own interests. He looked upon the Bill as disastrous from every point of view. As a flagrant breach of permanent settlement it would shake the confidence of zemindars in the Government. It would be disastrous to the zemindars as depriving them of rights, and rendering the zemindary management impossible; and it would be disastrous to the ryots because it would give rise to endless disputes and litigation. He was strongly of opinion that the Bill should be withdrawn. Mr. Evans then spoke shortly, devoting himself chiefly to a telling attack on the clauses restricting enhancement of rent by private contract. The debate was then adjourned to Monday. It was announced that the Council would sit daily (except on Tuesdays and Saturdays) till the debate was finished. As the amendments number about 130, it may be expected that the debate will be long.

"I have said more than once that the original Bill has been greatly cut down by the Select Committee, and that in its present form it appears to outsiders comparatively innocuous. But it is impossible to ignore the fact that it has pleased none of the classes affected, and has been received with a storm of disapproval hardly less violent than that which met the original sweeping proposals. The small knot of ardent reformers to whom it owes its birth complain that it is reduced to a practical nullity. The Maharajah of Durbungah did not overstate the case in saying that zemindars and ryots alike disapprove it. The Press of every shade of politics is all but unanimous in attacking it. It is hardly too much to say that it has not a single real friend. Yet, if the Government insist on passing it, it is absolutely certain that the obedient official majority in the Council will carry it into law within the next few days, and will once more present the spectacle, too often presented by the Indian Legislature, of forcing, for the sake of an idea, a needless and irritating measure upon a reluctant people. The matter now rests with Lord Kimberley, and although I have no authority for the assertion I think I may safely hazard it—that the Indian Government would hail with pleasure a word which would enable it to drop this unhappy measure, and turn its undivided attention to graver affairs now springing up on all sides.

"The recent resolution of the Bengal Government on the subject of alleged cruelty in the Calcutta gaol is being violently attacked by the native Press. It may be remembered that the Committee of Inquiry found the charges of cruelty wholly false or grossly exaggerated; but also found that the superintendent had introduced some illegal punishments. For this offence he was severely censured, and informed that any repetition of them would lead to forfeiture of his appointment. The native Press considers that the penalty should have been heavier, and abuses the Lieutenant-Governor for his leniency in a fashion peculiarly its own. Scurrility and personal abuse are unfortunate characteristics of the Bengal native papers whenever they have occasion to mention the Lieutenant-Governor. They have never forgiven his honest, outspoken condemnation of the misdirected aspirations of a small section who control their policy; and it is evident they are now trying to discredit him with the new Viceroy and commit the latter to that career of popularity-hunting which proved fatal to the success of his predecessor. It is hardly likely, however, that Lord Dufferin will fall into the trap.

"A memorial signed by almost all the mercantile firms in Calcutta has been presented to the Government praying it to stop further work on the new docks until the matter has been fully reconsidered. Every day makes it clearer that the opinion of the mercantile community is all but unanimous in opposition to the scheme.

"The Lieutenant-Governor on Wednesday laid the foundation of the new buildings for the Calcutta Girls' School, and took the opportunity to deliver a speech urging the claims upon the charity of the community of a large number of Eurasian children in the city, who without such help must grow up in poverty and ignorance.

"The scarcity in portions of Madras and Mysore is increasing, and is causing considerable suffering. Relief works are opened, and every effort is being made to alleviate distress. There is also some distress in portions of Burdwan and adjoining districts.

"Orders have been issued to stop the work on the Jhansi and Manickpore Railway. About 40,000 men have been dismissed. It is believed that this is owing to the necessity of applying the funds to the pushing on of the frontier railways."

"Telegrams received at Rangoon from Mandalay state that Bhamo has been recaptured by the Burmese, and that the Chinese leader is killed.

"The Irrawady gunboat, belonging to the Indian Government, leaves Rangoon for the frontier to-morrow, taking Captain Anson, of Her Majesty's ship Dragon, and a party of blue jackets. She has been strengthened and armed with Nordenfeldt guns and two 25-pounders.

"This evidently is only a measure of precaution, as it is now clear that the Indian Government does not intend to proceed immediately to active measures. King Theebaw must wait. It is fortunate for him that the Madhi at Khartoum and the Russians at Sarakhs have given full occupation to the English and Indian Governments. However desirable it may be to settle the Burmah question, that question has not yet become immediately pressing, and, unless Theebaw bursts all bounds, its solution may well wait."

"Nothing is yet definitely settled as to the details of the meeting between the Viceroy and the Ameer. Indeed, it is still possible that events may take some turn to prevent the occurrence of the meeting. Various places have been mentioned as likely to be the scene of the interview—Rawulpindee, Umballa, Lahore, Peshawur, and Campbellpore. Of these the first is considered the most probable. It is doubtful also whether Sir Lepel Griffin will meet the Ameer at Jelalabad, as rumoured. The Viceroy will probably leave Calcutta about the 20th, and, unless something unexpected occurs, the meeting will come off about a week later.

"The general feeling is that this is a step in the right direction. Such a meeting should have taken place at least a year ago, but it may be hoped that it is not yet too late. There can be no doubt that the Russo-Afghan question is rapidly approaching a critical stage. The Russian advance is a common topic of talk in every bazaar in Northern India, and the subject of discussion in every native paper. The Lahore Civil and Military Gazette states that merchants of Shirkapore, men who have extensive dealings with Central Asia, believe that Russia is massing a large army on the frontiers of Herat. The Pioneer hears from Persia that the Cossack outposts have advanced considerably south of Pul-i-Khatun. Even in the Calcutta bazaars alarmist rumours have been rife for the last fortnight, and many natives firmly believe that Russia is threatening not only Herat, but also Balka and Chitral.

"That a deep-seated feeling of uneasiness and expectation pervades all classes is a fact beyond all doubt. It is equally beyond doubt that nothing short of a bold declaration of policy and decided action on our part will put an end to that feeling. Military opinion is unanimous as to what should be done. The fullest confidence is felt that Lord Dufferin will take the wisest view of the situation and give the soundest advice to the Ministry. If only the Ministry will follow his advice and face the position boldly, there is still a fair prospect of settling, at a small outlay of money and without the loss of a single life, a question which, if left open many months longer, will certainly cost India and England many millions of money and many valuable lives.

H.M.S. "CROCODILE."—The Indian troopship Crocodile, which will leave Portsmouth this (Tuesday) afternoon, will take out to India 53 officers and a total of 898 men, principally drafts from the 2nd Seaforth Highlanders and the 2nd Warwickshire, 2nd Somersetshire, 1st Worcestershire, and the 2nd Devonshire Regiments. One hundred and three men of the 2nd Hampshire Regiment will join at Malta.

INDIA AND ZANZIBAR.—On Friday next a paper, "Trade between India and East Africa," will be read by Mr. Frederic Holmwood, British Consul at Zanzibar, before the Indian Section of the Society of Arts. Major-General Sir Frederic Goldsmid will preside. Cards of admission can be obtained on application to the Secretary of the Indian Section, John-street, Adelphi.

THE STATE OF BURMAH.—At the meeting of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce held on Wednesday last it was resolved, on the suggestion of the East India and China Committee, to send a resolution to the Secretary of State for India declaring that, the trade of British Burmah being injuriously affected by the lawless condition of upper native Burmah, the Chamber ventured to urge upon Her Majesty's Government the importance of taking immediate steps for the protection of British commerce in the said country. In support of this resolution, Mr. Robert Gladstone stated that at the present moment the trade of Rangoon was practically ruined. By far the greater number of rice millers were in great trouble and distress. Those who had business with the upper country found that they could not carry out their contracts, because dealers were so much harassed by the King of Burmah, and there was great danger even to the lives of those who were engaged in the trade. Bands of robbers crossed the frontier, and after destroying property escaped back to the interior.

We are informed that Major-General John C. Hannington, late of the Bengal Army, Assistant Financial Secretary at the India Office, has retired.

OBITUARY.

GENERAL ANDREW WILLIAM M'INTYRE, of the Royal (late Madras) Artillery, died on Thursday, at his residence in Leinster-square, aged seventy years. He served in the China expedition, and commanded the 2nd Hyderabad Cavalry in the Rohil a campaign of 1851-52, the South District Brigade in Madras from 1869 to 1874, and the Hyderabad subsidiary force from 1874 till 1881. General M'Intyre was nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath (military division) in 1858.

THE SAFETY OF ENGLISHWOMEN AND THEIR CHILDREN.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—Permit me to make a few more observations regarding the necessity of providing for the safety of English ladies in India during a time of disturbance.

When the Mutiny of 1857 broke out all the Europeans at my station were invited to meet in the billiard-room to consult, and to adopt measures for the safety of the European community. The civil and sessions judge was voted into the chair, and the joint magistrate was made secretary. All of the resolutions were agreed to with two exceptions.

1st. It was proposed to detain a steamer at the landing place in readiness to carry away the Europeans.

2nd. It was proposed that the chief magistrate should write to Government for European soldiers to defend the station.

The chief magistrate was obliged to refuse both requests, as the detention of a steamer might cause irreparable mischief, and as Government was the best judge where our few European soldiers should be stationed.

Now the same thing is sure to occur on another outbreak. The Europeans in small stations, in factories, and in commercial towns will cry out for protection by English soldiers. Will our Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief have the nerve to refuse to comply with these cries, and to incur the blame of not preventing the murder of ladies and children? If our Government should be so ill-advised as to disperse and scatter our European army, we shall lose the empire.

Lord Canning was so conscious of the difficulty that he issued a circular, requiring that European ladies should be sent down to Calcutta for safety: I am sorry to write that this order was disobeyed by many: even the brave Chunar pensioners I understand refused to obey, so obstinate are Englishmen in the desire to have their own way.

I hope that Lord Dufferin will be ready on an emergency to proclaim that Her Majesty's Forces in India cannot be scattered about at the cry of the helpless, and that he will offer to pay the travelling expenses of non-combatant Europeans to the nearest seaport, and that he will advise all combatant Europeans to volunteer for temporary service under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief.

For the protection of native Christians special arrangements must be made in various parts of India: centres of refuge will be of vital use to them. Numbers of them will volunteer to fight as they did in 1857. In our levy of 150 natives thirty were Christians.—Your obedient Servant, February 25th.

ANOTHER MOPLAH DISTURBANCE APPREHENDED.—We hear that the Madras Railway authorities have been requested to have a special train, consisting of ten vehicles, in readiness for troops at any time, either day or night, as these may be required to be despatched to Malliapooram in the event of a disturbance occurring there.—Times.

MR. WILLIAM DIGBY, C.I.E.—The Jam-e-Jamshed, commenting upon the letter written by Mr. William Digby to the Times of India, says that Mr. Digby is one of the few Englishmen who have the welfare and well-being of the inhabitants of India at heart. Mr. Digby's services to India during his journalistic career as well as in connection with the last famine in Madras are still fresh in the minds of the people. He has not forgotten the poor Indians even after his retirement to enjoy higher honours in England. His comments on Mr. Justice Scott's letter are worth their weight in gold, and will, no doubt, be taken to heart by those who have not, from various reasons, been able to fathom the Indian mind. It is only when men like Mr. Digby drive deep into the human heart that they are able to perceive the merits and the capacities of the inhabitants of this country.

WIDENING AND DEEPENING THE SUEZ CANAL.

The Grand Technical Commission having arrived at a decision on the question of widening and deepening the existing canal, or constructing a second or parallel passage, we may now consider this vexed question as practically settled. The conclusion arrived at will be disappointing to those who worked with so much vigour for the making of a second, or British parallel canal. The existing canal has occasioned a great sacrifice of British life and money; but a duplicate water-way under the jurisdiction of Her Majesty would have complicated the diplomatic relations of this country with the other Governments of Europe. Russian writers say that if the British authorities retain possession of Egypt, and place themselves in a position to close the canal in the event of a war, they must have roads opened elsewhere, even though they have to occupy the provinces between the Danube and Constantinople; or, should that be impossible, they will annex Persia and open communication by the Persian Gulf. The Germans advocate absorption of Luxembourg and Holland; and Austria is to be compensated by advancing to the Sea of Marmora, including the Dardanelles. None of these events may happen; but, as a German writer remarked last year, "The English are seizing territory, and converting the Mediterranean into a British lake by holding Egypt, and we must follow her example and tread on her heels everywhere." That was written before Prince Bismarck began his colonising theories, and it may have expressed the national feeling of the Germans, who declare that when one State possesses Gibraltar, Malta, and Egypt it is the duty of others to look after their own interests. Jealousies have been created by British interference in Egypt, and a scramble for land has resulted therefrom. The end has not yet come to these international conflicts. Whether Her Majesty's forces remain in the land of the Pharaoh's, or the French "hunger after the flesh-pots of the Egyptians" the canal will remain; and, as it needs improvement, we think that the Grand Technical Commission have chosen the best plan for achieving the object which all desire to see accomplished. The reasons advanced for enlarging the canal instead of making another agree so closely with those enunciated through these columns on December 6th, 1883, and 28th July, 1884, that they read like a paraphrase. We pointed out the advantages a broad canal would possess in which ships could pass each other with ease and safety to too narrow water-ways. The Grand Technical Commission have recommended that the channel of the canal be made eighty-two metres wide at the top, and seventy metres wide at the bottom. A metre is 39·37 inches. Throughout its entire course the canal is to be given a depth of eight and a half metres below low-water mark. It is proposed that its depth should be ultimately increased to nine metres. The Technical Commission are of opinion that when the projected improvements have been executed the canal will be capable of carrying an almost indefinite traffic. The width at the bottom will be trebled, and with deeper water the largest ships will be enabled to pass through without lightening. A commencement has been made by dredging to deepen the depth of water by half a metre. The cost of the entire improvements will amount to an estimated sum of £8,120,000; but there cannot be the least difficulty in finding this increased capital. Shares bearing interest with the original issues could be placed on the market at a premium. It was proposed that the new bonds should be guaranteed by the British Government, in which case they would bear a low rate of interest. As Sir John Coode said, a canal that could double its traffic in five years had a great future before the holders of its stock. The directors of the Suez Canal believe that if proceedings are pushed forward with spirit the improvements may be completed in about two years. There will be no impediments placed in the way of navigation during the progress of the works. The canal proper and the Bitter Lake will be widened, as also Lake Timsah, by dredging, and the marks and buoys removed to the sides of the deep water. After all the stir that was made about the Suez Canal and its management it is pleasant to learn the issue. The dues may be paid in England; the British have more representatives on the board of direction; and the canal is to be adapted to quicker movements. No time will be lost when the enlargements are finished in stopping at sidings to allow vessels coming in an opposite direction to pass; and if a proper system of lighting is inaugurated there should be no insuperable obstacles to night navigation. There have been suggestions for illuminating the channel by electricity. Pilots and masters of ships did not approve of taking big steamers through a narrow canal between sunset and sunrise, aided by electric lights. The deviation of a few feet would drive the bows of ships on the slopes where they would have to discharge a large quantity of cargo to reduce their draught. There are ships that steer badly, and such vessels want a little more room than those that answer their helms readily. Besides which in strong winds, and easterly gales particularly, steering in a confined space has its disadvantages. It would be possible to connect the rows of red and black buoys with electric wire, and thus present an unbroken guide. These, however, are matters of detail which are capable of being solved by the staff of the company. We congratulate shipowners, therefore, in a prospective reduction of expenses, and flatter ourselves that we have materially contributed in the final development of the scheme.—Liverpool Journal of Commerce.

LORD LAWRENCE MEMORIAL FUND.

It may interest those who have contributed to this fund to know that the executive committee have given orders for the final winding-up of the accounts. It will be remembered that in July, 1879, very shortly after Lord Lawrence's death, meetings were held at which it was resolved to make public appeals for funds to erect a suitable memorial to him. The appeal was made on two main points; first, that by his wisdom and justice he attached the Indians to our rule; and, secondly, that in the crisis of the Mutiny his qualities and conduct played a very large part in maintaining the connection between England and India. And two main objects were proposed; first, to erect a statue in London; and, secondly, to promote the education of young Indians.

The appeal was largely answered in England and in India, and somewhat upwards of £7,000 was collected.

The sculptor selected for the statue was Mr. Boehm, and his work was set up in Waterloo-place in the autumn of 1881. The figure was one of great power, and in its massive face and neck was faithful to the original, but its carriage and attitude were not those of Lord Lawrence, and, after it had been put up, the sculptor himself became highly dissatisfied with it. With great public spirit and ardour for his art he requested the committee to be allowed to make a new statue, and the result is the noble figure now to be seen in Waterloo-place. Mr. Boehm intended himself to bear the whole burden of this substitution, but the committee thought it would hardly accord with Lord Lawrence's honour to allow that, and they accordingly requested his acceptance of a further sum of £500 in addition to the £2,000, which was the original cost. The surplus is to be handed over to the Government of India for the establishment of Lawrence Studentships for young natives of the Punjab, North-West Provinces, Central Provinces, and Oude. The Government of India have a very large discretion given them as to the modes of applying the fund, provided that they apply it "in some manner which shall at the same time be commemorative of Lord Lawrence and beneficial to the people over whom he ruled."

Each Lawrence Student is also to receive a gold medal stamped with a striking likeness of Lord Lawrence, after a design by Mr. Woolner. The only other person who will possess a gold medal is Lord Lawrence's widow, for whom the committee ordered a single one to be struck.

Detailed accounts of the fund have been published from time to time in the newspapers, and a final notice will be published when the last arrangements have been completed. In the meantime, the subscribers may like to know that, somewhat over £2,600 having been spent on the statue and the medals, the surplus for education will be about £4,500.

THE AFGHAN DIFFICULTY AGAIN.

The visit of the Ameer of Afghanistan to India, which is now officially announced, affords Ministers an opportunity of repairing in some measure the grave mistake they made in evacuating Candahar, and reversing the policy of the late Government in regard to Afghan affairs. It is useless now to inquire whether the deposition of Shere Ali and the war in Afghanistan were justifiable or not. In any event, when Ministers came into power five years ago, they found that the country had expended much blood and treasure in establishing its authority in Afghanistan, and that, in fact, a position was then occupied which barred the advance of Russia upon India. But Mr. Gladstone and his more prominent followers not only denounced the original invasion of Afghanistan as unjustifiable, they also declared that the suspicion of Russia was unjust, and that the true policy of England in regard to Central Asia was to welcome the extension of Russian authority. Consequently, Mr. Gladstone's Cabinet proceeded to reverse in every particular the policy of their predecessors. At the time we strongly declared our opinion that Mr. Gladstone was preparing calamities for the Empire, and time has not been slow in verifying our prediction. Already the Russians have advanced close to Herat, Russian and Afghan troops are face to face with one another on the frontier, and the indiscretion of a Russian officer or an Afghan chief may plunge the two countries into war. So serious has the aspect of affairs become, that Russia has despatched a commission to London to endeavour to come to an arrangement; but she has put forward such exorbitant claims that even Lord Granville is obliged to resist. The approaching visit of the Ameer is an indication, we hope, that at last Ministers have awakened from their dream, and that a resolute determination to allow no further advance of Russian territory has been arrived at. If Ministers will allow free scope to Lord Dufferin we have little doubt that proper measures will be taken. Fresh from St. Petersburg, he is thoroughly acquainted with Russian designs, and may be trusted to checkmate them, if his discretion is not interfered with. As he has arranged to meet the Ameer, we must presume that in addition to the subvention which has been regularly given to the Ameer, and to the promise that we shall stand by him in case of unprovoked aggression, Lord Dufferin will pledge himself in distinct terms to protect Afghanistan against Russia, and will provide the Ameer with the means of effectually aiding in maintaining the independence of his country. But he must not be prevented from doing what he deems necessary. Nor must considerations of expense be permitted to hinder him from doing it efficiently. Indecision and division upon this question would be disastrous. The country will not tolerate such an advance of Russian troops as would imperil India; and if the Russians are allowed to think that they can frighten Mr. Gladstone's Government, and carry their own measures with a high hand, it is almost certain that we shall find ourselves quickly at war with them.—Statist.

GOVERNMENT AS A LANDLORD.

As yet the public mind has not recovered the calmness which was ruffled by the horrors brought to light in the Midnapore Khas Mehal ryots' cases, and here is another case in which also Government as a private landlord figures not at all creditably, to say the least of it. "The liberal policy which this Government," we quote from our Lieutenant-Governor's famous letter of the 15th September, 1884, on the Bengal Tenancy Bill, "has inaugurated in all its dealings with ryots, and in all questions connected with land—a policy which, in harmony with that recently enunciated by the Government of India in regard to Land Revenue Settlements, has, to some extent, anticipated the Bill"—could not have developed itself better in the interest of Khas Mehal ryots than in the enhancements of their rents per saltrum from 40 to 400 per cent., not in one or two cases, or in one or two places, but in hundreds of cases, and in twenty different places. It is, of course, good for Khas Mehal tenants to have their rents enhanced two hundredfold by a single stroke of the pen; it stimulates them to increased industry, and familiarises them with some of the sweet uses of adversity; while Government, but for such enhancements, would be false to its professions of philanthropy, and open to the charge of inconsistency. It would be certainly dishonest for the authors of the Bengal Tenancy Bill to interdict zemindars from enhancing the rents of their tenants more than 12½ per cent. for 15 years, and not make it incumbent upon Government to enhance the rents of Khas Mehal tenants four hundred fold in as many minutes. Khas Mehal tenants, we know, are different specimens of human anatomy from those we see around us in private zemindaries; and, moreover, the private zemindar is a bloodsucker, and the Government, as a zemindar, is a philanthropist, and so there is absolutely no grounds of comparison between the two; and as a philanthropist Government is bound to raise rents four hundredfold, and must prevent the growth of occupancy rights, and must not have the slightest objection to enhance the rent paid at a fixed rate by a tenure-holder whose tenure may be sixty years old. It is most foolish for the zemindars to raise the charge of inconsistency against our Government. First, let the zemindars learn to treat their ryots in the same way as Government treat theirs; first, let them cultivate the philanthropy capable of sending ryots to penury and perdition at a moment's notice, to enable them to accumulate experience, which is the basis of success in life, and then let them aspire to the certificate procedure, or ask for the introduction of the Bengal Tenancy Bill into the Khas Mehal of Government. And, as the Lieutenant-Governor truly observes in the same letter from which we have quoted above, the moral of such cases as the Midnapore Ryots' cases, or the case of which the particulars we will give presently, is, that there is "an urgent necessity for the revision of the Tenancy Law throughout these provinces," for the zemindars, of course. What else can show greater necessity and urgency of checks being imposed upon the zemindars than the excesses of Government? Unable to understand or follow the sublimity of the Bengal Government's "liberal policy" in its dealings with Khas Mehal ryots—that liberal policy which was so beautifully illustrated in the Midnapore Ryots' cases—the zemindars must have some of their rights curtailed, as a matter of logic and law. And is it not praiseworthy, blushing, maidenly modesty on the part of the Lieutenant-Governor to give away some of the credit of this "liberal policy" to his subordinates? "There are officers," we are told, "who take far more extreme views of Government than the Government itself does," and the Lieutenant-Governor generously allows the credit of the "liberal policy" above referred to, or, at least, of its practical introduction, to such officers; he only patted such officers on the back, or occasionally rewarded their successes by promotion; he did and does nothing else.

The above remarks have suggested themselves to us on the perusal of a memorial submitted by certain resident cultivators of Dearah Kurji Deegha, which is a khas property of Government. This Dearah Kurji Deegha was an accretion to a permanently settled estate, by name Kurji Deegha, and was made Towfeer (Khas Mehal) after a measurement of the parent estate. Previous to this measurement, and the declaration of the Dearah land as Towfeer (excess over the area of the permanently settled estate), and its being made khas mehal, the Dearah has been in possession of the owner of the parent estate who, in order to induce the ancestor of the memorialists to cultivate these Dearah lands, gave him a permanent lease thereof at a fixed rate of 2 rupees 2 annas per bigah, by a document dated 6th Kartik, 1219. Ever since that date the lands have been in possession of the ancestor of the memorialists, and at his death of the memorialists, on payment of the fixed rent of 2 rupees per bigah to the parties with whom temporary settlement of revenue has been made by Government from time to time. The temporary settlement holder of Government revenue, on some occasions, questioned the memorialists and their ancestor's right to hold at all under the document, or to hold at a fixed rate of rent; but the rights have been always confirmed by the courts. Thus so late as 1833 this right was questioned by the farmer of Government revenue, and the Fouzdary Court, before which the deed of permanent lease was produced, confirmed the right to hold as a ryot on a fixed rent under the lease, by a Robokari dated June 5, 1833, until ousted by due course of law. In 1877 or thereabouts the then farmer of the Government revenue brought a suit for a higher rate of rent, but it was decided against him by the Muniff on Feb. 20, 1878, and this decision confirmed in appeal. Shortly before this the question of the right of the memorialists to hold at a fixed rent had come before the courts, and the Zillah Court decided in favour of them on June 30, 1874, and the decision of the Lower Courts was confirmed by the High Court on April 13, 1876. In proof of payment of a uniform rate of rent the memorialists have in their possession rent receipts for more than twenty years, i.e., from 1261 to 1285, F.S., the earlier ones being destroyed. On the expiry of the term of the last settlement the Towfeer Dearah Kurji Deegha is being managed Khas, and proceedings of a most harassing nature, the details of which had better be given in the words of the memorialists themselves, have been commenced by the local authorities under Act VIII. of 1879 (B.C.) and the certificate procedure, Act VIII. of 1868 (B.C.) to destroy the right to hold at fixed rent under the document of 1819 referred to above, and to enhance the rate of rent per Saltrum from rupees 2 per bigah to rupees 5½; in other words 175 per cent.

First a jumma-bundi, purporting to have been prepared under section 4 of Act VIII. of 1879, Bengal Council, but which has been found by the concurrent judgment of the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge to be contrary to the provisions of the law (in witness whereof your petitioners beg to refer to judgments dated 27th February, 1884, and 4th August, 1884, copies of which are herewith filed) was published in the village on the 8th September, 1882; your petitioners, who had no previous knowledge of the preparation of the jumma-bundi, and of the special and exceptional procedure provided by the law, immediately put in a petition to the collector who rejected it; then served him with a notice of suit under section 10 of the Act on the 25th October of the same year, and ere long brought a suit on the 7th January of the following year; this suit was dismissed by the Subordinate Judge (judgment dated 4th January, 1882), on the ground that it was not brought within four months of the publication of the jumma-bundi as section 10 provided, though under the Civil Procedure Code, section 424, it was necessary for your petitioner to give two months' clear notice to the collector of such suit. The district judge, however, held that your petitioners' suit was in time (judgment dated 19th March, 1883), and remanded that case for retrial. It will appear from the statement of the case as given in this last-mentioned judgment that the collector on behalf of Government did not deny the existence of the permanent lease, but pleaded that the permanent lease was not binding on Government.

On remand, the Subordinate Judge held that the permanent lease was not binding on Government; but that the jumma-bundi was contrary to the provisions of sec. 6 of Act VIII. of 1879 (B.C.), and while he dismissed the Government claim for jumma-bundi rate of 5 rupees 8 annas for the present, decreed the same rate for the further under sec. 11 of the Act on some evidence of alleged prevailing rate of rent adduced by Government. The judge on appeal by your petitioners reversed this last portion of the judgment. Since then a fresh jumma-bundi has been published at the rate of 5-8 rupees. The ground on which the enhancement of rate of rent from 2 rupees per bigah to 5 rupees 8 annas has been made is the alleged prevailing rate of the neighbourhood, a ground the Lieutenant-Governor proposes to do away with. We make no further comments, but we do hope the Lieutenant-Governor will see that while the tales invented to accuse the zemindars of rackrenting and oppression are being proved to be mere tales, more and more instances of the inquisitorial proceedings under the guise of philanthropy in the Khas Mehal of Government are coming to light in an irresistible manner to confront and confound the authors of the Bengal Tenancy Bill.—Indian Chronicle.

AGITATION AND COUNTER-AGITATION.—We understand that a telegram has been received by the Government of India from the Tirhut Landholders' Association praying that the memorial recently presented by the Bihar indigo planters shall not be considered until a counter-memorial has been submitted by the Association. By the end of the present month, it is said, a deputation from the Association will be prepared to submit the fresh memorial.—Englishman.

THE MANAGEMENT OF THE CALCUTTA JAIL.—The local Government Resolution on the management of the Presidency Jail was published on the 12th. He is made to understand that any repetition of the fault will carry with it forfeiture of his appointment.

MOFUSSIL NOTES.

(From the Indian Planter's Gazette).

THE refreshment-room at Bara Station, where Chota hazaree was supplied to passengers by the three up-train, has been closed.

MR. NORMAN, Collector of Mozufferpore, takes three months' leave to England shortly. It is not yet known who will temporarily officiate for him.

A SLIGHT fall of rain fell in Bhagulpore last week, benefiting the rabi and young indigo crops considerably. The Singhessur Mela, which commenced to-day, is expected to be larger than usual. The indigo seed crop is being harvested, and the yield promises well, but prices will rule lower than last season.

MR. G. TOOMEY does not make a long stay in Tirhoot, but returns very shortly to England, Mr. F. Shaw taking over charge of Kantai while Mr. Canning relieves the latter gentleman at Pursah. Mr. G. Llewellyn has come out but for a few weeks only, and returns ere the hot weather sets in.

MADRAS.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS and Mrs. Grant Duff embarked at Madras on the 8th ult. for Pondicherry.

MR. JOHN ALEXANDER BOYSON, of Messrs. Binny and Co., has been appointed to a seat in the Madras Legislative Council in place of Mr. Alexander Mackenzie, resigned.

MR. HOWARD VINCENT, late Director of Criminal Investigations, London, has been compelled to relinquish his intention of visiting Madras. He is now in the north of India.

THE THEOSOPHISTS.—Colonel Olcott has returned to the Adyar. Madame Blavatsky is better and is now able to resume her duties. Her medical advisers are, however, still anxious about her.

THE MADRAS WATER SUPPLY.—The supply of water from the Keratoor lake is now being supplemented by water from the Red Hills tank, in order to delay pumping as long as possible.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL E. SHAW, 22nd M.N.I., was to proceed by the mail of the 10th ult. to Rangoon, to officiate as Deputy Judge Advocate in relief of Major Chaplin, proceeding on furlough.

THE WYNAAD GOLD MINES.—A correspondent writes to the Madras Mail from the Wynaad:—"I fancy you may shortly expect a rise in Wynaad mining shares, as some of the Devallah Companies have been obtaining fair results with quartz taken from a lower level than hitherto reached; as much as eleven cwt. to the ton in one case. I of course cannot say whether stone was picked or not, or if the improvement is likely to be permanent."

THE DISARMAMENT OF THE MOPLAHS.—A proclamation by the Government of Madras ordering all the inhabitants of South Malabar to give up their fire-arms has been published. The fanatical and ignorant inhabitants of the wild and hilly district situated at the foot of the Nilgiris will not, it is expected, comply with the order, and it will be probably be necessary to employ the military to disarm them.

THE Times says:—"We may spare a few thousand men for Egypt, but that should be followed by extensive recruiting in India."

THE Mail fears we cannot spare men if we are to be safe against external and internal foes, but officers experienced in Oriental warfare can be spared.

BOMBAY.

WE hear that the Theatre Royal at Grant-road is to be converted into a flour mill.

THE Byculla Club will entertain H.E. the Governor at a farewell dinner on March 26.

MR. C. H. B. FORBES has again accepted the captaincy of his old company (C) of the Bombay Volunteers.

THE Bombay Government have issued a resolution approving in the main the report of the Factory Commission which recently sat in Bombay.

A NOTIFICATION appears in the Gazette of India empowering the Government of Bombay in Council to exercise in the Government of Deesa, in the Palanpore State, the same executive powers as are exercised in the presidency of Bombay.

A SUIT brought by the youngest son of the well-known Hindoo knight Sir Munguldas Nathooobhoy, for a partition of the ancestral property of the family, was commenced at the Bombay High Court on Saturday. The case involves some important questions of Hindoo law, and is attracting a good deal of attention locally.

COLONEL SARTORIUS, late chief of Baker Pasha's staff at Suakin, delivered a lecture on the Soudan in Bombay on Feb. 11th, in the course of which he expressed his approval of the action of the Government in despatching a body of Indian troops to Suakin to open up the route to Berber.

THE services of Lieutenant-Colonel W. T. Brown, District Superintendent of Police, Tanna, were replaced at the disposal of the Military Department from the 20th ult.; and from that date Captain T. R. M. Macpherson was appointed third grade District Superintendent of Police, and Mr. C. E. Coles fourth grade District Superintendent.

DURING the absence of Mr. R. G. Oxenham, Mr. T. B. Kirkham acts in the second grade of the Educational Department, Mr. F. G. Selby in the third grade as Principal and Professor of English Literature in the Deccan College, and Mr. Vittal Narayen Pathak in the fourth grade as Professor of Moral Philosophy and Logic in the Deccan College.

REFERRING to the postponement of the Bombay International Exhibition, the Pioneer says:—Looking at the matter purely from the Indian point of view, we have always maintained that the date fixed upon was a mistake, and that a year later would have been far more suitable. By coming at the tail of the Indo-Colonial Exhibition the Bombay enterprise must have suffered intrinsically and in interest.

THE Governor of Bombay was expected to return from Calcutta on the 14th ult. A public meeting is to be held in the Town Hall to consider what steps should be taken to honour his Excellency previous to his departure from Bombay.

At a meeting of the Faculty of Medicine held on Feb. 7th, at the University Buildings, Dr. H. Cook and Dr. Cowasjee Hormusjee were elected Dean and Syndic of the Faculty, respectively, for the ensuing year. The nomination of Dr. Cowasjee Hormusjee, who is the first Parsee Syndic of the Faculty elected, was made by Dr. Hojel, and supported by Dr. Cook and Dr. Blanc. The proposer and seconder spoke in high terms of Dr. Cowasjee's professional abilities and experience and of his public career.

BURMA.

MR. BURGESS, the Commissioner of Tenasserin, with a portion of his office establishment, left Moulmein by land on the 23rd of January, on tour through the Northern portion of his division.

CHOLERA still continues severe in the Akyab and Prome districts, British Burma, and slight in half-a-dozen other districts, but elsewhere the public health is good.

THE newly-concluded Franco-Burmese treaty is, a contemporary believes, primarily a commercial one, being the outcome of the late Burman Mission to Paris; but it may lead to the extension of French influence, of course, as effectually as any offensive-defensive alliance.

THE committee appointed to give effect to the wishes of the great public meeting held at Rangoon in October, to protest against King Theebaw's misgovernment and cruelty, have addressed a letter to the Chief Commissioner of British Burma, expressing alarm at the condition of affairs in Upper Burma and invoking the interference of the Government of India.

COLONEL OLCOTT delivered an address while at Rangoon, and announced himself a staunch Buddhist. The Colonel was followed by a Mr. Miller. Superintendent of Gardens, who told the natives generally that they would do well to give up education, and the habits they had contracted, and go back to the plough. In the course of his harangue he used the expression, "ye beef-eating Hindoos," which a local paper says, would probably have led to his being assaulted but for timely interference.

WITH a view to the preservation of articles of antiquarian interest in the province the Chief Commissioner has authorised the Government Archaeologist, British Burma, to arrange for removing to the Phayre Museum ownerless objects of interest which are worthy of preservation, and which cannot satisfactorily be preserved in situ. The consent, however, of the people living in the neighbourhood where the objects lie must be obtained before they are removed. To meet the cost of such removals a sum of Rs. 500 a year has been sanctioned.

A MANDALAY correspondent of a Rangoon paper says that delegates were lately sent to the capital from the various districts of Upper Burma to represent to the king the distress and misery prevailing amongst the people owing to extortion and oppression. Theebaw is said to have received the hpoongyees, and expressed great surprise at their tales of distress and discontent, and to have promised to "do all in his power for the welfare of his people." The correspondent adds, however, that "meantime, feasting and rejoicing are the order of the day in the palace, within which everyone appears happy, regardless of the misery they inflict on the poor creatures outside, from whom they extort the money to gratify their whims and maintain their extravagance."

CEYLON.

MR. JUSTICE CLARENCE has been compelled to leave for Europe on sick leave.

ON Feb. 4th, Lieutenant Triseott, of the 102nd R.D.T., was released from the custody of the Colombo police court, after a long pending case against him of obtaining money under false pretences.

CLOSELY following on the completion of the new flashing light in Colombo has been the erection and working of the light on Minnicoy, just inspected by Sir James Douglass, Inspector of Lights for the Trinity House.

A DINNER was given to Mr. W. Forsythe, of Dunedin, on his leaving the district, by his numerous friends, at the Ruanwella Rest House, on the 31st Jan. About twenty-five sat down to dinner, including nearly all the planters in the district.

AT the time of the departure of the mail the Governor was still on tour in the Southern Province, receiving deputations and addresses and seeing into matters generally, but extremely cautious in his replies, promising nothing more than attention to all their requests. He was expected to return to Colombo by the 11th ult. to preside at the adjourned meeting of the Legislature.

THE incident of most interest looming in the near future at the annual meeting of the Central Planters' Association fixed is the usual date, the 17th of February. There is an additional interest imparted to this annual gathering in the necessity for the selection of some prominent member to occupy the seat of chairman, Mr. Wall's failing health and approaching departure for England rendering such a step a matter of necessity. The only name before the public as a successor is that of Mr. T. N. Christie, though there are others who would be excellent chairmen were they to consent to stand. A vice-chairman will in future be appointed, and a change made in the rules regulating the convening of meetings.

HALF-YEARLY meetings of shareholders in local companies have been held, showing that, whatever the condition of planting and commercial matters generally, careful management has brought the working of the Colombo Hotels Company, the Wharf and Warehouse Company and the Horrekelly Estate Company into a sound and business-like state. Good dividends have been in one case, and will be in another, declared, and the Hotels Company, so long handicapped by a heavy first outlay, and early mismanagement, will very shortly be able to declare a dividend.

THE subject of a northern arm to our breakwater is again causing discussion in the local journals, one portion of the press putting forward most extravagant and unfounded statements as to the risk of property and life during the north-east monsoon without the northern arm. As correspondents point out in our paper, the disturbance within the harbour is caused by wind, and no rubble northern arm a few feet above the level of the sea could possibly give us smooth water during the prevalence of the long-shore wind, which, after all, lasts only during about two and a half months. So far as any evidence has been adduced, we are not aware of any damage to cargo landed or shipped during the months of December and January, though we have heard of a boat-load of coals having been swamped owing to overloading. But the sinking of half-a-dozen boats of coal would scarcely seem to warrant an outlay of from £200,000 to £250,000.—Ceylon Times.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

—o—

THE Commander-in-Chief's visit to Quetta has been postponed.

IT is officially notified that the Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition of 1885 will be held at Poona in September on a date to be notified hereafter.

A CONTEMPORARY states that the condition of the warrant and non-commissioned officers of the Commissariat Department is now engaging the attention of the Government of India.

GENERAL WILSON, Military Member of Council, will probably proceed to Quetta early in March, his visit being in connection with the housing of the troops there and other arrangements connected with the comfort of the garrison. The new buildings are not progressing so rapidly as could be desired, and the visit of the Military Member will, doubtless, serve to ensure the works being carried to completion with greater despatch. General Wilson will be able to see for himself what is really wanted to make Quetta a thoroughly comfortable cantonment, which it certainly is not at present.

THE Jackson Cup, value Rs. 350, presented to the Oudh Volunteer Rifles, has been won by Corporal G. Martin, of the Fyzabad Company.

THE Calcutta Volunteer Rifles will be inspected by Lord Dufferin on the 7th March, when the prizes won at the late rifle meeting of the corps will, it is expected, be presented by Lady Dufferin.

IT appears that some doubts have existed regarding the title of schoolmasters, British Army, to deferred pay. Under instructions from the Secretary of State for India, it has been explained that these schoolmasters are eligible for deferred pay on the same conditions as apply to non-commissioned officers and soldiers of the British Army.

It has been decided to delegate to local Governments the power of sanctioning reduced pensions to soldiers of the native army who are discharged in the fifteenth year of their service, on account of incurable diseases, provided they are of good character and are recommended for the indulgence by the Commander-in-Chief of the armies concerned. The rate of pension is fixed at Rs. 3 a month without reference to the rank held by the soldier, and this rate will be admissible to men who are not capable of earning their own living.

LADY DUFFERIN will present new colours to the 2nd King's (Liverpool) Regiment at 4 P.M. on the 17th ult., in Fort William.

The regulations under which medals and gratuities for long service and good conduct are issued to non-commissioned officers and soldiers of the Indian army departments and of the late local service have during late years undergone some important modifications, which will probably tend to render these rewards less attractive to the recipients. Prior to the year 1876 a non-commissioned officer, awarded a medal, received in conjunction therewith a pecuniary reward ranging from £10 to £15, and a private a reward of £5. By the Government of India General Orders No. 992 of 1876, the provisions of Her Majesty's Royal Warrant, dated the 14th August, 1875, were declared applicable to the above-mentioned classes, the result being a reduction of the gratuity or reward to £5, irrespective of rank, which was notified in Government General Order No. 977 of 1877. The latest Royal Warrant on this subject goes a step further, and directs the discontinuance of the gratuity altogether, with effect from the 1st July next; that is, those soldiers of the British army who may, under the regulations in force, be awarded medals for long service and good conduct, up to the 30th June, 1885, will receive the gratuity of £5 in addition, while those awarded medals after that date will receive no gratuity at all. The reasons which have induced the Home authorities to abolish this small pecuniary reward are not known, but as it is usual to conform to home rules and practice in such matters, it is very probable if not already decided that the gratuity will also be abolished in India.

The rate of exchange which is to govern the issue of pay to the British army in India during the coming official year has been fixed at 1s. 7½d. the rupee, which is one halfpenny per rupee better for the soldiers than the existing rate, fixed by the Government of India's Special Army Circular, dated the 13th February, 1884. The new rate of exchange will of course apply to the issue of good-conduct pay, prizes for good shooting and swordsmanship, extra duty pay, annuities for meritorious service, and all other items fixed in sterling money. It will likewise apply to soldiers' remittances, in which respect the rate will be less favourable than the existing rate. Officers who receive British pay only without the Indian allowances of their rank will benefit by the new rate of exchange. The Government of India will no doubt publish revised tables of pay, converted at the new rate of exchange, for the various arms of the British army serving in India.

By a recent Army Circular order laying down revised rules for the admission of officers of the British army as probationers for the Indian Staff Corps, it is provided that such probationers may be allowed leave on medical certificate out of India to the extent of six months. This is a concession which was not made by former rules, under which leave was restricted to Indian limits, i.e., to places situated to the east of the 40th degree of east longitude; while on this leave the officers were allowed full pay and half staff salary. Now that leave may be taken to Europe, the question arises what pay are they to receive? On this point the order is silent. It is very improbable, however, that Staff Corps probationers will be allowed, under such circumstances, more than officers received under the furlough regulations of 1868 and 1875, viz., half their Indian emoluments.

THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT AT DELHI.—The Duke has had the European and Native Infantry in garrison out for a sham fight. The Suffolks, under Major Morris, were supposed to be in possession of Metcalfe House, and the 22nd were supposed to attempt to dislodge them. At the outset of the fight the Duke decided that the 22nd were out of action or "killed," and they had to retreat to reform. Afterwards, having reconnoitred, they again advanced, and succeeded in forcing the bridge, which had been ingeniously barricaded by the officer in charge, who, finding an empty carriage, a bullock cart, and a fallen tree in his vicinity, had them all placed across the bridge. The troops engaged returned to barracks about 3.30 p.m., after pretty hard work for six or seven hours. We noticed that the officers had refreshments on the ground, a proceeding which one can quite understand. But why were not similar arrangements made for the men? The Duke noticed the omission, and we believe that it will not occur again in any parades of the kind. The Duke expressed himself highly satisfied with the day's proceedings. Their Royal Highnesses left Delhi for Meerut by the Punjab mail train at noon to-day.—Punjab Herald, February 5.

Miscellaneous.

PRESENTATION TO THE REV. H. H. BRENNAN.

On Feb. 5th a goodly company of the parishioners and friends of the Rev. H. H. Brennan assembled at the temporary All Saints' Church, Allahabad, to present that gentleman with an address and a silver tea and coffee service on the occasion of his departure from this station to Indore, whither he has been transferred. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Graham Peddie, Colonel Dodd, Dr. Deakin, Rev. A. Etty, Major Greenstreet, R.E., Rev. O. D. Watkins, Rev. J. W. Adams, V.C., Mr. E. Howard, Rev. H. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. C. Eborall, Mr. and Mrs. Boutflower, Mr. Saunders, Mr. Anning, Rev. H. Brennan, and a large number of ladies.

The address was engrossed on vellum and mounted, and ran as follows:—

"To the Rev. W. H. Brennan, R.A., Incumbent of All Saints' Parish, Allahabad.

"DEAR AND REVEREND SIR,—We, your Parishioners and friends residing at Allahabad, Chupar, and Sutna, having heard of your intended departure from Allahabad for Indore, cannot allow you to leave us without presenting to you a few words expressive of our appreciation of the manner in which you have conducted the duties of your office.

"It is now upwards of three years since you came among us as Incumbent of All Saints' Church, Allahabad, and the increasing prosperity of your Sunday and day-schools shows how completely you have succeeded in gaining the confidence, not only of your parishioners, the members of the Church of England, in Cannington, but even of those who do not belong to her communion. Your prompt attention to every case of sickness, and your courageous self-sacrifice during the late visitations of cholera and confluent small-pox have elicited our warmest admiration. The dying moments of many dear friends have been soothed and comforted by your sympathy and prayers, while you brought consolation to the hearts of those who mourned their loss. Nor can we ever forget that it is to your offices as a Christian priest (discharged in fearless and loyal conformity with the teaching of the Church) that we are indebted under Providence for that timely act of munificence on the part of a stranger which has provided a large part of the funds required for the completion of Cannington Church. We regret that this gift to the Church, of which you were the channel, should have been followed by your removal from Allahabad, and the severance of those ties which have hitherto united us, but, wherever in the future your sphere of work may be, we are confident that you will secure the esteem and affection of many sure friends.

"We now offer for your acceptance the accompanying tea and coffee service and salver.

"That Providence will bless you and Mrs. Brennan and your little ones with health, long life and much happiness is the heartfelt prayer of your affectionate friends.

"Allahabad, January, 1885.

Mr. and Mrs. Brennan left the same night for Khundwah amid the hearty good wishes of a large number of warm friends who had assembled at the railway station to bid them farewell and wish them God-speed.

GENERAL SIR ORIEL TANNER.

"An Observer" writes to the Pioneer:—"In your issue of the 23rd January there appears a letter from 'Veritas,' which states that the lives of a number of men of the 98th Regiment (attacked with cholera) were 'sacrificed for the most part to the ignorant obstinacy of the general officer commanding at Quetta.' Now I have no hesitation in saying that this statement is as utterly false as it is vindictive and abominable; consequently I beg you will give me space to show the treacherous and cowardly character of that foul accusation. The facts are as follows. For three months before the 98th left Beluchistan they filled the hospital with sick. Out of a strength of about 900 men only 500 were found fit to proceed on active service to the Zhob country. The remainder stayed in Quetta in a pitiable and most wretched condition. They crowded the hospital. Deaths were of constant occurrence, and such was the state of affairs that some of the ordinary guards had to be stopped. Consequently it was decided, at the recommendation of the Principal Medical Officer, to send the regiment on as quickly as possible to India. Nothing else that could be done would prevent further suffering and severe loss to the regiment at Quetta. Accordingly this step was taken at a time when nobody even suspected that cholera was lurking in the pass. And as a matter of fact the first case of cholera occurred in the train and not at Rindli, as is falsely stated by 'Veritas.' Therefore, without speaking of the madness of halting a large body of troops in a narrow and confined pass like the Bolan, I ask what could justify your correspondent 'Veritas,' in hurling such disgraceful language at the head of a gallant, highly respected, and popular gentleman? He has acted under the very best medical recommendations, and therefore he can calmly treat his base maligner "Veritas" with the highest contempt.

The Pioneer adds to the letter the following editorial note:—"The above letter would be quite as convincing and more impressive had the writer moderated his expletives. But under the circumstances, and as we altogether accept his estimate both of the inaccuracy of the statement made by "Veritas" and of the high professional character of Sir Oriel Tanner, we do not hesitate to publish it.

"Veritas" himself writes to the Pioneer:—"It is with much regret I find that I was misinformed relative to the cases of cholera that occurred in the North Staffordshire Regiment, to which I drew attention in a letter signed "Veritas" in your paper. So far from two cases of cholera having occurred at Rindli, and such having been reported to Colonel Simpson at South Kirta, and by him to Sir Oriel Tanner, the two cases of disease so reported were not cholera. Sir Oriel Tanner, therefore, is entirely relieved from the charge of ordering Colonel Simpson's party to Rindli in the face of cholera having broken out at that place. I beg, therefore, to withdraw the remarks made in a former letter on the subject in question, and I regret exceedingly that, through being misinformed, I should have written what I did, and so, doubtless, given cause for annoyance to a distinguished and gallant officer like Sir Oriel Tanner, to whom I beg to offer my most humble apologies for having made the erroneous statement in question."

MELANCHOLY SUICIDE OF AN OFFICER.—A sad sensation was experienced yesterday at Wanowrie by the intelligence that Quartermaster and Honorary Captain William John Graham, of the Royal Lancaster Regiment, had committed suicide by shooting himself. The deceased was appointed Quartermaster on March 28, 1874, and was made Honorary Captain on March 18, 1882. For some time back the deceased had been extremely distressed by certain debts which he had contracted, and for the liquidation of which he saw no immediate means. His creditors became more pressing of late, and their importunate demands appear to have led him to destroy himself. His conduct up to the end, however, was such that no one would have entertained an idea as to what was working in him, for he attended to his duties as usual, and was in his customary spirits. The night previous, however, he seems to have been exceedingly restless, and yesterday morning, at a little after eleven o'clock, he proceeded to the officers' mess armed with a revolver, concealed about his person. With the exception of a few servants, who were knocking about the place, there was hardly anybody in the mess-room, which is generally about this hour almost deserted. Repairing to one of the inner rooms of the building the deceased shot himself through the heart. An hour or so later Colonel La Touche, the cantonment magistrate, was informed of what had occurred, and an inquest was held. Several officers were present, and a verdict was returned that the deceased had committed suicide by shooting himself while in a fit of temporary insanity. We sincerely sympathise with the disconsolate wife and children of the deceased, and we are sure that there will not be a few who will feel for them in their misfortune. The deceased will be buried this morning with military honours.—Poona Observer, Feb. 3.

THE INDIAN CIVIL LIST.—Mr. A. C. Tupp, C.S., Accountant-General, North-West Provinces and Oudh, has brought out a third edition of his Indian Civil Service List, corrected up to January 1st, 1884. The list is very complete. It shows the covenanted civilian how and when he entered the service, how he has been graded and distributed, how he dies and retires, the salaries and pensions he gets, and by a nice and accurate computation, how far he is justified in cursing a parsimonious Government, and bemoaning the intelligence or good fortune which enabled him to pass the competitive examination. In various appendices, Mr. Tupp gives us his views about the constitution of the Indian Civil Service; and as what he says is the result of a very careful investigation, his opinion is entitled to considerable respect. Amongst other things, he proposes an open examination for a conglomerated Indian Civil Service; those who pass highest to get appointments in the executive and judicial line; the next batch, education appointments; and the next, financial; while batches of less successful candidates might be drafted to the Forests, Police, or Public Works. Thus, if a candidate passed high, he would be admitted to one of the more favoured departments, while those below him on the list would, if there were vacancies, get into the less remunerative branches. Mr. Tupp's plan is certainly a logical deduction from the competitive theory; but the perfection of that theory, when reduced to practice, has still to be demonstrated.—Civil and Military Gazette.

THE BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.—At a meeting of the Faculty of Arts of the University held in the Convocation Hall on Saturday, Mr. Principal Wordsworth was unanimously elected Dean of the Faculty in the place of the Hon. J. B. Peile, appointed to be Vice-Chancellor. Mr. Wordsworth's election was proposed by the Hon. Mr. Latham, Advocate-General, in a brief but felicitous speech. Mr. Latham said Mr. Wordsworth would no doubt appreciate the honour the more as it was the highest which the Faculty had it in its power to confer. Mr. Wordsworth returned thanks: and Messrs. Wordsworth, Birdwood, Telang, and Lyon were then elected syndics for the year, the last-named being appointed specially to represent the physical and experimental sciences. The Faculty then proceeded to take up the adjourned discussion of the report of the committee on middle-class examinations. The Registrar read a letter from Mr. K. G. Oxenham, the chairman of the committee, explaining that he had never signed what purported to be the unanimous report of the committee, and that he considered it a "grave and even dangerous irregularity" that signatures should be attached to documents which the supposed signatories had never seen. The registrar, Dr. Peterson, explained that Mr. Oxenham was quite in error in supposing that he had not seen the Report substantially in the form which it subsequently assumed. As a matter of fact, he said, Mr. Oxenham had dictated the first two paragraphs of the Report, and had given him verbal instructions to draft a paragraph explaining the cause of delay in the sense of the closing portion of the Report. He therefore considered that though it was a hard thing to say of a man who was in the Red Sea, it was ungenerous of Mr. Oxenham to leave such a letter behind him. After an animated discussion, it was proposed by Mr. Jardine, and seconded by Mr. Kirkpatrick, to remand the Report for the reconsideration of the committee who were supposed to be the authors of its being though the several members seemed particularly anxious to repudiate its paternity. Professors Macmillan and Hathornthwaite advocated immediate discussion of the question by the Faculty, on the ground that the opinions of the committee were embodied in the Report, and that they seemed little likely to shed further light upon it. Mr. Kirkham supported Mr. Jardine's motion, stating that the draft report did not, in his opinion, fairly summarise the answers made by employers of labour to the Committee's Circular of Inquiries. Mr. Geary said that he had not seen, and that the Report which bore his signature had surprised him. The Report, he said, was a mistake for which the Committee was not responsible. On the motion of Professor Forrest, the names of Messrs. Hathornthwaite and Peterson were added to the Committee. The proposition of Mr. Jardine was then adopted by the Faculty, which will now await the revised Report of the revised Committee.—Bombay Gazette.

THE PUBLIC MEETING IN BRITISH BURMA.—The Rangoon correspondent of the Englishman telegraphs on the 5th ult.:—"The committee appointed to give effect to the wishes of the great public meeting of the citizens of Rangoon have addressed the following letter to the Chief Commissioner:—"Sir,—On the 16th of October last year we presented to you a memorial submitting the resolutions which had been passed at a public meeting held in this city on the 11th of October, calling the attention of Her Majesty's Government to the misrule in Upper Burma. It was then pointed out that the tranquillity and prosperity of the two countries are intimately associated with and bound up in each other, and the immediate interference of Her Majesty's Government was then urged. Subsequent events have only tended to confirm the opinion then expressed. Nothing was done by Government to arrest the evils then complained of, and matters have gone from bad to worse. Trade, which was then threatened, has now become paralyzed, mercantile failures are of daily occurrence, and traders see nothing but ruin before them. No hope of any revival of trade can be entertained until order is restored, and a firm and just rule is established in Upper Burma. Property in Rangoon is rapidly declining in value, the municipal revenues show a marked falling off, and that the decline in revenue receipts will soon extend to the whole province we have no doubt whatever. This state of affairs fills us with alarm and dismay. We are, therefore, impelled to address you once more in the hope that something may yet be done to save the trade of this province from complete ruin. No reply or acknowledgment has yet been vouchsafed to our former representations on this subject. We feel that the case is serious, and demands immediate attention, and we respectfully pray that the Provincial Government will speedily inform the Government of India of the urgency of our case, in the hope that action, however late, may still be taken. The form that action should take was suggested in our memorial of the 16th of October, and the events of the past three months have more strongly confirmed the opinion that annexation is the only effectual remedy. The capture of Bhamo by banditti, the prevalence of dacoity both in Upper and Lower Burma, the disturbed condition of the Shan States, and the political interference of France distinctly show that unless the British Government interfere promptly, Upper Burma will either become the prey of dacoits or the apapane of some other Power." The following reply to the above has just been received from the local Government:—"Gentlemen,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 4th February, drawing attention to the memorial of October last, and to subsequent events in Upper Burma. I am to say that a copy of your letter will be submitted by the outgoing mail to the Government of India. Copies of the October memorial were forwarded for the orders of his Excellency the Viceroy in Council by the last mail of that month."

TUESDAY, MARCH 3, 1885.

THE DEMONSTRATION AT WILLIS'S ROOMS
AGAINST THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

It is probable that on no former occasion have so many Peers and Members of Parliament, and other gentlemen of influence, come together to discuss any Indian question as on Wednesday last. We devote a Special Supplement to-day to a report of these most important and interesting proceedings; and, by the courtesy of the Indian Constitutional Association, we are enabled to publish a list of the more prominent promoters of the meeting, which will show how deeply and widely a feeling of anxiety is spreading as to the measures which Lord Ripon left as a legacy to Lord Dufferin, and which he is now endeavouring to force down Lord Dufferin's throat by dining at him. We sincerely hope that the Association will be able to hold together this band of sympathisers and supporters as a sort of Vigilance Committee to look after the sparks, still smouldering here and there, of Lord Ripon's incendiary legislation. And of one thing we feel sure—though, of course, it would be vigorously denied on the best official authority—and that is, that no one will be really more grateful for this reinforcement to the cause of honesty and common-sense than the Statesman who has to pay the penalty of succeeding Lord Ripon, not only in having to deal with a heritage of woe, but also in being preached at from every Radical platform wherever Lord Ripon can induce men to come together to be 'fed, and to listen to the story of his virtues and his wrongs.

It was once said of Lord Bramwell that it is an absolutely hopeless task to attempt to rehabilitate a case when once Lord Bramwell has stamped upon it. This power of smashing and pulverising a fallacious argument was never better exhibited than in the masterly speech with which his lordship last Wednesday exposed the folly and hypocrisy of "fair" rent; and, as he well pointed out, if such principles were applicable to Bengal they would surely be equally applicable to England. If the Bengal Tenancy Bill be passed for Bengal, its provisions ought to be applied to England; and it will form an admirable precedent for the general introduction of Mr. Chamberlain's theory, that property must pay a "ransom" to Mr. Chamberlain's friends for the privilege of not being transferred to their pockets en bloc. Whether they will be contented with securing only a portion, in the form of a "ransom," when they might, with much less inconvenience and with equal morality, take the whole, remains to be seen. But it is well that men who speak with the weight of Lord Bramwell should warn the honest, law-abiding people of England—those who are not consumed with the desire, which Mr. Chamberlain supposes to be universal, of getting their hands into their neighbours' pockets—of what it is to which such measures as this Bengal Tenancy Bill will really lead us. Proximus ardet Ucalegon. There is not a thrifty, prudent working man in England whose future is not threatened by the dreams of Socialists as much as that of the richest in the land; and Lord Bramwell, and Lord Wemyss, and Lord Fortescue, and the other members of the Liberty and Property Defence League are doing a great and notable service to the State when they make it clear to the public that the morality of the Tenancy Bill, as of Chamberlainism in general, is that of the footpad or the area sneak, whose nature it is to appropriate portable property whenever opportunity offers.

Lord Fortescue made an admirable point, which we notice elsewhere to-day, on the connection—first discovered by Lord Stanley of Alderley, and now generally recognised—between the Ilbert Bill and the Bengal Tenancy Bill. The latter Bill is the real business, the real aim, of Lord Ripon and his Radical friends; the Ilbert Bill was a mere ruse de guerre, a device introduced simply for the purpose of sowing dissension between those who were likely otherwise to be strongly united in their opposition to the Tenancy Bill. The wickedness of sowing race hatred broadcast throughout India merely to improve the chances of an "attack in force" on the property of the Bengal zemindars is on a par with that of sacrificing Gordon's life in order to keep Mr. Gladstone's Government in office a few months longer. It was rightly called by Lord Stanley last year "a Machiavellian policy"; and, as Lord Fortescue well observed last Wednesday, the only good thing about the Bengal Tenancy Bill is that it has served to draw together once more those whom the intrigues of Lord Ripon's partisans had grievously estranged.

We would earnestly commend to Lord Dufferin's notice the fact, insisted on by Sir Herbert Maxwell in his remarkably brilliant and effective speech, that an attack on Indian property by a British Government is more disgraceful even than an attack on Irish property; for in the latter case it is a party (the Radical party) that is responsible—whereas in the former the discredit and the resentment will attach to the English Government and the English name.

THE WAGHORN MEMORIAL.—Sir William Andrew, chairman of the committee for the above memorial, entertained at luncheon on Saturday, at 29, Bryanston-square, the High Constable of Chatham and several members of the local committee. Amongst others who were present at the luncheon were Sir Arthur Otway, M.P., Mr. Gorst, M.P., Major-General Sir Andrew Clarke, Sir Algernon Borthwick, Mr. Thomas Sutherland, M.P., Colonel Stuart, R.E., Mr. Murray Smith (Agent-General for Victoria), Mr. Armstead, R.A. (the sculptor selected for the proposed statue, and Mr. G. Winch (the honorary secretary). The party subsequently proceeded to Mr. Armstead's studio, where they inspected the small clay sketch for the statue, which met with universal approval on account of its spirited and appropriate character.—Morning Post.

THE INDIAN CONTINGENT FOR THE SOUDAN.—The Indu Prakash says:—If the British Government resolve upon calling in the assistance of Indian troops, it will be, no doubt, the duty of India to give the necessary assistance. But let us hope the cost of the expedition will not be this time saddled upon India. Whatever excuse there might have been in the case of the Egyptian war to make India pay half the cost, in the present instance there is not the shadow of a reason for laying the burden upon India. The Mahdi's war is of purely English creation. India is not the most distantly interested in it or responsible for it. No rule of equity or good conscience can be alleged in support of a claim on the Indian taxpayer for the cost of the proposed expedition. If, therefore, such an expedition should be sent from India, we trust the enlightened liberalism and righteousness of Mr. Gladstone's Government will save India from its cost.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

INDIAN TEA.—Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson report as follows on the Tea Market, from the 12th to the 26th ult.:—About 35,000 packages have been catalogued for sale since the 12th ult., 1,100 of these being Ceylon and 2,200 second-hand and reprinted parcels. At the commencement of last week the tone of the market was affected by the continued dullness of the country trade, and prices for all but the best teas showed weakness; subsequently there was more demand, and rates for all descriptions closed firm. This week there has been healthy competition with a general desire to buy at previous prices, but the dealers do not yet find sufficient demands upon their stocks to compel them to follow up any advance, so that the movement of the market, although upward, is scarcely perceptible. Comparing latest sales of fair to good Pekoes and Broken Pekoes with transactions earlier in the month $\frac{1}{2}$ d. to 1d. improvement is quotable; fine Souchongs and Pekoe Souchongs are also dearer, but common sorts are unchanged, while for low Broken prices are weak and irregular. Ceylon Teas of the new crop are beginning to arrive and meet with ready sale; quality is not of equal merit throughout, but the bulk of the teas maintain their high character. The average price of 4,500 packages sold this year is 1s. 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per lb. Deliveries are going on well.

The Earl of Wemyss and March had been announced to take the chair; but his Lordship was prevented by illness from attending.

Earl Fortescue explained the reason for the non-attendance of Lord Wemyss, and moved that the Right Hon. Lord Bramwell be asked to preside. This was carried, and Lord Bramwell took the chair amid cheering.

The CHAIRMAN: My Lords and Gentlemen: I have no doubt the meeting is aware, and, indeed, the noble Earl has just mentioned that it was intended that Lord Wemyss, who is chairman of the Liberty and Property Defence League, should have presided on this occasion. I regret his absence very much, and I regret the cause of it very much also—that he is too unwell to be present. I should like to say a word or two before calling on those who are more competent to address you than I am. I am not going to apologise for taking this seat, because I think that a man should never do a thing and apologise at the same time for it; either the thing is wrong, or the apology. But I should like to say why it is that I do not feel myself altogether disqualified, although the subject that we are going to talk about is one with which I am not particularly familiar. The reason is this. The proposal in the Bill which is to be the subject of our discussion to-day is a proposal which, if well founded in India or as to Bengal, in my opinion is as well founded as to England and all the world. If it is a truth, it is a universal truth; but, if as I believe, it is a most mischievous untruth—(hear, hear)—it is one in which we Englishmen have as much interest as those who are the immediate subjects of it, or very nearly so; because it is quite certain that when mischievous precedents of this sort are set, encouragement is given for a continuance of the evil, and an extension of it to other places. The substantial proposal of this Bill is, that instead of the landlord and tenant settling for themselves the terms of the hiring of the land—that is to say, the terms of the tenancy, those terms shall, somehow or other, be settled by some tribunal to be appointed by law. In my opinion, that is a grievous mistake in every way—(cheers). Just let me make one or two very trite remarks, so obvious that one is almost ashamed to make them. Rent exists in the nature of things. If there is a piece of land which will do more than give to its occupier and cultivator a fair return for the capital and labour expended upon it, that excess is rent, and whether he occupies the land himself, or whether he lets it, the rent is there. There is something more there than that which is necessary as an adequate return for the labour and capital expended upon the land, and that excess is rent; you may call it by any name you like, but rent it is. Now rent, or this valuable thing which we call rent, is like all other valuable things, subject to sale, and to letting or hiring. The amount at which the land can be let can only, to my mind, be properly ascertained in one way, and that is, to use the expression of Adam Smith, by the higgling of the market—(hear, hear). The man who has got it to let will get the best rent he can for it—the man who wants to hire it will give as small a rent as he can get it for, and the composition that these two will come to in those opposing circumstances will be the fair rent. And there is no other fair rent; there can be no other fair rent than that—(cheers). If it is anything in excess of that it will be an unfair rent, and if it is anything short of that, also, that will be an unfair rent—unfair to the landlord. I may as well at this moment make this remark with respect to these attempts to settle what is called fair rents otherwise than by the mode I have mentioned. Never by any chance, I imagine, do those who have to fix a fair rent put it at above what is fair rent; if they do the tenant does not stop; he goes away, of course. So that the position of the landlord, the landowner, is this: he runs the risk of having the rent fixed below a fair rent, and he is without any remedy; he has very little chance of having it fixed above a fair rent, and if it is, the tenant bids him farewell upon the first opportunity. Now, that is an obvious injustice, because a state of things in which a man cannot gain and may lose is obviously unfair. As I have said, it seems to me that these considerations are not only applicable to the letting of land in Bengal, but to the letting of land everywhere, and to all other matters, because it will not stop. I cannot at all see why chattels and other things should not be disposed of by some tribunal to be appointed for the purpose of fixing at what rate people shall sell or buy according to their mode of looking at it—(hear, hear). Now just one word more. The observations I have made to you are observations which it seems to me would occur almost to a child, or even if one had no experience of what the consequences of such a state of things was likely to be as that which is proposed by this Bill; but unhappily we have experience. We have experience of it in Ireland, and we know the desperate mischief that has been done.

I do not hesitate the least in the world in saying that it is impossible to look over the returns of the reductions of rent that have been made without seeing that the grossest injustice and the gravest mischief has been done—(cheers). There is this singular thing: the percentage of reductions is about 25 per cent. wherever it is; no matter in what province or what county, or under what landlord, 25 per cent. comes off. Just for the sake I suppose of showing that it was not done as an invariable rule, there is occasionally some variation from that; but these gentlemen evidently went forth with the conviction. I do not blame them for it; I believe them to have been perfectly honest. I blame the Act of Parliament, which designedly used a word to which no meaning could be attributed, which was voted for, perhaps, by many hundreds of people, each one of whom had in his own mind a separate notion of the meaning of the word fair; but that these gentlemen went forth with the belief that their errand was to reduce rent I cannot doubt, because it has been done so invariably, as I have mentioned to you—(hear, hear). I should just like to mention this by way of example of what has been done. I have seen a case in which the rent was reduced from about £8 4s. to £7 15s. Now I will defy any human being to say that if £7 15s. was a fair rent, £8 4s. was an unfair rent; it could not be, because there was no such difference between them as to make the one fair if the other was unfair—(hear, hear). What could have been the reason? Why, it must have been done to pacify the tenant, that he might feel that he had got something by his application, or they must have misunderstood the nature of the thing they had to do—(cheers.) Now one or two words more, and I will detain you no longer. This notion of fair rent, especially when connected with fixity of tenure, which I believe is one of the provisions of this Bill—[Mr. Roper Lethbridge: It is.]—and compensation for disturbance is attended with this mischief. Let us suppose there are two farms, and let us suppose that the rent of each farm is £20. Now let us suppose further, which is not an extravagant supposition, and I have not the least doubt a very reasonable one, that either of these farmers, owing to there being some convenience of access or road or water or a variety of soil or otherwise, would give £50 for the two farms joined. If such a Bill as this passed into law, practically that could not be done. It is not left to the parties themselves to contract they must go to some tribunal who has got some fantastic or fanciful notion of what is fair rent. Now what is the consequence? A great many people would say: Why, a loss of £10 to the landlord, which would be no great matter, because landlords, we know, are objects of general hatred and dislike—(laughter)—whose property we are told is to be ransomed—(laughter). But the wealth of the community is the aggregate wealth of the different individuals who compose it, and if you take £10 from a man and fling it into the sea the whole community is £10 poorer than it was, although it has come out of one particular pocket. Now, inasmuch as the only reason that these two men would have taken these two farms at an augmented rent is that they would have got more out of the land by their conjunction than they could separately, it is perfectly manifest that any law—any arrangement—which precludes the possibility of that is a mischievous law against all economical and rational considerations—(cheers). I will not detain you longer—[“Go on”]—it is a subject upon which I could be uncommonly tedious, but I will desist, and let those who are more familiar with the details of the measure before you take up the matter—(cheers). I will now call on Mr. Roper Lethbridge, who has organised this Conference, to address you.

MR. ROPER LETHBRIDGE: Lord Bramwell, my Lords, and Gentlemen, in rising to make a few remarks upon the circumstances that have led up to this Conference, I desire first of all to be permitted, as the representative of the Indian Constitutional Association in this country, to offer the warmest thanks of the Association to the President and members of the Liberty and Property Defence League, and to the noblemen and gentlemen who have so kindly come together here to-day in order to give us a hearing. I may say, also, that I have received a good many letters, warm and sympathetic letters, from many gentlemen in various parts of the country, and, with your Lordship's permission, I will just read one sentence only from one or two of those letters. It will be recognised by everyone that the late Governor of Madras, the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, is a nobleman who can speak on such a question as that before us with almost unrivalled knowledge and experience, because he has not only English experience, but he is acquainted with the circumstances of India as Governor of Madras. His Grace writes:—

“I think the Bill as proposed is a highly undesirable one, and not calculated to effect the good its advocates expect. Nor, so far as I can judge of the modifications intended—as reported in the public Press—do I think it a measure which should take its place on the Indian Statute Book.”

(Cheers). Those are the words of the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos. The Right Hon. James Lowther, M.P., who will also be recognised as an authority on this question, writes:—

“I much regret that an unavoidable engagement in the country will prevent me from attending the meeting at Willis's Rooms on the 25th inst., to protest against the monstrous attempt to extend the doctrines of the Irish Land League to India.”

A friend of mine, who will be known to a great many present to-day, Professor Bonamy Price, Professor of Political Economy at Oxford, is kind enough to come forward to justify the principles of the chair which he so worthily holds at Oxford. I have particular pleasure in reciting his opinion, because he has arrived at his conclusions very much in the way in which I, though in a humbler sphere, have arrived at them; I also took up this question at first as a Professor of Political Economy in the State Colleges of the University of Calcutta. That was what directed my attention to the subject, and twelve or fourteen years ago I fought this point in India. Therefore it is a particular pleasure to me to know that the great exponents of the science of Political Economy in England are at one with me on the subject. Professor Bonamy Price writes:—

"Most assuredly I am no friend of introducing Irish land legislation into India, nor of violating freedom of contract."

I will only read one more sentence; this is from the Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Irish Landowners' Association, a gentleman also who can speak probably from sad experience. He says:—

"As Chairman of this Committee I desire to protest most earnestly against the introduction of the principles of recent Irish land legislation into the land laws of any civilised community."

(Cheers.) Well, my lords and gentlemen, I will now endeavour, in as few words as I possibly can, and therefore touching only on the broad outlines of the subject, to sketch very briefly the history of the question which we are to discuss this afternoon, which I would say is, at the present moment, during the days of this week, at its most critical phase. It will be well known to everyone here that Bengal is a country which is almost entirely agricultural. It has a population as big as that of England and France put together; fifty-five millions of human beings, it is estimated, are directly affected by the Bill that is to be passed, or that is to be discussed with the view of being passed this very week. Now, in Bengal, as elsewhere in India, the ultimate ownership of the land is supposed to be vested in the State, and the State exacts from all holders of land a very considerable proportion of what is supposed to be the gross produce in the form of what is called the Revenue demand. In most other parts of India, as contrasted with Bengal, the assessment of this Government Revenue demand is made periodically, mostly at intervals of thirty years. At those intervals the Government officers, known as settlement officers, go about the country, and they say, "This piece of land ought to return the Government so much, and this piece of land so much," and so on. Now of all the incidents of our rule in India (and I think every Anglo-Indian here present will confirm me in this statement), there is not one that has attracted so much hostile comment as the incidence of these periodical settlements that are made upon the land in other parts of India. I do not say that the settlements are made improperly or unjustly. I do not think, as a rule, that they are so, and I do not wish that to be implied; but the complaint is made that the country is harassed, and, as a fact, in the Deccan of Bombay we know that they have had repeated Acts passed—they call them the Deccan Ryots Relief Acts—they have been brought in and passed through the Legislature with the object of relieving the tenants from the consequences of these settlements. Now in Bengal Lord Cornwallis, some ninety odd years ago, in 1793, determined that we should have there a permanent settlement—that the settlement of revenue once made should be fixed for ever, and the most solemn pledges of the British Government were then offered to the landowners of Bengal that the Government demand of revenue should never thereafter be altered. Nothing could be more solemn than those pledges. I should like you to notice this point—that for a series of years the demand as then fixed was really rather against the zemindars, the landholders, than in their favour; it assessed them heavily. It is notorious that during the first few years of the imposition of the Permanent Settlement a large body of the landholders of Bengal were positively sold up under the incidence of this revenue demand, and the consequence is that the present holders of the land there are very largely the purchasers or the descendants of purchasers of those estates which have been sold up on account of this demand. Now ever since 1793 the landowners of Bengal, those who hold under this Permanent Settlement, have been improving the soil of Bengal on the faith of what the British Government then pledged to them; there is no doubt of that. It is admitted in this official report that they have, throughout the country, cleared away jungles, they have drained swamps, they have constructed and maintained embankments, they have dug tanks, and they have, in fact, changed the aspect of the country from a jungly swamp to what it is at present. It has been described only recently as a smiling rice plain. That has been done on the faith of those pledges. Well, the consequence of that has been that the condition of Bengal at the present moment is, beyond all doubt, on the whole, incomparably better than that of any other province of India—(hear, hear). Bengal is commonly called, as far as the Revenues of India are concerned, the milch-cow of India. She supplies a large surplus revenue which is used in other provinces, or, any rate, is applied to the purposes of Government; and may we not fairly say that these facts alone, the great prosperity of the country, and the fact that Bengal is the milch-cow of India, show the advantages of a fixed demand on the landowners?—(hear, hear). But there is this circumstance: that this demand has unfortunately been continually the object of the carplings of greedy financiers—officers of the Government sometimes—who have thought that they might fairly obtain a better revenue out of this unearned increment. The unearned increment, as it has been called—and as I think I have shown you falsely called—the unearned increment in Bengal has been for many years the object of the covetous desires of a good many. The suggestions that have been made to get at the unearned increment have been various. Sometimes it has been proposed to do what is called in Egyptian finance to tax the coupon, i.e., they have proposed to tax the landowners' profits, and call it a tax on profits and not a tax on land. But the most popular method that has been suggested for getting at this supposed unearned increment has been to transfer from one part, the protected part of the population, that is to say, the zemindars, as we call them, in Bengal, to transfer from them a part of their property and give it to tenants or to middlemen or some other persons, who thereby are to be amenable to the taxation of the Government. Now you will see at once, I think, that that idea may have had—I will not say positively it has—but may have had an unfortunate tendency in supporting the demands of those persons who have chosen to say that the landowners of Bengal have oppressed their tenants, and, therefore, that we must take away a part of their property. The two cries have, more or less, undoubtedly gone together. The landowners of Bengal stand before the world, and they say these charges of oppression or of screwing and rack-renting our tenants, and so forth, have been made on the wildest and the most unlikely suppositions, and we challenge full inquiry into them. Can anything be fairer than that?—(cheers). Can possibly such an appeal be addressed to an English Government, to an English nation, as this of a large class of men, in a country subject to us, who come forward and say there has never been an inquiry, a fair and open inquiry—that is to say, an inquiry with formal conditions, with public examination and cross-examination, and so forth; and they say, "there has never been such an inquiry into our relations with our tenants; we absolutely deny the statements that have been made in this respect, and all we ask from the justice of the British Government is a full public and bona fide inquiry"—(cheers). But, gentlemen, we have some facts upon which we can go. We have some unimpeachable official testimony as to the treatment of the tenants of Bengal by the landowners, as to the incidence of rent at present and during the past few years, and as to the habits of the landowners with regard to the supposed evictions of their tenants. One of the highest living authorities on the condition of Bengal is the late Lieutenant-Governor now a member of the Secretary of States Council, Sir Ashley Eden; and this is what Sir Ashley Eden says of the tenants—I am speaking now in regard to the general condition of the tenants at Bengal. Sir Ashley Eden, writing in 1877—when this Bill was in its germ, although I shall show you presently that it was in a very different form then—writing after an extended tour in the interior of Bengal, says, "I find the cultivating classes now as prosperous, as independent, and as comfortable as the peasantry, I believe, of any country of the world; well-fed, well-clothed, free to enjoy the full benefit of their labour, and able to hold their own or obtain prompt redress for any wrong"—(cheers). That is the testimony of the highest authority as to the condition of the tenants. Again, as to the general incidence of rents at present in Bengal, one of the first economists in India, a non-official gentleman, but one who is recognised as a very high authority as an economist, is Mr. Knight, the editor of the Indian Statesman and the Indian Agriculturalist, and formerly editor of the Indian Economist, has lately discovered a book—an old musty volume—in the Medcalfe Hall Library at Calcutta, which he has promptly and honestly put forward to the world. I say honestly for this reason: Mr. Knight, who was a friend of my own, and a man I esteem much, happens to be a gentleman who has held and does in some things hold what we may call extreme Radical notions; he is the foremost Radical in India, and therefore I say it is particularly creditable to him that he has come forward, and has republished this book. It is Sir Henry Thomas Colebrooke's Husbandry of Bengal, published originally in 1804. That was just after the time of the Permanent Settlement; and from this book he proves (at pages 10 and 11, of the editor's preface) beyond the possibility of a doubt, that if the altered value of money and the extended area of cultivation be taken into consideration, the incidence of rent at the present is far lower than at the time of the Permanent Settlement. Mr. Knight, in sending this book to me, says, speaking of this Bengal Tenancy Bill, "The Bill is a direct and gross violation of the Settlement, and will do infinite harm if it becomes law, for its effects will be to sweep away all the usages and customs and old privileges and rights which all classes—(he underlines all).—cling to and none wish to get rid of. The Bill was brought forward under the grossest delusions as to the weight of the present rentals"—(cheers). Now I will turn to the question of evictions. This Bill was brought forward on the pretence that the landowners of Bengal were in the habit of unduly and harshly evicting their tenants. Now on this point I have discovered the incidental testimony of one of the prime authors of the Bill, Mr. Macdonnell, who is the secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and who may be regarded in this case as advocatus diaboli, for he has really taken up the cause of the Bill throughout. This is incidental to another question, but it very well illustrates the present state of affairs. He says, "It is very true that all landlords do not evict." Well you may say that is a mild statement and not very much to my purpose; but he goes on to say, "It is perhaps very true that all landlords do not evict; as a body Bengal proprietors are not open to this reproach; in Bengal it is mainly the subordinate landlords, the middlemen, who evict or threaten to evict that they may rack rent." Now, my lord and gentlemen, I shall show you presently that one of the main objects of this Bill is to create that class of middlemen who as we are told here are the people who evict, and not the ordinary legitimate landowners—(cheers). That being so, then, I have shown you what is the case from unimpeachable testimony, official and non-official, as to the condition of the peasantry at present, as to the incidence of rental, and as to the absence of any general evictions in Bengal. You will readily ask, whence, then, comes this legislation? I shall try to explain what the legislation is presently, but you will ask whence comes this legislation? Well it must surprise anyone to be told that it actually arose out of a pledge of the Government some thirteen or fourteen years ago, a promise made to the landowners of Bengal that their position should be improved in the matter of recovering their rents. It was generally admitted that the operation of the laws of landlord and tenant at that time had been to make it exceedingly difficult in many cases for landlords to recover their rent. That was absolutely stated in so many words by the introducer of the original Bengal Rent Bill at the time when he introduced it into the Bengal Council in 1877. He introduced the Bill, and he said, "The object of our introducing this Bill is to improve the position of the Bengal landholders who at the present moment cannot recover their rents." And you must remember this; that Bengal landholders, if they cannot pay the Government revenue demand at sunset of the day on which it is due, are under that famous sunset law sold up at once; their lands are put up to auction and sold to defray this Government demand. Well the Government in 1877 very reasonably admitted that this was a very strong case. In 1871, when Sir George Campbell was Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, he put some extra taxation on the landowners of Bengal; he raised what was called the road cess and the public works cess, and he said these cesses shall be met by the landholders. It was admitted that the landholders had already some difficulty in meeting the Government demand and so avoiding the penalties of the sunset law; so the Government very reasonably said, we will amend this state of affairs; and they brought in in 1877 the Rent Bill such as I have described it, that is to say, a Rent Bill which was to give the zemindars, the landowners of Bengal, extra facilities for recovering their rent. I will not pursue the subject further, because it would be a long and to you a very wearisome task if I were to attempt to show you how that original Bill which, remember, was to give the zemindars greater facilities for recovering their rent, has developed into the Bengal Tenancy Bill of 1882. It has developed in the most extraordinary way, by being referred from one little clique of officials to another little clique of officials, each one tinkering here and tinkering there, until at last, when the Bill was produced in the spring of 1883 by the Viceroy's Council, it turned out to be a Bill introducing all the provisions of recent Irish land legislation—(hear, hear). It introduces fixity of tenure; it introduces what they call, most sarcastically, as I think our noble chairman has already shown, fair rent; it introduces the system of free sale, of compensation for disturbance, of abolition of freedom of contract, and, in fact, every one of the principles of the Irish Land Acts were fully found in this Bill. It may be that they have been modified, for the history of the Bill since then has been a very varied one. I will not go through it, but I may just tell you that last winter—not the past winter, but the winter before—it was referred to a select committee of the Viceroy's Council. They reported in the spring, about March. Then the Government of India, on the report of the select committee, referred the whole subject back again to the local Officers and the Judges in Bengal. They had to report; and this most interesting and most extraordinary volume—this huge volume—is the result of the labours of the district Officers and Judges during last summer. They reported about October the 11th, and in November the Bill was the second time referred to a select committee of the Viceroy's Legislative Council. Now that select committee reported last Friday week. We at this meeting do, I may at once admit, labour under this disadvantage—that we are not at present absolutely certain of the provisions of the Bill. It was only published in Calcutta last Friday week, February 13th. Then, it may be asked, why hold a Conference until you know the whole of the provisions of the Bill? Of course, we have all the telegraphic summaries, and so on. Well, gentlemen, that is the very gravamen of the whole business. It is this. We are informed that this Bill published so recently, for it is virtually a new Bill, as recast by the select committee (we can learn enough of it for that), published only last Friday week, February 13th, is to be brought up the day after to-morrow, February 27th, and to be considered de die in diem until it is passed. Only two years ago the Government promised faithfully that every measure they introduced should be fully discussed. Lord Ripon issued a flaring resolution to say that every proposal should be duly discussed in the public Press before it was passed, and here we get the fulfilment of that promise; the Bill having been published only last Friday week, in the form of the vernacular languages cannot possibly reach the remote districts of the country for a long time to come; it will not be discussed, it will not be known on this side at all; but it is to be rushed through at once. Whether Lord Dufferin will consent to that, or has consented, we do not know, and from the reputation Lord Dufferin has held we all hope and believe that he may not yet consent to rushing it through in this way—(cheers). But we do know this much that a good deal of pressure has been applied to Lord Dufferin from various quarters. The comments on the question that have appeared from various sources amount very much to this. They remind us of the old saying, "If thou pass not this Bill, thou art not Cæsar's friend." That is what has been said to Lord Dufferin; that he is not Cæsar's friend if he does not pass this Bill. Therefore I think we should now come forward and assure Lord Dufferin that, on the whole, if he is supported by the honourable sympathies of the people of England, he need not care very much, if he does what is just, whether he is Cæsar's friend or no—(cheers). I am afraid I am tiring you very much ("Go on"). I have only a few words more to say. I want just to tell you what we do know of the Bill in its present form—what we have received information of from Calcutta. I shall be followed by those who will know this subject better than myself, and, therefore, I will only summarise them very briefly. There are six points which we do know. The Bill retains the old, and some of the worst forms of the original Bill of last year. First of all, the Bill retains all the clauses for the abolition of freedom of contract; that we were informed of by telegraph. I will read you just the sentence which contains a statement of what those clauses amount to. "Freedom of contract, under the Bill as it now stands, is abolished in the provisions relating to the acquisition of the status of settled ryot." That means the acquisition of the fixity of tenure. In all such questions, freedom of contract is abolished; the landlord and tenant cannot contract themselves out of the Bill. "Nor can they with regard to the incidence of rent, nor in regard to the right of the occupancy ryot to demand a reduction of rent." Now this is a remarkable point, because freedom of contract is allowed with regard to barring enhancement of rent, and it is not allowed with regard to barring reduction of rent. That is a curious point which I think you might very fairly notice. There are no less than eight clauses affecting the very vital points of the Bill in which freedom of contract is absolutely barred. That applies to all contracts, all important contracts between the landlord and the tenant in Bengal, so that henceforth there can be no contracts whatever. Next, the provisions by which it is intended that fixity of tenure should virtually become universal in Bengal are, we are informed, also retained. With regard to that I will read you one sentence, which puts the argument very tersely. Mr. Macdonnell, a supporter of the Bill, and in favour of fixity of tenure, says this—(I will ask your special attention to this because nothing I could say could improve it, and you will understand I am now quoting the case of our opponents; I am willing as representing the case of the opponents of the Bill to rest our opposition to the Bill on this statement of the supporters of the Bill). He says:—"Under the existing law of landlord and tenant in Bengal" (that is the wicked old law they are going to amend) "a ryot not having a right of occupancy" (that is, a tenant having no fixity of tenure, who has not yet acquired that tenure) "cannot against the will of his landlord retain possession of his holding"—(hear, hear). Why should he, I ask?—(cheers). "The ryot, that is, the tenant, may have been eleven years in occupation of the holding; he may have improved it and so raised its letting value, and he may be willing to pay a fair and equitable"—("fair" always come in!)—"increase of rent, but as the law at present stands none of those considerations avail him. If the landlord be so disposed he may confiscate the ryot's outlay and deprive him of a position which, as the statistics presented in the appendix to this letter show, would in a few months become a valuable property." Why should not the landlord take it, until the right has accrued? Does the right exist until it has accrued by law? There is no right at all. Then how can the landlord be accused of confiscating that which does not exist?—(hear, hear). I base the opposition to the Bill, as far as that point is concerned, on the statement of Mr. Macdonnell in support of it—(cheers). One other point is this:—The protection of the tenant-at-will, which is so much wished for by the supporters of the Bill, is to be obtained by a presumption which is, we are informed, retained in the new Bill. We are now told that every tenant in Bengal, no matter what be his condition, is presumed by the law to have held his holding for twelve years, and therefore to have fixity of tenure, unless the landlord can prove the contrary. The thing is most monstrous—(hear, hear). Mr. Justice Field, who is, perhaps, the highest authority on Indian questions of this sort in Bengal, shows in a recent Minute that, beyond a doubt, it is absolutely impossible for the landlord in most cases to rebut this presumption. Then why should the presumption be in all these cases against the landlord?—(hear, hear). Then a further method that is adopted for enforcing this fixity of tenure all over the country is that compensation is given by the Bill (and this we are informed is still retained). Compensation on the most onerous terms is to be given by the landlord when he evicts, what is facetiously termed the non-occupancy ryot, that is, the tenant-at-will. If he turns out the tenant-at-will he has got to compensate him. What is the meaning of tenant-at-will if it is not this, that he is not to be compensated, that there is no call to compensate him, if he be turned out?—(hear, hear). The fourth point that is retained in the Bill is that the utmost encouragement is given to sub-letting; in other words, to the creation of that very class of middlemen, of land sharks, as they are called, locusts, who, as the supporters of the Bill tell us, are the very people who evict and rack-rent and oppress the tenant, and not the legitimate owners of the land—(cheers). There is also retained in full what our noble chairman has described to us as the absurd doctrine of fair rents. I need not say any more than Lord Bramwell has already said upon the subject of fair rents. The theory that no rent can be considered in Bengal a fair rent until it has been adjudicated upon by an officer of the Government is maintained to the full in this Bill. That alone is, I think, sufficient for me to ask the noblemen and gentlemen here present to-day to oppose with me this Bill. Then there is one minor point I will mention, which is this—that distraint is practically abolished. We are told that nothing but the most costly litigation in future will avail for distraint. Now I mention that to show the cynical audacity of this Bill, when we remember that it was originally introduced for the purpose of facilitating the recovery of such rents, and the only notable instances of distraint having been misused in Bengal are, curiously enough, those which occurred some years ago under the Government itself—(laughter). The Government managed the estate of the Maharajah of Darbhanga during his minority, and they then misused this right. We have no evidence of any other misuse of it—(hear, hear). Then, gentlemen, the broad results of the Bill, we maintain, will be an enormous increase of litigation throughout Bengal, hatred sown between every class of this agricultural population; and an incidental result will be that we shall have to have an enormous increase of the judicial establishment, the judicial courts, the hangers-on of those judicial courts, who are such a curse to Bengal, the lawyers will be enormously increased—no fault of theirs, I hope they will make a good harvest, and they undoubtedly will—but I say that that is not for the good of the country, and I say that the whole of these provisions are not for the good of the country. I say that this Bill, as it at present stands, entirely justifies the opinion that was passed upon it by the foremost native of Bengal, a gentleman who died only a few months ago, and in whose honour we all, Englishmen and natives, in Bengal are engaged at this very moment in erecting a memorial, I mean the Hon. Kristodas Pal, of the Viceroy's Council. Kristodas Pal said of this Bill—he wrote it deliberately—"I consider this Bill to be an ungodly measure of wholesale robbery"—(cheers).

Mr. C. T. BUCKLAND (late of the Bengal Civil Service, and until recently at the head of the Revenue Administration of Bengal as member of the Board of Revenue) said: My Lord Bramwell, my lords and gentlemen, I have the honour to propose to you the first resolution:—

"That this Meeting desires to protest against the passing of the proposed Bengal Tenancy Bill in its present form, believing that it is subversive of the rights of the agricultural community of Bengal, practically abolishes freedom of contract between landlord and tenant, and introduces into India the dangerous principles of recent Irish legislation."

Gentlemen, I beg to apologise for appearing before you in this very prominent position, but it is owing to the fact that I have acted for the last twelve months as Chairman of the Council which has been formed in London for the purpose of watching, and, if necessary, opposing the Bengal Tenancy Bill whenever it appeared to be injurious to the agricultural community of Bengal. I wished to take this opportunity, but Mr. Roper Lethbridge has somewhat anticipated me, of returning the thanks of all the people of Bengal with whom I am acquainted to the members of the Liberty and Property Defence League, and the other noblemen and gentlemen who have attended to assist our associations in opposing what is objectionable in this Bill. I therefore regret that Lord Wemyss, who so ably presided at St. James's Hall, is unable to be here to-day. I should wish him to know, and I hope Lord Bramwell will excuse me for saying it in his presence, it is desirable that he should know how greatly his efforts are appreciated by the people of Bengal—(hear, hear). I have the honour still of receiving letters from old native friends in Bengal, and there is not one of them who does not thank Lord Bramwell for the great efforts he has made on their behalf. I do not mean to detain you very long. Luckily Mr. Roper Lethbridge has addressed you fully and freely on the objects of this meeting. As regards the Bill itself it is such a monster, such a huge thing that it would be ridiculous to attempt to go into details; but one of the reasons, perhaps, for which I am put forward here is that I was a member of the Bengal Council when this Bill was introduced into the Council in its original form; that was in 1877 or 1878. It then came in as an innocent Bill, promoted by Sir Ashley Eden as the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in fulfilment of a promise made by his predecessors, Sir George Campbell and Sir Richard Temple, to enable the zemindars of Bengal to collect their rents. Nothing could be more simple than this Bill, and I might almost say, as somebody has said, that I sat by it in its cradle. I was not one of the nurses or a member of the select committee appointed to watch the infant; but somehow this infant escaped from the custody of its select committee. It was generally supposed to have been carried off by some Irish gipsies—(laughter)—perhaps there are no gipsies in Ireland, but there are Home Rulers and Fenians. At any rate, a certain clique of Irishmen carried off that infant Bill, and it was seen no more in public for four or five years. I can only say that when it reappeared it was either a changeling, or it had been so very much altered by the people who had had it in charge that none could recognise it. It came back to the public with all the Irish marks of the beast upon its face; it was deeply impressed with those three "F's" of which we have heard so much—those three F's which are decidedly a part of Irish legislation—freedom of sale, fixity of tenure, and fair rent. You remember a few days ago, Mr. Goschen (and it is a great pity that Mr. Goschen is not here) fully exposed the absurdity of that alliterative nonsense which has figured under the three F's; he showed that the three F's were inconsistent. I am now only speaking of what were the Irish features of this Bill when it was returned to us; it was also stamped with the abolition of freedom of contract. Now it is not necessary for me to go further into the question of freedom of contract; but surely it strikes you all as a strange thing that a nation like Ireland, which is always desiring to be free, is so anxious to get rid of freedom of contract. However, that is only by the way; that was another mark in the Bill. Then there came the question of compensation for disturbance, a thing never heard of in Bengal, but entirely derived from Irish legislation. Those characteristics are sufficient to show that Irish principles invaded the Bill; but one of the authors of the Bill went still further. In his zeal to introduce Irish principles into the Bill he took definitions wholesale out of the Irish Land Act, and stuck them into this Bill, without seeing whether they had any application whatever to the principles of Indian legislation. That is what is called legislating! I will not detain you any further about the Bill. I will just ask you what you think of native opinion on this subject. There has been many meetings throughout the year; but lately there has been meetings of all classes of the people. First I will allude to the meeting that was held at Patna, one of the largest cities in Behar, about the end of last month. That meeting was presided over by a native gentleman, whose name I will not mention, but whose income is about one hundred thousand a-year, so I daresay you will all think him a very respectable man; I had the honour of his acquaintance, and he is a very pleasant and agreeable man. All the notables of the country were there, and also many of the lower class, the ryots. What did they vote about the Bill? They resolved that the Bill is subversive of all the vested rights of the zemindars. That is pretty general, and, on the other hand, "that it is not conducive to the good of the ryots." That is pretty general. Secondly, they resolved as a fact "that this proposed legislation had already reduced the selling price of land." Further, they said that it would be a dangerous step for the Government to pass the Bill, and prejudicial to the interests of agriculture and of good government, and that as loyal subjects of the Queen-Empress they were bound to pray that it might be withdrawn. Gentlemen, there is a great deal of significance in the last resolution. The people of Bengal are a very quiet people, but when they begin to talk about good government being mixed up with measures of that kind you had better look out. Now, I will only mention one other thing. There was a meeting of a different class of people, the ryots, in the district of Kishnagur, several thousands of them, and what did those gentlemen resolve? They objected to the Bill quite as much as the zemindars did. They objected that the Bill, unless remodelled, would be fatal to their interests, and put them entirely at the mercy of the zemindars. Then they went on to say they were very much obliged to Government for its good intentions in framing the Bill, but they felt themselves obliged to deplore the ignorance of the Government—(laughter)—which did not seem to know anything about the relations between the ryots and the zemindars and the feelings of the people. Therefore, you see, here we have the zemindars on the one side objecting to the Bill, and the ryots on the other side objecting to the Bill. Now, I believe that all who are assembled in this room are more or less the friends of both classes of these people. I venture to say that I am, and that I speak quite as much on behalf of the ryots as on behalf of the zemindars. The ryots are good people and they deserve to be protected, and they have been protected hitherto. There is only one more point, and it is this: what are the Government doing? Now, for what the Government are doing we depend for information on what appears in the public Press. We find, for the first time within my recollection, that there is the greatest discord between the members of the Government on this Bill. Two men vote for this, three men vote for that, and not five of them agree upon any particular point. Now the Bill is said to have been the Bill of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is an old friend of mine, an excellent man, and what does he say? He is not at all content with the Bill; on the other hand we find some people urging Lord Dufferin to pass the Bill. They say, "You pass this Bill and there will be finality." Well, we know in this country what finality means—(cheers). The finality of 1832 is not the finality of 1885, and it is not very probable that the finality of 1884 in Bengal will be a real finality. In fact, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal says it shall not be. There is one little piece of evidence which is derived from a late speech of Lord Ripon, that much-beloved Governor of India—(laughter). Lord Ripon, in addressing a meeting the other day, spoke about this Bill. Apparently Lord Ripon is not so enamoured of it as he was. He told his friends that this Bill is the Bill of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. Why, we used to be told, when Lord Ripon was so popular with the natives of India, that this was one of the Bills which he had particularly selected for the benefit of his beloved people. Now he comes to England, and he says, "This is not my Bill, it is the Lieutenant-Governor's Bill"—(laughter). Then he says, "Oh, I could not pass it last year." You know it was before the Council last year, but he says it was not in a fit state to be passed last year. Very good. We know it was postponed for a year. Lord Ripon, with that eminent generosity which so distinguishes public men, says to Lord Dufferin, "You pass the Bill." Do not you know how easy it is to be generous at another person's expense? It is very kind of Lord Ripon to thrust his popularity with the natives upon Lord Dufferin, and ask him to pass the Bill; but what are we to say? The Lieutenant-Governor, whose Bill it was, does not want it to pass. Well, gentlemen, I will not detain you any longer. Here is a Bill of which nobody is anxious to be the father or the godfather. Evidently there is great difference of opinion about it. I had the honour of leading a deputation to Lord Dufferin before he went out, some months ago, and then I said to Lord Dufferin, in my private opinion the Bill ought to be burnt, destroyed, drowned—anything you like. The highest authority on this subject in Bengal, an adviser and friend of Lord Canning—Sir Henry Ricketts—whose name is not known to all in this room, said to me a few days ago that the Bill ought to be burnt and destroyed and annihilated. I believe that the Bill is full of Irish poison, if not dynamite. I think a policeman should be sent for, and it ought to be turned out—(laughter and cheers).

EARL FORTESCUE: My Lord and Gentlemen, I attended a meeting last year against this Bill, and have heard nothing in its favour since which has in the least made me regret the part I took then, or scruple to take the part which I have been requested to take in seconding the resolution which you have before you. I do not pretend to an intimate acquaintance with the legislation, the laws and customs and circumstances of India, which some of the preceding speakers have so clearly shown us they possess, but like my noble friend in the chair I venture to think that this Bill as introduced conflicts with the principles of political economy which I have heard once described as the principles of justice and common sense—(cheers). They are principles which, though relegated by the Government of the day to a distant planet, have a very inconvenient habit of vindicating their truth by results—(cheers). Now, I should only weaken the admirable statements of your noble chairman of the advantages of what Adam Smith called the higgling of the market as the best and safest mode of determining the value of goods and property of all sorts by dwelling on it. I would venture, however, to suggest that there is one other reason which is very much in favour wherever it is possible of leaving adults of sane mind to settle their contracts with each other—(cheers). In political economy we hear of persons being occupied in the three distinct works of production, of distribution, and of verification. Well, it is quite clear that without large production a community cannot be wealthy, cannot be prosperous; it is also clear that unless there is an efficient system of distribution the production will be unequally accumulated in some places where it is not wanted, and absent in others where it is required; and therefore facilities of distribution really are almost as important as facilities for production, but the work of verification ought to be limited as much as possible, because it is unproductive work. Without the verification of rights and dealings of various sorts, without the benefit of accountants and courts of law, justice and fairness could not be enforced. But as far as possible the work of verification, the necessity for verification, should be minimised, and parties should be left as much as possible to save the community the great expense of undertaking to verify and arrange everything for parties—(hear, hear). Now in the case of referring to a tribunal or to commissioners, instead of to the higgling of the market, the work of settling what is or is not a fair rent, you require to pay for two qualities in your commissioners or your tribunal. The one is competence; if they do not know anything about the value of the thing they cannot pronounce a competent opinion; and the other thing to be paid for, and which even high payment does not always secure, is trustworthiness and honesty—(hear, hear); and if you multiply opportunities for fraud and favouritism you shake general confidence in the sound administration of the country; and even when decisions are fair, observe how liable, under a system which admits of no verification of their fairness, such as the higgling of the market supplies, observe how liable you are to misrepresentation, and how great is the temptation, as the noble lord so clearly explained, to do what is called the popular act—to conciliate favour at the expense of somebody who is to be plundered. Now, I venture to say that that minimising of the necessity for verification is a very important thing. I have the misfortune to be an Irish proprietor, and I ventured, on the second reading of the famous Land Bill, to say that, as I read it, it seemed to me likely to deal hardly with landlords in proportion to the forbearance they had exercised and the benefits they had conferred on their tenants—(hear, hear). I believe that to be strictly true—experience has confirmed it—some of the very most liberal landlords have had their rents reduced just as much as those who had been extorting the last farthing from the necessities of their tenants and the cost in litigation, which, on the principle I have just laid down, is not a very productive or enriching process to a community, though a certain amount of litigation is necessary for the ascertainment and maintenance of rights has been greatly increased. The amount that has been spent in Ireland directly in these commissions and sub-commissions, and indirectly—I can speak feelingly—in the sums which we have been obliged to pay for valuers, as they are called in Ireland, to maintain the cause against valuers on the other side. The witnesses that have to be produced and the delay that has thence occurred has been in itself an enormous tax upon the community at large; but besides—and here I see how much the two go on all fours—we find that the very rumour of this Bill has already had the effect of lowering the price of land in India. All I can hope is it may not be lowered to anything like what the Government legislation, following their culpable acquiescence in long-continued disorder and anarchy—(cheers)—has lowered the price of land in Ireland—(loud cheers). Then I must add that the parentage of this Bill, and the auspices under which it has been produced, do not inspire me with confidence. I think I am doing no injustice to Lord Ripon to say that with all his good intentions he has shown himself a rash and meddlesome Viceroy—(loud cheers). We hear that the famous Ilbert Bill has been very much modified, and many of the provisions in it which caused great opposition and excitement have been withdrawn; but withdrawing mischievous legislation after it has been proposed does not by any means undo all the mischief, or repair the mischief which has been caused by its proposal. We hear from many of the best authorities that for some time in India there was an alienation between classes, between the natives and their European fellow-subjects, greater than had been known since the days of the Mutiny, and I say that for that the Ilbert Bill, the Bill as originally proposed, is largely responsible, and that the withdrawal of some of the most objectionable parts of it is a most inadequate reparation. Now, this Land Bill has had one remarkable effect. It has brought together apparently zemindars and ryots, the highest and the poorest of the natives, and also a number of the most respected and enlightened Europeans—(hear, hear)—to join together in one harmonious condemnation of it. I only wish that I could believe that that unintentional good effect produced by this legislative proposal could compensate for the uncertainty which it has caused as to what might come next, and the feeling of uncertainty on the part of landowners in India which it has caused, and the danger of a further extension of the same confiscatory principles which we have experienced in Ireland to other property besides landed property—(cheers).

SIR HERBERT MAXWELL: My Lord and Gentlemen, I have been asked to support this resolution on very short notice to say a few words in support of this resolution, and I will do so very briefly. I think if I state the reasons which brought me here they will be recognised as reasons which continue to have great influence with the British public. Now, I am neither an Irish landlord, nor am I practically acquainted with the affairs of India, but the two reasons which brought me here are as follows. In the first place, I think I recognise, I think anyone may recognise, in the general features of this Bill, as they may have been gathered from the telegraphic despatches in the newspapers, the characteristic evils of a class of legislation with which we are becoming only too familiar—(hear, hear). It is that class of legislation which seeks to render that which has been honoured in the past dishonoured in the future, that which has been profitable in the past unprofitable in the future, that which is wealthy and comfortable in the present poor and discredited in the future—(hear, hear)—and it is for that reason that I think that the members of the Liberty and Property Defence League have done well to give their hearty support to the opposition which is now offered to legislation of this character. The other reason why I felt specially induced to come here is, perhaps, even more important, and it has not been alluded to to-day. In the Irish legislation of recent years you have been dealing with a people who are perfectly familiar with all the characteristics of party government in this country; and, therefore, if there is a class in Ireland who are unjustly treated and injuriously affected by party legislation they visit upon the party which is the author of that legislation their indignation and their ill-will. In India you are dealing with a large population who know nothing about party distinctions in England—(hear, hear). And, therefore, if you offend a large and important class in India, it is not the act of one party; it is the act of the English Government—(cheers). And I would ask you, gentlemen, are the zemindars of Bengal such an unimportant class that you can afford to allow them to become radically and irretrievably dissatisfied with the Government of the British Empire? It seems to me that in the telegraphic despatch which I read a few days ago, in the Times, was contained the strongest possible argument against proceeding with this legislation. Of course, I do not know who the author of it was; I do not know what his politics are; I do not know by what bias he was actuated; but he gave a summary of the Bill, and he gave what I suppose is a fair summary of public opinion in India. He said that this Bill, while it is not likely to satisfy the demands of the ryots, will most probably cause deep dissatisfaction among the zemindars. Therefore, gentlemen, if it neither satisfies one class nor the other, is it safe to proceed with legislation which causes such deep distrust of the Home Government? I, for my part, think not; and, therefore, I have the greatest confidence in assuring you that, so far as I am concerned, and those with whom I am in the habit of acting in the House of Commons, we shall offer our most strenuous opposition—(cheers)—on every possible occasion, not only to this Bill, but to any proposal for legislation in the least degree resembling it—(loud cheers).

The CHAIRMAN put the resolution, and declared it carried nem. con.

LORD STANLEY OF ALDERLEY: My Lord and Gentlemen.—Those who know and those who have heard of the prosperity of Bengal will wonder why this Bill has been brought in. You have been told by Mr. Roper Lethbridge that Bengal has been called the milch-cow of India, and one proof of that is that the fees taken from the Bengal suitors in the Bengal Civil Courts are sufficient to defray the expenses of the whole of the civil and criminal jurisdiction of India, and that from the other courts of India the Indian Government derives a large revenue. Perhaps it is on that account, from the experience of Ireland where the Irish Land Act added very much to litigation, that hopes are entertained that the Bengal Exchequer will be filled through this source. I cannot for one moment believe that it is simply interest for the ryot that has dictated this Bill, because at this moment a discussion is going on in the Bombay Presidency, and the Bombay collectors have been prevented and stopped from seizing the wells, and they are now beginning to tax the possible wells, or in other words to tax what they call subsoil water. They say that despatches have passed between the Government of Bengal and the Secretary of State in Council authorising this, and naturally the Press of Bombay ask that these despatches should be published. The real motive I believe for this Bill is to get behind the perpetual settlement. That perpetual settlement which has been considered by most people as so beneficial to Bengal was really introduced by Pitt. It has been the custom to call it Lord Cornwallis's settlement, but it was really adopted and settled by Pitt before Lord Cornwallis was authorised to carry it out. Now the question before us at this moment in the Second Resolution which I am asked to propose, is not so much the merits of the Bill as the hurry with which it is being smuggled through. It is said that modifications have been made in it, and the objectionable parts removed. If so, why should there be this extreme hurry to carry it through before anybody either in this country or in Bengal is able to be acquainted with its details? Why should Lord Dufferin not have a certain time to consider it? Why is it to be passed before he goes away from Calcutta to the hills? Now there is another question I wish to ask in regard to this Bill, and other Bills that have lately been passed in India. Why have we never heard of the opinions of the members of the Secretary of State's Council upon this Bill?—(hear hear). A Bill of this nature which has caused so much difference of opinion in India and in this country, must have caused differences of opinion among the members of the council. For a long time we have not heard of any minutes of council, of any protests, or of any opinions favourable to the Government bills. During the course of a discussion on one of these bills I heard it said that the members of the Council were not to be blamed, because most of them were under the influence of the discipline of the Civil Service. I take it that is entirely a misleading notion on their part if they think themselves bound by the ancient rules of the service, and it is not a valid excuse. We know a great many Government hacks that have been removed from the House of Commons to the Upper House who vote afterwards against the Government and against the very Ministry that put them there. The members of the Indian Council are fully as free, and it is as much their duty, once in the Council, to express their opinions without fear or favour—(hear hear)—as it would be that of any member of the House of Commons who had become a member of the Upper House—(hear hear). I think that if these members of the Council of India had done their duty and had expressed their opinions in whichever sense they might be, we should have heard something about it, instead of which it would appear that they are all dummies. There is a general feeling that they are an expensive and useless body, and if they do not do something to prove the contrary they are not likely to last very long—(cheers). The resolution which I have the honour to propose is as follows:—

“That in the opinion of this meeting it is absolutely necessary, considering the many amendments and protests reported to have been made by the majority of the select committee appointed to report upon the Bengal Tenancy Bill, that the Bill, in its present form, should be published for full consideration and discussion by all those whose interests are affected by it, before it actually passes into law.”

Mr. JOHN DACOSTA: My Lord and Gentlemen—In seconding this motion I desire to offer only a few remarks upon it. This Bill is said to have been framed upon the lines of the Irish Land Law, and certainly many of its provisions tend to support that view; but it has besides a special character of its own, for, while it assails, professedly, the landowners for the benefiting of the cultivating tenants, it is calculated to ruin both the proprietors and the cultivators of the soil. For instance, it is admitted by the Government itself that the zemindars have not the means which they should have for recovering their rents, and that they have frequently to supply, from other sources, a portion of the sum periodically demanded by the Government as land revenue. Now, this Bill, which would increase their difficulties, and consequently leave them with larger deficiencies to supply, must result in exhausting the private means of those who possess any, and in causing a larger number of estates to be annually attached for arrears and put up for sale. But who would buy land with the obligation of paying annually more than they can recover? These attached estates must necessarily remain in the hands of the Government, as so many estates in India have remained under similar circumstances, and this first and inevitable effect of the Bill would complete the ruin of the zemindars. But the special character of the measure is that it would ruin the cultivators also; for, under its operation, no sooner would an estate pass into the hands of the Government than the ryots settled on it would lose all their rights, even those rights which the Bill so ostentatiously offers to confer; and the officers deputed to manage the estate would be enabled to increase rent to any extent they pleased, and use oppressive and summary modes of execution for enforcing their demands. This is made clear in the Minute which the Chief Justice of Bengal, on being consulted by the Government on the subject of the proposed legislation, submitted to the Viceroy in September last. His Lordship's remarks on the numerous suits recently tried on appeal by the High Court of Calcutta, shows that the ryots of three large estates in Midnapore, which have reverted to the Government through the inability of their owners to satisfy the Revenue demand, had been subjected to sudden and excessive enhancements of rents, amounting in some instances to 100 per cent., in others to 200, and in others again to 300 per cent., of the rents they had previously paid. The Minute in question, which should be carefully read by all who profess to desire that justice should be done to the people of India, will show, moreover, how the Government have armed themselves with powers for virtually preventing the legality and justice of their demands for rent from being questioned, excepting by the comparatively few ryots who possess the means and the courage to institute suits against the Government, to carry their suits from tribunal to tribunal until their appeals can be laid before the High Court of the Presidency. It will also be seen from the Minutes, with reference to the cases mentioned, that no grounds of justification whatever could be discovered for the oppressive demands of rent made by the Government, and that the most high-handed and inequitable modes were adopted for enforcing those demands by execution and attachment. Those acts were committed by the very Government who, at the same time, were loud in extolling the rights of the cultivators, and insinuating unfounded charges of oppression against the body of the zemindars of Bengal as pleas for introducing that measure which, after all, seems really intended to extend the field of the extortionate and oppressive operations of the Government itself. These considerations, and the fact that the Bill, if enacted, would, under the false plea of benefiting the cultivators, involve a violation of public faith solemnly pledged by the Crown and Parliament of Great Britain, will, it is to be hoped, enlist the sympathies and co-operation of many in opposing the ill-starred measure that threatens to ruin the most prosperous of our possessions—(cheers).

Mr. CORNELL: My Lord and Gentlemen, in the few remarks I have to address to you at this late period of the evening I wish to point out that there is no justification for the despotic action, for it really is despotic action, on the part of the Government in forcing this Bill at the eleventh hour through the Council. It may not be known to all of you what the constitution of the Indian Council is. It is composed first of all of the executive members of the Government and then of selected members nominated by the Government from the different Presidencies, those selected members being official and non-official. It will thus be evident to you that the Government has great indirect power and control over this committee; they are not Government hacks, as was said by his lordship in moving this resolution, who were out of harness and retired to the Upper House and free from the influence of Government; but they are still in the service of Government, and under their influence to a certain extent. Not that I believe that it would influence honorable men in the passing of an unjust measure. Now, I beg to point out to you that this select committee consisted of eleven members; of those eleven members only three have recommended the passing of the Bill pure and simple; the others have all made various objections, some to one point and some to another. Consequently, even in this select committee of the Legislative Council, which is composed in the way I have pointed out to you, there are only three members to be found who would really support the Bill in its present form. What that form is we do not exactly know; but we are quite sure that it contains various principles against which we beg to protest. Then, gentlemen, I have to point out to you again that the entire course of public opinion, whether official or non-official, whether native or European, is opposed to this Bill. Where public opinion is divided, it might be well for the Government to legislate in advance in what they consider a proper manner, although in a somewhat arbitrary form; but when public opinion is entirely opposed to it, and when official opinion—even the opinion of the highest authorities—is very distinctly and clearly adverse, it seems to me to be utterly without justification. I think the Government needs some stronger justification than has yet been put forward for acting in this sudden way in forcing this Bill through the Council without proper inquiry and investigation—(cheers).

The CHAIRMAN put the resolution, and it was carried unanimously.

Mr. J. D. WARD: My Lord and Gentlemen, the very able speeches which we have already heard have really left me very little ground to go upon. I have been asked to move the third resolution; but before doing so I should like just to make a few remarks upon a subject which runs very concurrently with the grievances against which we are protesting, and in what I say I think most of you who have been in India during the last forty years will corroborate me. I think you will all remember that one very great point in the character of the natives was their very strong conservatism, a very strong objection to innovation, a dislike of all interference, in fact, with their customs and habits—(hear, hear). One of the greatest evils that used to strike the thinking people of India in my time, especially towards the end of my service, was the fearful superabundance of legislation. It really seemed that there were some men who went out to India with the determination of making their marks—(hear, hear). This determination grew exactly in inverse ratio with their competence—(laughter). In fact, I must say that the more gross the ignorance the more diabolical was the determination—(laughter). These men could leave nothing alone; a young assistant would come out determined to do away with all crime, and the consequence was that he would punish about half the innocent people who came under his thumb; perhaps a member of the Council fresh from Pall Mall, who would have been admirably fitted for legislating for, say Margate, would proceed to bring out some new Bill dealing with the internal economy of the houses of the ryots in the Bengal Presidency. Those were really very serious evils; laws came upon laws like peas. It used in fact to be an old joke of our clerks that it was no use translating a law because by the time it was translated it would be repealed. Now all this innovation was very objectionable indeed in my opinion, and it really had a great deal to do with the estrangement between ourselves and the natives that they never knew what we were at. I remember well an old gentleman who was a great friend of mine, one day when he heard that the Calcutta Exhibition was on the tapis calling upon me and saying:—"Sir, what are you going to do? Are you determined to murder us all? You have loaded us with evils; first of all there was the mutiny, after that there was the proclamation, which was to be the Holloway's Ointment for all evils, which was to remedy everything; after that there was the cyclone, after that there was the famine, and now you are going to drown us with an exhibition. Sir, one more straw will break the chameleon's back"—(laughter). This of course is rather an exaggerated idea, more especially about the chameleon—(laughter). However, it is an exaggerated representation of what is the sincere and strong feeling. I feel myself bound always, and I am sure you also who have been in India, all of us who have spent so many of the best years of our lives there, to protest against giving these people what they do not want—(hear, hear). Put yourself for a moment in their position. Fancy if we were all in England under the beneficent rule of the late Professor Holloway—(laughter). And fancy if there was an edict passed that we should every day take ten of his pills—(laughter). This is precisely what we are doing in India, nothing more, nothing less really. I think this forms an additional ground of protest against this Bill, for the Bill has emanated a great deal from this spirit; I do not say that there are not other vicious intentions besides, but it has a great deal emanated from this spirit. I hope that our coming forward together this day is merely the beginning of a sort of united action against all these evils; in fact I would almost hope that by and bye we may drag out from its retirement the old maxim, Pessima res publica pleura relieges. I have much pleasure in proposing:—

"That the Chairman of the Liberty and Property Defence League be requested to send a copy of these Resolutions to the Indian Constitutional Association, Calcutta, for submission to the Government of India through the ordinary channels."

MR. H. STEWART REID (late member of the Board of Revenue, Allahabad): My Lord and Gentlemen, I beg to second the resolution just moved by my friend, Mr. Ward. Lord Dufferin is, we all know, essentially a strong man, and we may therefore hope that the resolution we propose to submit to the Government of India will meet with attention at his hands. He is strong enough to be able to afford to discuss the matter, and we are sure, from his character for impartiality, and from our acquaintance with him generally, our representations will meet with every attention at his hands—(hear, hear).

MR. PREYMAN: My Lord and Gentlemen: I have been asked on behalf of the Liberty and Property League, of which I am a member, to support this resolution, and I do so cordially, because I conceive that the principles of this Bill are directly in the teeth of liberty and property. I consider it to be most harmful upon three grounds; first, as a direct wrong upon the zemindars, that large class in Bengal; secondly, as most impolitic in an imperial point of view—(hear, hear)—the meaning of which I think will be clear, as setting class against class in that country; and, thirdly, as furnishing a precedent of the very worst kind for a mode of dealing with property, property of all kinds, not only in Hindustan but in other parts of Her Majesty's dominions—(hear, hear). It is in the first place, I say, downright clear robbery of the zemindars to take away that right of property which they have always either enjoyed by purchase or received by inheritance; then it is another specimen of that vicious mode of perverting the law from its proper purpose of protecting property and protecting freedom of contract, into a machine for curtailing freedom of contract and rights of property. What was law introduced for? Why was it brought in when men began to get civilised and so forth, but in order to protect their property, and to give them freedom of contract in regard to it? The necessity for law at all only arose when there was property to protect. As long as men had no property no protection for it was wanted; but as soon as men acquired property, and needed protection for it, the law comes in and performs that operation. One of the principal objects of law is the guardianship of property. Now, take the recent legislation in Ireland, as well as that which is proposed for India and for England too. Our noble chairman has given us the per-centage of reductions in Ireland. Probably you are not all aware that on a very high authority on the subject of confiscation—namely, Mr. Chamberlain—(laughter)—I can say that two hundred millions of Irish property has been confiscated. He said so in a public speech, and he gave that as a highly moral reason for not compensating the poor unfortunate landlords who have been robbed. Then, as regards the other point I put just now—of its Imperial impolicy, it would have been at any time exceedingly impolitic to go and offend and make enemies of a large and influential body like the zemindars of Bengal; but just at this time it is the most impolitic thing that could be done. To select such a time as this in order to alienate and make enemies of one of the most important classes of our subjects is, I think, the very height of impolicy, such as you would only expect from a man who had lately escaped from an asylum—(hear, hear). My point has been gone over so well already that I am almost ashamed to express myself; but I hope you will let me say a word or two as regards the bad example the exemplum pernicium, that is only too manifest. We have it enough in Ireland, and it must affect not only landed property, but it must extend also, by parity of reasoning, and by the sternness of logic to other species of property, capital shares, and everything else. It is very curious to see with what calmness and unconcernedness the owners of other kinds of property look on while the unfortunate owners of land are being fleeced, the poor sheep themselves, not knowing but that their property will be the next to be operated upon; they are in the position of Ulysses, who was to be eaten last by Polyphemus, the one-eyed monster; in fact, it is a case of proximus ardet. We are in the position described by an ancient author—the position of tenants of the upper portion of a house, the lower portion of which was on fire, and they did not know it. Another curious thing is, that whenever a robbery is to be committed it is called a question. First there was the Irish Question, then the question of Irish Landlords, when they were plundered to the extent of 200 millions; now we have an English Land Question. I see that in Scotland the Radicals of Glasgow had a meeting the other day to protest against some people having a deer forest, and it was called the Deer Forest Question. In this way everything will be brought into question in which there is no question at all. There is no question in contracts; it is a matter between man and man; but I suppose everything gradually will be made into a "question." Why, there will be a question about prices, and interference between shopkeepers and their customers, and they will have judicial prices fixed, and that will be called the price question—(laughter). This is not making a joke on the subject, for it was actually done in France in 1793; prices were regulated by law. Then there is another danger still more pressing, and that is the danger to houses. The thing has been mooted here and there, and you will see that if this goes on that property will soon be attacked, and then we shall have a house question raised. The Socialists are good logicians; their premises are bad, but they carry them out with unswerving and severe logic to their legitimate conclusions. I have this day received a letter as to a speech made at Oxford by a young fellow—whose name I will not give you, but who is a fellow and tutor at one of the colleges. He has lately acquired very strong and socialistic views, and he made a speech the other day in which he said that the teaching of socialism was that it was absurd to speak of such a thing as one's coat, or indeed of one's trousers—(laughter)—and, so far, that is good logic, because if a man's land is not his own then his raiment cannot be his own—(cheers).

The resolution was put and carried unanimously.

DR. BERRY WHITE, civil engineer, Assam: Gentlemen, it is my pleasing and very easy task to ask you to give a cordial and hearty vote of thanks to our noble chairman for the able and dignified way in which he has conducted this meeting—(cheers)—a very successful meeting indeed. I am sure that not only those present at this meeting, but all parties interested in Bengal and Assam are indebted to his lordship, and I think we may say the same of every native of India, for he is bringing his powerful and logical intellect to bear against this most iniquitous legislation. As the day is very far advanced, I now beg to move formally that the hearty and cordial thanks of this meeting be given to the Right Hon. Lord Bramwell for his able and dignified conduct in the chair—(cheers).

MR. MUSPRATT, C.S., late Judge of Sylhet, seconded the resolution, which was put by Dr. White, and carried by acclamation.

THE CHAIRMAN: Gentlemen, I am much obliged to you. I am going to abuse your kindness by saying one word—(cheers). It appears from what Mr. Roper Lethbridge has said that the great motive of this Bill is what Mr. Macdonnell considers confiscation when rent is raised. Now I should just like to say this: a man lets me a horse very much out of condition for six months at £1 per month; well, I don't like riding or driving a horse very much out of condition, and I take a great deal of care of him, and at the end of the six months when I pay my rent he is in good condition, fat, and well to look at, upon which I say oh! I should like him for another six months at £1 per month. No! he is worth more than £1 a month now, he is worth £2. Upon which I scream out "confiscation." No, he says, not at all; I let him to you because I knew you would improve the horse. In like way land out of condition or in bad order is let at a low rent in the certainty that it is in the interest of the tenant to make it worth more and command a greater rent at the end of the term—(cheers). Gentlemen, I am much obliged to you for your kind vote of thanks.

The meeting then terminated.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, MARCH 10, 1885.

Notes of the Week.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, February 20th; Madras and Allahabad, February 18th; Calcutta, February 17th; Ceylon, February 17th; Burma, February 13th.

FACTS have been too strong even for Mr. Gladstone's obstinacy, and now, at the eleventh hour, or even later, the resources of the Empire are to be applied to the undoing of the mischief of the Kandahar scuttles. Fortunately, Mr. Gladstone's authority with his Radical following is so great that he can afford to be inconsistent and patriotic without much danger of being howled down as a "Russophobe."

OF all idiotic epithets, that of "Russophobe" was, perhaps, the most idiotic; for it was applied to the only party that was not afraid of Russia, and that was, therefore, determined that Russia should not be allowed to menace India. Lord Lytton and Sir Henry Rawlinson have always maintained—what Mr. Gladstone and Lord Granville now begin to show a glimmering perception of—that the Indian Empire is more powerful in Asia than Russia is, and that it is simply the cowardice, or more probably the indolence, of the "masterly inactivity" school that has encouraged Russia to bully us in Central Asia, and to show that she can upset the finances of India whenever she likes. A good many Russians know this as well as Lord Lytton, and it was at all times only necessary for us to show unmistakably that we should promptly meet aggression with the whole force of the Empire in order to avert aggression altogether. If we had retained Kandahar, and our military and commercial hold on Afghanistan, we should never have had the Russians at Penjdeh.

Now that our vacillation has allured the Russians on so far, he would be a bold man who would predict that we shall be let off without a struggle. Delirant reges, plectuntur Achivi. We in England pay for the privilege of being ruled by Mr. Gladstone, in the blood of Gordon and his brave comrades, in an increased income-tax and a heavy duty on tea; and so the Indian taxpayers and our gallant Sepoys will pay for the same privilege in the same way. But of the results of the struggle, if we are in for it, no one now doubts. We are all now "Russophobes," in the old Gladstonian sense of the word; that is to say, we are none of us afraid of Russia, and we are determined that her menaces shall no longer oppress the imagination of our loyal Indian fellow-subjects.

WE deal elsewhere with the exceedingly gratifying offers of some of our great Indian Princes to come to the aid of the Empire in the Soudan; and we have very great pleasure in quoting the appropriate and admirable words of Lord Kimberley on the occasion. His Lordship said, in reply to a friendly question from Lord Camperdown:—

I am much obliged to my noble friend for giving me the opportunity of stating the names of the native Indian States which up to this time have made offers of military assistance to this country. They are the States of the Nizam of Hyderabad, the Begum of Bhopal, the Rajah of Puttiala, and the Rajah of Jheend. The first two States are Mahomedans and the last two are Sikhs. I need scarcely say that this offer on the part of the native States of India is a most gratifying proof of their loyalty and good feeling towards Her Majesty and the people of England—(cheers). I cannot conceive anything more striking than the fact of these States coming forward on this occasion and showing the same eagerness to assist us and the same good feeling towards this country as has been shown by men of our own race in our colonies—(cheers). Whether it will be possible or not to avail ourselves of these offers I do not know, but of this I am quite certain, that the recollection of them will strengthen our position in India, as well as the ties which bind us to those native States—(cheers).

DOES it not occur to Lord Kimberley that, among other methods of recognising the gratifying outburst of loyalty in India, not the least graceful or the least gracious would be the prompt withdrawal of that unfortunate Land Bill, which has caused so much heart burning in our most prosperous province, and has undeniably given a shock to the British credit for good faith throughout the Empire? Among the millions who will suffer in fortune and position if this Bengal Tenancy Bill be forced into law, there are some who, as British nobles, are the descendants and representatives of Feudatory Princes of the Indian Empire—such as the Maharajah of Darbhanga, the Maharajah of Burdwan, and others known to most of our readers. There are many more whose ancestors have loyally stood by us in weal and woe; nor has more faithful service ever been rendered to the British Crown than that of the loyal zemindars of Bengal and Behar in the dark days of the Mutiny. These considerations may appear empty sentiment to Radical doctrinaires, but, at a time like the present, they may surely be allowed some weight in the counsels of Lord Kimberley and Lord Dufferin.

To pass the Bill without allowing it to be republished in its amended form for the consideration of the public would be a lasting blot on the fair fame of British rule.

THE suggestion that we are likely to have an additional threepence put on the tea duties has not unnaturally caused something very like a panic in the tea interest in India. Why Mr. Gladstone should select a struggling Indian interest for the taxing knife it is difficult to understand. To please the Spaniards and increase our Spanish trade, we are lowering the duties on the highly intoxicating sherries and other wines of that country; and now we proceed to tax the "cup that cheers but not inebriates"—to prove the sincerity of the Liberal cries about temperance, local option, and free-trade!

THE French, it appears, are not the only people whom Lord Ripon's supineness has invited into Burma. The Italian Foreign Minister on Sunday received the "Burmese Ambassador" at Rome; and assured "his Excellency" that he would do all in his power to meet his wishes.

WE trust that the wise efforts of Mr. Macaulay and the Government of Bengal, in the direction of opening up a trade with Thibet, will be adequately followed up by our Foreign Office at Peking.

THE commercial community does not look with equal favour on the misdirected zeal of the Bengal authorities in the matter of the Calcutta Docks Bill. On such a question we think a plébiscite of the Calcutta merchants ought to be decisive.

MR. JUSTICE NORRIS has our entire sympathy in his endeavour to get redress for the "cutting of his tullub." It is little less than scandalous that the Government should insist on paltry cheese-parings of this kind, while it maintains the cost of litigation at such an extravagant rate.

THE Army and Navy Gazette says:—

The tension of the Anglo-Russian situation has been apparent. Our readers will do us the justice of admitting that we have all along maintained that there was too much stress laid in "hypothesis." One thing certainly needs explanation,—the despatch of Sir P. Lumsden's mission. If it was a matter of arrangement with Russia, a great affront and indignity have been offered to our Government. If it was sent to wander about in the valleys of the Hari-Rud and Murghab, then somebody nearer home was guilty of extraordinary folly.

THE Englishman has the following account of the Calcutta Freight Market, corrected to February 17:—

A very much better feeling prevailed in our freight market during the past week, chiefly for steam tonnage, and rates have risen from 2s. 6d. to 5s. per ton all round. For sailing tonnage, which stands reduced to 12,000 tons, rates have likewise improved, and quote 2s. 6d. per ton higher than last mail.

Telegraphic Intelligence.

The following is the usual weekly telegram from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated March 9:—

"The debate on the Bengal Tenancy Bill still drags its weary length along; but it begins to show signs of approaching its conclusion, 104 out of the 190 amendments having been disposed of last week. Owing to the custom observed in the Indian Legislature of the members reading their speeches—a custom against which the Viceroy protested the other day—the debates are most dreary and uninteresting, and few outsiders are attracted to the Council Chamber. Most of the amendments hitherto dismissed were either withdrawn or defeated by the compact official majority voting according to order; but Mr. Evans succeeded in obtaining some modification of the restrictions on the enhancement of rents by private contract. It becomes daily more apparent that no one wants the measure in its present form, that the time spent on it is merely wasted, and that the best and most popular course would be to drop the Bill.

"The Bengal Provincial Legislature was also occupied yesterday in discussing a measure which a few enthusiasts are trying to induce the Government to thrust upon an unwilling public—namely, the Calcutta Docks Bill. The report of the Select Committee was brought up for consideration yesterday, and a minority of the members, representing the non-official community, and led by the Advocate-General and Mr. Miller, argued that these docks were not only unnecessary, but likely to be a serious burden on the trade of the port. They were outvoted, and notice was given that the final stage of the Bill would be taken next Saturday. The great majority of the mercantile community believes that the proposed docks will so greatly increase the port charges as probably to ruin the prosperity of Calcutta. The bulk of engineering opinion seems to be also adverse to the scheme, while the medical men are believed to be almost unanimous as to the probable insanitary effect of the docks. One medical authority of high repute is said to have remarked that the effect of the docks and of the works connected with them would be to make Calcutta an island surrounded by a chain of cesspools, the worst of which would be in the direction of the point whence the prevailing wind blew, and also to furnish a highly favourable breeding ground for cholera and cognate diseases. The fact that a large sum has already been spent in anticipation of legislative sanction appears to be the only argument for pushing on the work; but surely it would be better to treat that as lost than to spend three additional millions on a work the mercantile, engineering, and sanitary benefits of which are, to say the least, in the highest degree doubtful.

"The Budget is expected to appear about the 17th inst. As no fresh legislation is required, the precedent of the last few years will be followed, and the statement will take the form of a minute in the official Gazette. It is believed that it will not present any feature of special interest. It is not yet known whether the annual loan will be raised in the Indian or the English market. In the present uncertain state of affairs in connection with Afghanistan it is difficult to hazard a guess regarding the probable nature of the coming statement.

"A case of a peculiar nature is likely to occupy the attention of the Indian Courts shortly. About three years ago the Secretary of State resolved to reduce the salaries of the Calcutta High Court Judges to the level of those paid to the Madras and Bombay Judges, the reduction, of course, to have only a prospective effect. Before the resolution was published three gentlemen, Messrs. Norris, Pigot, and O'Kinealy, were offered and accepted judgeships in the Calcutta Court, but they did not take their seats until after the resolution appeared. They have been paid at the reduced rate. Mr. Norris contends that, having accepted the office in ignorance of the proposed reduction, he is entitled to the old rate of pay, and he is said to have obtained high legal authority in support of his contention. He offered to submit the matter to the arbitration of the Law Officers of the Crown in England, but Lord Kimberley declined this offer, and Mr. Norris has accordingly given formal notice of his intention to bring an action to recover the difference between the original and the reduced rate. Since his appointment it is believed that the Indian Government has advised the Secretary of State to give way. It is to be hoped that he will follow this advice, and retire from a position which, whatever its technical merits, is morally indefensible.

"The persons here interested in tea—they form a large proportion of the inhabitants of Calcutta—were thrown into consternation yesterday by a telegram to the effect that the Government was contemplating an increase of 3d. per pound in the import duty in England. Steps are being taken to move the Viceroy strongly to protest against such a measure. It is felt that after a series of bad years, which has affected the Indian tea trade, and especially after a season like that of 1884, when a large number of gardens did not pay the working expenses, an increase of duty in England would inflict a severe if not a fatal blow on this struggling industry.

"Futteh Singh, the new Maharana of Oodeypore, was formally installed on Wednesday last in grand durbar by Colonel Bradford, the Governor-General's agent for Rajpootana."

"The report of the recapture of Bhamo by the Burmese is still unconfirmed, but it seems to be gaining credence.

"It may now be taken as certain that the Indian Government will not interfere with Theebaw until more pressing matters have been disposed of—that is, of course, unless he absolutely forces action upon it. The despatch of the gunboat Irrawady to the frontier was merely a precautionary measure, while the sailors of her Majesty's ship Dragon who accompanied her were sent for the purpose of instructing the field battery at Thayetmoo in the use of heavy guns and Nordenfelts."

"The Viceroy has sent a courteous reply to the letter which he lately received from the Minister of the Teshu Lama at Shigatze, and also some valuable presents. If only the Home Government will consent to move the Chinese Government everything seems to promise well for the development of the friendly relations which Mr. Macaulay established in November.

"The president of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, in his annual address to the Chamber last week, dwelt at some length on the importance of opening Tibet to trade, especially as a market for Indian teas. It would suffice, he said, if Indian native traders were put on the same footing as the Nepaules, and allowed to enter Tibet freely. He added, that a delegate from the Indian Government should be sent to Peking for the purpose of laying the whole matter before the Chinese authorities.

"It is understood that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce proposes to communicate with the English Chambers on this subject."

The following telegram on the Afghan Frontier Question is from the Times correspondent at St. Petersburg, dated March 6:—

"The concession of the withdrawal of the Russo-Afghan frontier somewhat to the north, which was put forward in the recent semi-official article of the Journal de St. Petersburg and the Moscow Gazette, has been officially offered to the British Government, and a definitive answer, it would appear, is now awaited from London. This withdrawal of the Russian frontier, however, does not mean any retreat from the positions already occupied by the Russian foreposts on the Heri-Rud, turning the flank of Pendjeh and the vicinity of the latter locality on the Murghab, but only a withdrawal of the Russian claims to the strictly physical frontier of the Barkhut Hills, close to the north of Herat.

"Russia, it appears, would now agree to adopt a line running from the Heri-Rud at Zulfikar, or near that place, across to the Murghab, taking in Pendjeh, however, as an indispensable part of the ethnographical frontier which she insists upon as being essential to her effectual hold upon the Turcomans; while she is ready to propitiate so-called English prejudices by relinquishing the physical boundary line of the hills bordering on Herat. The salt lake, which is claimed as the only salt supply of the Turcomans, would thus be preserved to Russia. This would, of course, diminish the length of the wedge driven in towards Herat, but it can hardly be deemed a concession of any particular value, inasmuch as it quite ignores the original objections made by the British Cabinet to the Russian advance. In any case it remains to be seen what reception has been given to it in London.

"It is anxiously hoped here that the desired arrangements may be arrived at before any further complications happen on the spot, as the present juxtaposition of Russians and Afghans, especially with an officer like Colonel Alikhanoff at the head of the former, is indeed most dangerous.

"As always happens here when things come to such a pass, the suppression and delay of all the more important outgoing and incoming news on the subject is almost more than English flesh and blood can bear. The present messages, for instance, will reach the Times two or three days late in consequence of this system. I am frequently obliged to cancel everything that I have written, at the last moment, in the small hours of the morning, after repeated interviews and disputes with telegraphic officials and the Censors.

"It is pointed out in to-day's Novosti that if the Gladstone Ministry were replaced by a Conservative one the hostile policy of Lord Beaconsfield would be again adopted towards Russia. Among other newspaper articles to-day is a very absurd one, in the St. Petersburg Viedomosti, attempting to prove that England has no right of protectorate whatever over Afghanistan.

"There is every reason to believe that an active dislocation and concentration of troops is now going on in Central Asia. The mountain batteries of the Turkestan Horse Artillery, which are specially organised for Asiatic warfare, have just been increased from four to six guns per battery, with a corresponding increase of men in the ranks. Troops are also said to be moving from the Caucasus. All this is, of course, quite natural, in view of the dangerous position of things on the Afghan frontier.

"Englishmen must not nurse the fallacious idea that General Komareff's forces in the Trans-Caspian are all the men that Russia could put into the field in that region within a reasonable space of time, or that Russia is poor and not prepared for war.

Russia is always prepared for war; and, as General Skobeleff remarked to me at Constantinople in 1878, she is not likely to be again so easily turned from her purpose by mere naval demonstrations and empty threats. For the last two years Russia has persistently worked out her definite policy in Central Asia, while we, having no definite policy, have done nothing else but talk and write against her. These, at least, are the ideas with which many of the late hero's disciples have flattered themselves into believing that England's present attitude is only an evanescent outbreak of Russophobia, like her former fits of passing indignation at Russian advances in Central Asia.

"The latest news from London, however, is calculated to dissipate this erroneous notion, and to spread the conviction that this time, at any rate, our determination to fully act up to our words if necessary is not going to be shaken by the weakness and vacillation which has distinguished our policies in regard to Egypt and German colonization. As far as one can judge here from the scanty information to hand, the concession offered by Russia, as indicated by the recent inspired article in the Journal de St. Pétersbourg, has not been accepted by the British Government, for such a concession, it seems, in no way means any retreat from the principal points occupied by Colonel Alikhanoff's Cossacks. Still, there is nothing like any hostile feeling noticeable here, and a friendly disposition to arrange matters amicably appears to continue.

"The increase referred to of the mountain batteries of Horse Artillery in Turkestan from four to six guns each, and an addition, long ago projected, of 1,322 officers to the present regiments of infantry, are announced by the Russian Invalide and the Moscow Gazette.

"The Russian advance towards Herat and the protest of the British Government are now the chief topics of the Indian Press and public. The further development of the situation is awaited with anxiety, but without apprehension. General satisfaction is felt at the determined attitude which the Ministry appears to have assumed, and the hope is universally expressed that it will not waver, but insist on the withdrawal of the Russians to Sarakhs.

"It is a fortunate circumstance that the presence on the spot of General Lumsden's strong and well-equipped Commission renders any stealthy move towards Herat impossible, and insures the receipt of early and accurate information from that quarter. For, although it is probable that Russia, if determined to push on, regardless of consequences, will move on Balkh and Afghan Turkestan also, still, the main struggle, should it come to a struggle, will be for the possession of Herat.

"It is most fortunate, too, that India has now a Viceroy who possesses the entire confidence of all classes. The Indian Government is evidently fully alive to the situation, and quite determined to meet it adequately. A large force is being assembled at Rawul Pindi, in the first instance in honour of the Ameer, who will arrive there on the 28th instant, but also because it will be available for an advance towards Herat if necessary. The other line, in the direction of Quetta, is also being strongly reinforced; and other steps are being taken which, though not apparent to the general public, are likely to prove very effective for the end in view. Lord Dufferin and his military advisers are in thorough accord.

"The spirit of loyalty which is displaying itself throughout the country is very remarkable and reassuring; and if Russia should calculate on any disaffection, owing to the fall of Khartoum or other causes, she will find herself greatly mistaken. Altogether the outlook, though for the moment threatening, is not now regarded with apprehension in India, but, on the contrary, with the general conviction that if only the Ministry stand firm, the Central Asian bugbear may now be laid at rest for years, if not for ever.

"Meanwhile, the preparations for the reception of the Ameer are rapidly progressing, although of course it is possible that the march of events may prevent him from leaving Afghanistan. At present his intention is to leave Cabul about the 20th instant. He will be accompanied by about 2,000 of his own troops, and nearly 200 tribal chiefs. The Viceroy will leave Calcutta on the 23rd. He will stay for two or three days at Allahabad, and arrive at Rawul Pindi in time to receive the Ameer.

"Some changes have been made in the details of the camp of exercise, which I have already telegraphed, and perhaps further changes and additions to the troops may yet be made. Altogether about 20,000 men and 60 guns will assemble, under Sir Michael Biddulph. The pageant will be imposing, and will not fail to impress the Ameer with a sense of the value of an alliance with England."

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY.—Lord and Lady Reay leave London for Bombay on Wednesday.

The transfer of the Indian Volunteers from the command of the local governments to the district Generals and Commanders-in-Chief is a decided change for the better, and the other reforms in equipment, uniform, the creation of a reserve, coupled with an increase of capitation for efficient, are to be commended. Would there were more of them! It is an admirable force, but it is not numerous.—Army and Navy Gazette.

A RESERVE FOR THE NATIVE ARMY.

THE Home Cabinet are going the right way to work to make the Soudan War, with which they are face to face, about as expensive as it possibly can be. They have already in Egypt a force of English troops aggregating not far short of 20,000 men. In the Delta there are about 5,000, at Suakim fully 4,000, and Lord Wolsley has under his immediate hand about 10,000. The latest news reports a resolve on the part of the Government to send forward another 6,000 men. The result of this will be that England will be denuded of troops, and the Reserves will have to be called out. All this might be avoided if India came to the front, as it is her right and her duty to do even in her own interest, and as it is plain that the people of England, wiser than the Government, expect her to come forward. But, setting aside this duty for the moment, it must be apparent even to the most careless that England and India have both entered upon a period of storms and warlike troubles. All that the Soudan disaster has done is to make that urgent which was already inevitable, to make immediate that necessity for the increase of the Indian forces which could not longer be postponed without the creation of grave mischief. During the past two months nearly every newspaper in India has dwelt upon the gravity of the risk run by a Government which keeps its military establishments far below its peace requirements. We have tried ourselves to correct the evil by showing how intimately the condition and strength of the army affects native public opinion, and how easy it is by pursuing a craze for economy to produce all over India a state of doubt and indecision most injurious to the prestige of the Government, and to its moral influence with the people. In any case, India would have to re-establish her prestige as a military empire. The fall of Khartoum has only made the task more urgent and, perhaps, more difficult, because it has shown that India may at any moment be called upon to place in the field a respectable and well-equipped force, and that she may thus be called upon to use her strength on theatres of war widely separated from that to which her attention is chiefly directed. The Government ought to urge upon the Cabinet at home the wisdom of employing Indian troops, and the good effect in a political sense which their employment would produce in India itself. This being so, the Government ought not to wait for the promulgation of the budget before setting its house in order. The mere increase of men to the regiments will not meet the difficulty, for that increase is necessary to fill the depôts, and to make the regiments efficient for field service. As a rule, it may be said that a battalion of 1,000 men can only set out on service with 800 men with the colours; so that if the regiments of the native army be at once raised to a war strength of 1,000 men, it will only enable them to take the field at a proper strength, and will not, when invalids and weak men are counted out, furnish them with any real reserve of strength to draw upon for the waste of a campaign. More is required than merely giving a general order to push recruiting, and the Government ought, therefore, to restore to the army the regiments struck off its strength two years ago. This is urgent. Further, efforts should be made to thoroughly equip the army with artillery and machine-guns; but, above all, there ought to be a system of Reserves. This is not an insurmountable difficulty, provided it be not overloaded with scientific arrangements. There is an ancient custom, which is known in all native Courts, by which men are retained for service, and it cannot but strike everyone that in forming a Reserve the closer native customs are followed the better. The recruiting provinces of the various armies should be divided into districts. Each district should be under an European officer with a good staff of native commissioned officers. Districts should be divided into sub-districts, each in charge of a small staff of native commissioned officers. These sub-districts should be again divided into circles, each under a native non-commissioned officer. The duty of a chief of a circle would be, not only to keep a list of men and to check payments, but to report absences, and casualties, and generally to keep himself well informed about all the reserve men in his circle. Men should be enlisted for general service under a contract. The first year they would have to spend at the headquarters of their district, where they would receive a thorough training. After the first year they would be called up for two months to the headquarters for further instruction, and these two months would be carefully calculated so as to suit the necessities of the agriculture of the district. When not serving at the headquarters, the men would receive a pay of Rs. 4 per mensem, and when called up, the full pay of a first-class sepoy. When recruits were wanted for regiments in any way connected with the district, volunteers should be called for, first of all from the Reserves. Care should be especially taken that the Reserve should not be, even in the most indirect manner, connected with the police. All men belonging to the Reserve should have the privilege of wearing a special headdress, and anyone not connected with the Reserve wearing this headdress with the badge attached should be very severely punished. Lastly, this scheme should be embodied in a special law. The details of drill and training, the storing of arms and ammunition, the care of the men, and the provision of medical attendance for them, are matters to be marked out, always with an eye to simplicity. We believe that the scheme above suggested would be found to answer every purpose, and would give India a trained Reserve of any required degree of strength. We are sure that the question is one which cannot be put off or trifled with, and that as India is strong or weak, so will her borders be respected or encroached upon.—Indian Daily News.

THE PRESENT QUESTION.

If Lord Dufferin wisely takes counsel of himself only he will devise some means of postponing the Rent Bill sine die. It is a wrong to his own character and reputation as a statesman that his name should be associated with a measure that every man of honest mind sees to have been brought forward under complete delusion as to the facts with which it deals. It is, in our own eyes, an act of gross impropriety to ask Lord Dufferin to become responsible for this measure, with the Local Government itself publicly proclaiming its entire ignorance of every economic fact with which the measure deals. The Bill will subvert all existing arrangements concerning the land, while its authors are simultaneously protesting that they know nothing whatever about them. The zemindar is charged, in the usual way, with being the cause of this discreditable ignorance. It is his opposition in the past to all inquiry, we are assured, that is the cause of our present ignorance. The ignorance is admitted, and is dilated upon almost unctuously; but it is the zemindar it seems that is to blame for it, because he has always been opposed to the maintenance of the putwari and the kunoungo. It is difficult to reply with courtesy to such statements.

Here is a Bill that will subvert every existing relation between the zemindar and the ryot, and the Viceroy is required to pass it while its framers are simultaneously proclaiming that they are in complete ignorance of what the arrangements are, that are nevertheless, to be swept away. The impressions under which the Bill was originally brought forward are seen to have been delusions; but we must, nevertheless, go on with it, although all classes are protesting that it will do them harm only, and the Local Government itself almost vehemently assures us that it knows nothing of the character of the relations which it subverts. We ask Lord Dufferin to read for himself what Mr. Secretary Macaulay said only on Saturday last in introducing the Putwari Bill into the local Council. After pointing out that no measure of reform concerning the land could prove "thoroughly successful unless based upon that knowledge of actual facts which a survey and record of rights alone can give," he proceeded as follows:—

"What we want in these provinces is a knowledge of the elementary facts of rural economy, such as is possessed by every civilised Government; such as in one form or other is possessed by all Governments in India except Bengal; such as is essential to all efficient administration. We want to know the precise area of every holding; the quality of its soil; the status and rights of the ryot who cultivates it; the rent he pays for it; the landlord to whom he pays, and so forth. We have been engaged for ninety years in a futile struggle to obtain this information. Our prolonged defeat has plunged us in an ever-rising sea of agrarian and administrative difficulties, and we now purpose, as far as in us lies, to bring them to an end."

It is here not simply admitted, but vehemently insisted, that we are in absolute ignorance of all those "elementary facts" concerning the land, which are possessed by "every other civilised Government," and the statement is perfectly true, as we all know. Will Lord Dufferin pardon us then, if we say, that were we in his position, we should cut out this extract from what is practically Sir Rivers Thompson's own speech, and send it to him, asking him with what propriety he, Lord Dufferin, in the face of such an admission, can be asked to accept the responsibility of a measure, which the Lieutenant-Governor himself admits to have been drafted, in ignorance of the most "elementary facts" with which it deals. Whatever Lord Dufferin's instructions may be, H.M.'s Government can certainly never have intended to subject him as Viceroy to the humiliation and the positive dishonour of passing a Bill concerning which its very framers tell him that it has been drafted by them in complete ignorance of the most "elementary facts" with which it is concerned. Are we guilty of any rudeness to the Viceroy when we put the issue to him in this way, or are we simply saying what, in the interests of all classes, we are bound to say? Nothing can be more certain than the fact, that if H.M.'s Government were aware that this Bill is an expression of the grossest executive ignorance, and that this ignorance is not denied, but admitted in the most direct and explicit terms, it would tell Lord Dufferin to suspend instantly its further consideration.

If the Bill is really to go on, at all events let it have a truthful preamble. If not too late, the Select Committee might appropriately end its labours by advising that the preamble should run as follows:—

"Whereas this Bill was originally drafted under the belief that the rentals paid by the ryots were excessive and of the nature of a rack-rent; that enhancements were constantly being made thereof, and the cultivators systematically evicted from their holdings when they could not pay; and whereas it has been ascertained that this belief is erroneous and opposed to fact; and whereas, finally, the local Government declares that it is in ignorance of every elementary fact concerning the land and the relations that now exist between landlord and tenant, it is hereby enacted that these relations shall be all subverted, and the arrangements hereinafter directed shall take their place."

Can anyone justly charge the Statesman with travestying the position, when we advise the Select Committee to adopt such a preamble as we have now suggested? Is it not a simple and perfectly truthful statement of the history and character of the measure? What Mr. Secretary Macaulay said last Saturday is absolutely true, although he might have suppressed it had he seen the use to which it would be turned. If Lord Dufferin would save his Viceroyalty from being associated with a measure that is without excuse or apology, he will refuse to be dragged at the heels of the local Executive simply to sustain its prestige at the cost of his own reputation. Her Majesty's Government cannot have intended to submit him to the humiliation of passing this measure in the teeth of the public exposure it has received. Every representation that has reached the Home Government on the subject has been misleading, from the first drafting of the Bill to this hour, and nothing but harm can follow from permitting the Home Government to remain under the belief that the measure is a wise and necessary measure. We refuse to believe that Lord Dufferin will accept its responsibility, for his Excellency's course is clear. He should postpone its consideration, and tell the Home Government plainly that the measure had been honestly enough drafted, but was based upon impressions that were found to be erroneous, and that as the Local Government had formally and publicly avowed its entire ignorance of every elementary fact concerning the rural economy of the Provinces, the measure had better be suspended, pending the inquiry it was instituting into the facts of the case by the survey and record of rights which it is proposed to make. To force the measure upon the statute book will be an act of the greatest wrong to the people, and will produce such a sea of conflict as we have never seen before.—Indian Statesman.

THE INDIAN COUNCIL.

The appointment of Sir Robert H. Davies to succeed the Hon. E. Drummond on the Indian Council perhaps accentuates the difficulty felt at the present moment of obtaining the requisite qualifications in successors to the vacant seats. It is true that, considering the present composition of the Council, the interval of six years that separates the late Lieutenant-Governor from his administration is no serious obstacle, and that his north-western experience will be very valuable. But it will not exactly replace the useful financial knowledge Mr. Drummond possessed. Various candidates are mentioned for the imminent vacancies caused by Sir William Muir and Sir Barrow Ellis, whose term of office will, after all, probably not be prolonged when it expires in June. What public and Anglo-Indian opinion, however, really demands is some more drastic measure which will substitute fresher blood for the veterans whose experience has now been growing rusty for something like a quarter of a century. In the present uncertain state of political parties and in the anxiety occasioned by Afghan affairs to the Home Government nothing, however, is likely to be effected. Sir Henry Davies made his mark in the Punjab as a civil officer under John Lawrence in the years before the mutiny. As Secretary to Government under Sir Robert Montgomery he proved his fitness for the higher preferment which awaited him as Chief Commissioner of Oudh. After Sir Henry Durand's untimely death in 1871 he became Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, a post which he filled for five years in a manner worthy of his able predecessors. On all questions of frontier policy he was true to the traditions of the Lawrence school, and he agreed with Lord Northbrook in opposing all schemes for forcing an English resident on Sher Ali.—Home News.

THE AMENDED BILL.

(From the Hindoo Patriot.)

At the last meeting of the Legislative Council of India the Select Committee on the Bengal Tenancy Bill submitted their final report. It extends to sixty-seven paragraphs, and covers ten pages of the Gazette of India. No discussion took place on the subject. The honourable member in charge of the Bill stated that on that day fortnight he would move that the report be taken into consideration. The amendments made in the Bill, as altered last year, are numerous, and in several instances very important. It appears that none of the nineteen amendments suggested by his Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in his report of September last has been adopted in its entirety. This has necessarily given great offence to his Honor. Among the alterations made a remarkable one is about the conversion of all tenants, holding more than a hundred bighas each, into tenure-holders, subject to a civil suit, in which the contrary position may be proved, and as a set-off to this preventive clause the original rule about the gradual transition of tenants occupying small holdings into tenure-holders has been abandoned. All the new rules regarding patnis have also been dropped. The clauses regarding compulsory registration of all tenures have likewise been omitted, in anticipation of proper provisions being made in the Registration Bill now before the Bengal Council. At the same time a section has been framed to compel every tenant to pay a registration fee to the landlord, whether the same landlord registers his holding or not. The subject of occupancy raiyats has, as a matter of course, engaged the attention of the Select Committee very largely. The great problem was how to comply with the orders of the Secretary of State regarding the twelve-year clause, and yet so to undermine it as to make it worthless. Sir Rivers Thompson's scheme was to define occupancy to mean the possession of not any particular plot continuously for twelve years, but of any land in a village or an estate for that period. This was the definition adopted last year, but the injustice of it was so glaring that the majority this year felt obliged to modify it. The modification has taken the shape of omitting the word "estate." The rule is now limited to the word "village," so that if a village happens to be in the possession of A., B., C. and D., and the tenant E. chooses to occupy a cotta of land for three years in the estate of A., and then takes up a similar plot for four years successively in the estates of B. and C., and ultimately in the twelfth year if he can get hold of the possession of a hundred bighas in the estate of D., his occupation of that plot for a few months will count as twelve years' uninterrupted occupancy. The judicial, moral and logical perfection of this mode of upholding the twelve years' occupancy clause is what even Father Loyola would envy. But it appears that Sir Rivers Thompson is not satisfied with so great a concession to the zemindars. He mourns, too, the resolution come to by the majority to abandon the free sale clause, both in Bengal and Behar, leaving the matter for decision to local custom. We think this is a great gain, and by itself more beneficial to the well-being of the raiyat than all the remaining one hundred and ninety-six sections of the Bill put together. Some consideration has been shown to the zemindars in the matter of enhancement. *The table of rates has been abandoned, and all just causes of enhancement have been conceded, except that of alluvion. Of course, the exception is due to mere zid, and has no reason or argument in its favour. The maximum limit of one-fifth has also been abandoned. A few concessions have also been made under the heads of "contracts and custom"; but the Committee, while admitting the just claims of the zemindar for a law of distraint, has not been able to muster up courage to make a fair concession. Distraint is necessary, they admit, but they propose to grant it only "when the Local Government is of opinion that in any local area, or in any class of cases it would, by reason of the character of the cultivation or the habit of the cultivators, be impracticable for a landlord to realise his rent by an application to the Court under Chapter XII., it may by order authorise the landlord to distraint by himself or by his agent." In other words the whole is left to the discretion of the Local Government, or as the zemindars put it, they have been shunted out of the line by showing them a Dead Sea apple. It would take more time and space than what we can at present spare to go through all the other amendments and alterations. Altogether there are about 200 of them, and many of them are of serious import to some class of the community or other. But strange to say the committee are of opinion that, notwithstanding the 200 alterations and additions, the Bill should not be republished, but hurried on through the council as fast as possible. Of course no reason has been assigned for this, but it is not difficult to divine what it is. The hot weather is coming on apace. Six weeks hence Calcutta will be unpleasant to delicate nerves and pleasure-loving individuals. The Alsatia of Simla will then hold forth all its charms, and it would be absurd to suppose that for the benefit of the five-and-fifty millions connected with land in Bengal our rulers should forego their vernal exodus. The republication of the Bill has not been permitted also from fear of grave opposition from all sides. Rather than face a sea of troubles and endless unpleasant discussions it is infinitely better, by passing the Bill, at once to cut the Gordian knot, and to solve all difficulties at a stroke. We, who are chained to our desks from year's end to year's end, and the people whose vital interests are in jeopardy may not perceive this, but the fact remains, and the commentary is obvious. The Bill has since been republished. But that is of no avail to make representations. Will his Excellency the Viceroy be able to rise above the fascinations of the bureaucracy, and let the people have the satisfaction of at least knowing that their interests have not been sacrificed for the sake of the coming Simla exodus? For the sake of business Mr. Gladstone held an autumn session of Parliament, depriving the Lords and the Commons of their favourite recreations of that season, and cannot Lord Dufferin, for the sake of justice to millions, postpone the exodus for a month or six weeks? But suppose that is impossible, what would be the great harm if the Bill be deferred for another season. Bengal has thrived for many many years without the Tenancy Bill. The landlords and the tenants lived in peace and amity.

The land produced her plenty. The rents flowed in without any let or hindrance, and the Government revenue was never in arrears. And this has been the case for sixty or seventy long years from the beginning of this century. It was not until the reign of Sir Richard Temple that the idea of a Rent Bill came into prominence, and it has passed through many phases during the past seven or eight years. The Bill is still in so imperfect a state that in a Committee of eleven members only three have come to be unanimous. The remaining eight have written more or less strong Dissents. Is it proper under the circumstances that the Bill should be passed with these eight Dissents without giving the public an opportunity of coming forward to lay before his Excellency their view of the case? Zealots and crotchety people apart, Bengal will not suffer at all for a few months' delay, while the demands of justice and fair-play will be satisfied by republishing the Bill, and giving an opportunity to those who are most interested fully to express their wants and feelings and wishes. Will his Excellency the Viceroy rise to the occasion? We cherish the highest sentiments of respect for his high sense of fair-play, and we shall be sorry, indeed, if we be disappointed. We would not have made this request had the Select Committee been unanimous. But with eight dissentients out of eleven the case requires the most careful consideration.

THE MILITARY SECRETARYSHIP.

Who is to succeed Colonel G. T. Chesney as Secretary to the Government of India? Rumour says Lieutenant-Colonel O. R. Newmarch, the Chief of the Military Accounts Office. Colonel Newmarch's claim to the post is that of seniority, a claim expressly disregarded in the appointment of Colonel Chesney himself. The office of Secretary in the Military Department to the Government of India is becoming of greater importance year by year. Circumstances, moreover, show that its importance is not likely to decrease in the future. There are large questions of reorganisation and armament to be considered; questions of fortifying certain points of the frontier, and of increasing the strength of both sections of the Army in India. Then, again, Volunteering has to be brought into a system, and the military employment of Eurasians considered. For work of the kind which must be taken up in the Military Secretariat, that is, in the Indian War Department, it is not easy to admit that a trained official accountant is the best man available. In his own office Colonel Newmarch is so valuable that his removal is to be deprecated. In the post of Secretary in the Military Department he would be altogether out of place. Colonel Chesney is, perhaps, as good an office man as Sir Henry Norman himself, and yet he is a failure at the head of a great department. Cannot the Viceroy look to the necessities of the State rather than to the claims of a Mutual Admiration Society, and place at the head of the Military Department a man of special ability as a soldier and statesman rather than a good official. The military staff of the Viceroy requires strengthening, and no better way of bringing about such a result could be found than the placing at the head of the War Office a strong soldier, in whom the public, as well as the army, might have confidence.—Indian Daily News.

FUNERAL OF MAJOR COVEY.—St. Peter's, Eaton-square, presented a remarkable sight a few days ago on the occasion of the funeral of Major Covey, of the 68th Durham Light Infantry, who died near Allahabad in March last year, from the effects of an accident. The body was received at the church by the vicar of St. Peter's (the Rev. J. Storrs) and the Rev. C. Bolden, rector of Preston Bissett, Buckinghamshire, who preceded it to the chancel steps, singing the hymn, "A few more years shall roll." After the 90th Psalm had been chanted, the hymn, "The saints of God, their conflict past," was sung, and after the lesson "Ten thousand times ten thousand," and while the Dead March in "Saul" was being played, the coffin, covered with choice flowers, followed by the Misses Covey and Mrs. Twiss, as chief mourners, was taken to the open hearse and conveyed to the Brompton Cemetery, where the rest of the Burial Office was said. Upwards of 100 wreaths and crosses of flowers were received from all parts of the country, among the donors being the Duchess of Wellington, Lady Green, General and Mrs. Greer, Mr. Ronald, Mr. Ernest McKenna, Colonel Lumsden, and the officers of the London Scottish, Captain and Mrs. Clayton, Captain and Mrs. Molyneux, Major and Mrs. C. Fitzroy, Colonel and Mrs. Culme-Seymour, Miss Grenville Wells, Colonel and Mrs. Kay, &c., &c. The following persons were present at the funeral:—Lord William Paulet (colonel of his regiment), Colonels Trent, Kay, Grace, and Culme-Seymour, Major Gordon, Captains Paget and Hood, the Hon. H. Tollemache and Mr. Hwfa Williams, Colonel and Mrs. Lumsden, Major Campbell, Major Puckle, Hon. J. Napier, and many other officers and members of the London Scottish; the Countess of Wemyss, the Duchess of Wellington, Mr. and Misses Hassard Short, General and Mrs. Carey, Sir James and Lady Paget, Sir H. and Lady Green, Mr. Macguire, Mrs. Marx, Mrs. Curling, General Hichens, &c.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE FALL OF KHARTOUM.

The Indian Mirror says:—Our sorrow for the position of General Gordon is as sincere as it is unbounded. We know of few Englishmen of such noble principles and sentiments as he. We cannot bear the idea that he has been killed. We hope he is still alive. If he is a prisoner, every endeavour should be made to effect his release. We find that the reports as to his fate are rather conflicting. The Mahdi's people say he has become a Mussulman, and is wearing the Mahdi's uniform? It is also said that he has been killed. The truth will doubtless come out soon. In the meantime, we observe that the English press is advocating the despatch of a contingent of Indian troops to Egypt. The disaster in Egypt bids fair to be equally a disaster for India ultimately, as on former occasions. For India will again, we fear, be saddled with the cost of any Indian contingent which may be sent to Egypt. We hope that the Government of India will take every precaution for the effective protection of our North-Western Frontier. Russia, so near our borders, may not miss the tempting opportunity of making some demonstration in that quarter, such as Lord Beaconsfield so absurdly made with an Indian contingent at Malta during the last Russo-Turkish war!

The Lahore Tribune says:—Khartoum has fallen; General Gordon has been murdered; these are the most sorrowful news of the last week. The lot of India has been, through the inscrutable Providence of God, so indissolubly bound with that of England, that each cannot but share in the joys and sorrows of the other. If the terrible news has sent a shock throughout England and the colonies, India has not been the less affected by it. Be he a Hindu, Mussulman, or Christian, every native of India, who has heard the news, has received it with the utmost sorrow. The feeling with which this disastrous news of Khartoum has been received throughout the length and breadth of India, gives the lie direct to the false and mischievous assertion, so frequently found in the Anglo-Indian papers, that the people of India are not well disposed towards their rulers.

The Indian Union (Allahabad) says:—The disaster—for we cannot call it less than a disaster—is national to the British and to the Indian nation alike. We add Indian advisedly. For, whatever be the feelings of a section of the Indian co-religionists of the Mahdi, the Indian nation, as a whole, can never look with satisfaction to any reverse in the fortunes of its rulers. The fate of England and India is so interminably mixed that it is suicidal for any patriotic Indian to think otherwise. And when we bear in mind that this new Soudan disaster and the old Afghan disaster to England are due, in a great measure, to the Indian policy of Great Britain, our interest is certainly enhanced in everything that concerns our rulers in their relationship with foreign politics touching our own fatherland.

The Oudh Akhbar, a daily journal published at Lucknow, writes:—The time has come when preparations to crush the enemy at one stroke should be made in such a way as befits the dignity of the British Empire. At first it was the desire of the Porte to get possession of Suakim, and it should be helped to do so. General Wolseley ought to get a firm hold of Berber and to concentrate all his scattered columns in one place. The roads to Egypt should also be guarded. We would take the opportunity of mentioning here that the gentry and aristocracy of this land heartily sympathise with the Government in this catastrophe; and the princes, without one exception, are ready to help the British with all their strength, treasure, and energy if necessary.

The Indu-Prakash says:—After all, the worst anticipations of the past week have been realised, and General Gordon has been killed. A life that was singularly heroic and full of romance has been lost, amidst universal regret, and the situation has now become more than ever critical. England cannot now recede without re-establishing her prestige, and political expediency demands that the enemy, who have given so much trouble in the Soudan and taken Khartoum with the life of Gordon, should be subdued. One cannot avoid the melancholy reflection that to a certain extent Mr. Gladstone's Ministry is responsible for the grievous misfortunes that have come over us so suddenly. Had the Ministry adhered to the principles with which it came into power instead of truckling to popular frenzy, it would have escaped all responsibility, and the Empire would have been spared what has now occurred. But its Egyptian policy has been marked by vacillation, and the Conservatives will not, of course, fail to make capital of the present disasters.

Bengal Public Opinion says:—The news of the fall of Khartoum in the Soudan, so long gallantly held by General Gordon, has been received with consternation by every friend of the British Government. Sir Charles Wilson arrived only two days late, and no one knows the exact fate of Gordon. He is not the man to allow himself to be easily taken a prisoner, and there is no certain news about him. That he was betrayed seems to be beyond the possibility of any doubt. The situation is a most critical one for the whole army of the Nile Expedition. They have no place to take refuge under, and retreat is almost impossible.

The Amrita Bazar Patrika says:—The fall of Khartoum is not a matter of much moment, for it is in the power of England to retrieve the disaster. But the fate of General Gordon has created a profound sensation all over the country. That brave soldier, philanthropist and patriot, that man of faith, is not only an object of regard of his countrymen, but, we believe, of men of the whole world. We are sorry that the ball given at Belvidere the day before yesterday (the 10th instant) was not postponed. With the fate of Gordon uncertain, we wonder how could Englishmen make themselves merry. In India, the feelings of Englishmen have not a deeper seat than their lips.

The Indian Spectator says:—Is the fate of General Gordon no longer a matter for speculation? The civilised world will miss the presence, personally invisible to most men, of the Puritan hero, who, twelve short months ago, obeyed with alacrity the command of his Sovereign, and "with an audacity which is wisdom, but which is audacity still," left London within twenty-four hours of the receipt of his instructions for Cairo, thence for Khartoum, riding his camel for one full month, alone and unprotected, through an inhospitable desert, to instal himself guardian of the Soudan. The story of his life and work since has been related by the daily press with an amplitude of detail that leaves nothing new to be added. So far as the military aspect of the work goes, it may be said that there is nothing comparable in the history of the most memorable sieges of old with that unparalleled and unique feat which enabled him to raise the siege of Khartoum. But the man's moral grandeur outweighs all military glory. Utterly indifferent to name and fame alike, innocent of the pride of birth and race, thoroughly disinterested in motive and action, burning only for the good of others, a true knight errant of these latter days; he not only burned to redress human wrongs and woes, but always went to the front and redressed them in person wherever they lay. Quick at taking resolutions, but undaunted in carrying them out, a man of will, which in its strength was harder than the hardest granite, an adamant will that bent only before the divine spirit that dwelt in him, Gordon, indeed, led a life which strikes one as having more of the primitive patriarchs at the dawn of history than of the product of human evolution to be perceived in this nineteenth century of ours. Though he has died the death of a hero and a patriot, it is sad to reflect that his blood has not sanctified a truly righteous cause. That of all living men Gordon Pasha should have fallen a victim to the fanaticism and perfidy of those who once not only dreaded him as a mortal god on earth, but loved and honoured him as one made of other than the common clay of humanity, is a much more saddening reflection. When will England learn how to deal with barbarous nationalities?

Native Opinion says:—A most marvellous character has been taken away from us. The Soudan rebellion closes a most chequered life, which has been, we may venture to say, not the heritage of England alone, but of the whole humanity. Fearless, always ready at the post of danger, confident in his own capacity, skilfully prompt in execution, all these had combined to make Gordon what he was.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—From Feb. 25 to March 4 the shipments of silver to India were as follows: Per s.s. Nepaul, Feb. 25, Bombay £84,000, Calcutta £18,000; Per s.s. Massilia, Feb. 26, Calcutta £40,000; Per s.s. Rosetta, March 4, Bombay £120,000. —From J. Westwood Thompson's Indian Circular.

INDIAN HOME ARMY CHARGES.—The appropriation account of the sum granted to meet the charges incurred for the effective and non-effective services of the regular forces serving in India for the year ended the 31st of March last has been issued as a Parliamentary paper. The amount of the vote for India home charges was £1,230,000. Of this £500,000 was appropriated in aid of the vote for the effective services, and the balance, £730,000, represents the vote for the non-effective. The latter is made up as follows:—Rewards, £3,000; half-pay, £13,500; retired pay, &c., £180,000; widows' pensions, £25,000; pensions for wounds, £500; and out-pensions, £508,000. From the report of the Comptroller and Auditor-General, it appears that of the effective charge only £445,000, and of the non-effective charge only £600,000, received from the Government of India, has been paid into the Exchequer. The amount for the effective services, therefore, falls short by £55,000, and for non-effective services by £130,000 of the votes taken in aid of those services. As regards the effective services, the Comptroller and Auditor-General explains that, according to a letter from the War Office, the basis on which future contributions are to be calculated has not yet been settled. Under the head of non-effective services, a table is given setting forth the arrears due from India, so far as the receipts in the Exchequer show. Covering the period from 1876-77 to 1881-82, it brings out a deficiency in each financial year, the total sum remaining unpaid by India in respect of these six financial years being £1,708,981 lls. 7d. Of the arrears for the years 1882-83 and 1883-84 the amount has not yet been determined. The balance due from India for miscellaneous services, which in the report for 1882-83 was stated to be £33,055 lls. 9d., appear by the Army Balance-sheet to be decreased, as at the 30th of September last, to £11,715 ls. 8d.

PRESENTATION TO THE MARQUIS OF RIPON.—On Saturday afternoon a number of ladies and gentlemen assembled at Willis's Rooms, when an address was presented to the Marquis of Ripon, late Viceroy and Governor-General of India, on behalf of the Indian community at present residing in England. The address, which was read by the Hon. Mahommed Ali Rogay, congratulated his lordship and the Marchioness of Ripon upon their safe return to England, expressed the esteem and affection entertained for the late Viceroy by Indians, and also admiration and gratitude for the various measures of his lordship's administration. Mr. Gladstone sent a note stating he appreciated very highly the services of Lord Ripon and regretting inability to attend. Lord Kimberley, Lord Northbrook, Mr. J. K. Cross, M.P., and Mr. Forster, M.P., also sent apologies. The Marquis of Ripon, in acknowledging the address, pointed out what remained to be done with a view of consolidating those measures which he had had the honour of initiating in India. The extension and development of local self-government was a most important matter. The elections hitherto conducted had passed off with the utmost tranquillity, and even in parts where religious feeling ran high unfortunate disturbances had not taken place—(hear, hear). A great means of making the policy thus initiated a success lay in the earnest endeavours of those to whom it was entrusted. He advised Indians who were now in this country to study the methods of sanitary reform which had been introduced, in order that they might be enabled to direct useful attention to the important question of sanitation in the native towns and villages. Referring to the education question, the noble marquis said that it was too large a matter to be taken up by the Government alone. A large amount would be required to spread even the most elementary education throughout India, whose finances did not possess that wonderful elasticity which had of late years distinguished the finances of England. The people of India, moreover, had quite as much "ignorant impatience of taxation" and as great a dislike of increased burthens as the people of England had. The difficulties of extending education in India were very great; and if the work was to be done adequately it was necessary that the Government should be aided in it by private individuals, by the efforts of those of wealth and position, and by public associations and societies. Alluding to the repeal of the Vernacular Press Act his lordship pointed out the injustice that was done when the writings of certain journals were accepted as testifying the sentiments of the vernacular Press at large—(hear, hear)—and maintained that to impose restraints, except on the ground of great public danger, involved an abandonment of the great principle which gave freedom to the Press. In conclusion he expressed the great gratification he and other friends of India felt at the offers of military assistance recently made to this country by many distinguished native princes of India—(cheers). These princes had taken a wise, a loyal, and a patriotic course—(cheers)—a course which was calculated to impress the people of this country with a true idea of the feelings of the people of India, and for which the best thanks of their own countrymen and of the English people were due. He particularly rejoiced at the offers of the Mahomedan princes, whose action in this matter was of great importance—(cheers). He should always feel the greatest interest in the Indian people, for whose well-being he should earnestly endeavour to labour. Mr. Lal-mohun Ghose, who was warmly cheered, thanked Lord Ripon for his address, and said the English people at large had no sympathy with the selfish and narrow-minded views of those who had attacked his policy.

NOTICES, DIVIDENDS, MEETINGS, &c.

SCINDE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAY COMPANY.—The Secretary of State for India has intimated to this company that it is the intention of the Government of India to purchase their lines under the terms of their contract. This will not preclude the directors from submitting a proposal for a new lease, under the Act applied for during the present session of Parliament, subject to the approval of the proprietors. The following letter has been sent to the Home News for publication, with reference to the above statement:—"28, Threadneedle street, March 5. "Sir,—With reference to the announcement in connection with the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway, I am requested by the committee appointed by the shareholders at the meeting on Feb. 13 last to intimate that a decided opposition will be brought to bear against the bill which the directors are promoting, my committee believing that the objects that they are seeking to carry out would be extremely detrimental to the interests of the proprietors generally.—SAMUEL GURNEY SHEPPARD."

CREDIT FONCIER OF MAURITIUS.—The directors of this company in their 21st annual report state that the amount invested in mortgages and loans in Mauritius at the end of 1884 was £663,613, as against £670,969 at the end of 1883, while the reported value of the properties on which the loans are secured stands at £1,824,659. There is an available surplus of £18,395, out of which the directors have carried the sum of £3,314 to the reserved fund general account, and £2,984 to the reserved fund exchange account, and recommend a dividend for the year at the rate of ten per cent., tax free, on account of which an interim dividend at the same rate has already been paid, leaving a balance of £97 to be carried forward. A general meeting of the shareholders of the above company will be held at the Cannon-street Hotel on March 31st, at noon.

JOHN A. CAMERON.

War Correspondent of the London Standard.

For some time a Member of the Madras Mercantile Community.

Killed at Metammeh, 17th January, 1885.

IN MEMORIAM.

Cut off in life's proud prime!

No longer may he wield the graphic pen
To tell the warlike deeds, from time to time,
That freeze the blood, yet stir the hearts of men
With sudden thrill!

One of a fearless band

Of brave non-combatants, whose duty 'tis
To run the soldier's risk in every land
Where war makes havoc, but whose weapon is
The pen, and not the sword; not theirs the fate
To win the decorations that may crown
The brows of combatants. The Fourth Estate
Far otherwise must seek to earn renown.
Their's but the need to know that they have done
Their duty to the public through the Press;
To feel that when they die, at least they've won
Their rest, and lived no life of idleness
Or sloth.

How many strange vicissitudes

Beset the path of strugglers in the strife
To earn their daily bread, what multitudes
There are whose true vocation in this life
Comes not till riper years! Such was the lot
Of Cameron! for he at length did find
That commerce with its dull routine was not
A pursuit at all suited to his mind.
Thus a strange turn of fortune's wheel o'ertook
Him in his mid-career.

From Press to Press!

When toiling at a Cotton Press, mistook
He much his walk in life, but did not guess
How soon his dormant talents might find scope
For energy upon a wider field;
Nor little thought he then that he might hope
One day the correspondent's pen to wield
On battlefields, mid scenes of bloody strife
And all the horrid carnage that abounds
In war, when blood is up, and, life for life,
Man fights 'gainst man.

Soon, with swift sudden bounds,

Sprang Cameron into the foremost place,
Of dauntless special correspondents, and Where'er war raged, there did he speed apace,
And quickly flashed the news from land to land,
With master touch and knowledge of detail
Which few could equal. A charmed life he led Through many a fierce campaign. But what avails
To tell of mystic spells, when all have fled.
The die was cast; he went to meet his doom;
And suddenly was snapped life's golden thread.
He died!—and nobly earned a soldier's tomb!
Brave soldier of the Press, if not of war,
Where'er thy deeds be told, both wide and far,
Let this be said, "E'er in the foremost rank;
When duty called, thou ne'er from peril shrank!"

—Madras Mail.

EXPECTED VISIT OF H.H. THE NIZAM.—His Highness the Nizam will, we hear, go to England in the spring of next year, so as to be present at the opening of the Indian and Colonial Exhibition. The Nizam will be attended by his Minister and a large suite, and his appearance in London will be certain to create a considerable sensation. This will be the first time an Indian ruler of the first class has set foot on English soil, and the Nizam's visit is likely to be made the subject of as much ceremonial and as much personal curiosity as attended the Shah of Persia in 1873.—Times of India.

—o—

A PROPOSAL is on foot for starting either a Volunteer Artillery or mounted Infantry Company at Lahore.

MAJOR SIR GEORGE LARPENT, of the Connaught Rangers, is to be Aide-de-Camp on the Staff of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, in the place of Captain Rose, as Major Spottiswoode is not coming out to take up the appointment.

THE Government of India have notified that Rule 24 of the revised rules for admission to the Staff Corps as published in Clause 165, India Army Circular of 1884, is extended to probationers for the Staff Corps appointed under Clauses 61 and 62, India Army Circular of 1882. A probationer requiring sick leave out of India will not be granted leave for any specified period, but merely leave to proceed to England to appear before a medical board. On arrival in England the officer will be examined by a board and granted leave, or his services will be replaced at the disposal of his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, according to the board's report.

A STEP of honorary rank with permission to wear the uniform of his corps is to be granted to an officer of volunteers retiring after a service of twenty years as a commissioned officer, on the recommendation of the commandant of his corps, supported by the Government or Administration under which the corps is serving.

THE following rule relating to Staff Corps probationers has been added to the Army Regulations, India, Volume I., Part I.:—"An officer who may be removed from the service owing to failure to pass the required examinations for the Staff Corps will receive a gratuity of one year's English pay of rank."

THE Government of India have notified that the rate of pay assigned by the regulations to the rank of trumpeter, bugler, fifer, piper, or drummer is admissible to any soldier filling those posts within the establishment, irrespective of age. Under this rule boys under 18 years of age may draw the payment of trumpeter, &c.

THE following ruling regarding deferred pay to British soldiers has been published, in substitution of Article 1,320, Army Regulations, India, Volume I., Part I.:—"A non-commissioned officer who, before completing 21 years' service, is reduced to a rank in which deferred pay is not issuable beyond the first 12 years of service, or reverts to such rank, will not receive deferred pay for any period subsequent to the first twelve years of service, as defined in Article 1,316. If again promoted to a rank in which deferred pay is issuable he will only receive deferred pay from the date of such promotion."

IT has been notified that a warrant officer of the British Army suspended from rank will, while so suspended, receive the pay of a private, gunner, or sapper, according to the arm of the service from which he may have been originally appointed to warrant rank.

IT has been decided that the provisions of the Government of India Army Circular No. 137 of 1884, which fixed the tenure of the appointment of Secretary to the Surgeon-General Her Majesty's Forces, Bengal Indian Medical Department, at five years, are to apply also to the Secretaries to the Surgeons-General in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies.

THE rule in the Army pay regulations which regulates the grant of increased pay to lieutenants of the British Army is revised as follows:—"The higher rate of pay laid down for a lieutenant on completing three years' service is not admissible unless he has passed the prescribed examination. Should he not have passed such examination before completing three years' service, the higher rate of pay will be admitted to him only from the date on which he passes the examination, unless it is decided by the Commander-in-Chief that he had not an opportunity of qualifying at an earlier date." Paragraph 3, Clause 216, India Army Circulars of 1881, is cancelled.

THE Madras Mail says:—"The Rifle Match, the Viceroy and Staff v. the Commander-in-Chief and Staff, takes place in Simla. It will be a close contest when it is shot off. Lord Dufferin's skill with the rifle is of no mean order, while Sir Donald's hand is still steady, and he has burnt powder too often not to be able to look a target straight in the (bull's) eye. Sir Frederick Roberts and Staff have challenged the winners."

Miscellaneous.

THE Times of India has the following obituary till the departure of the mail, February 20:—

The Rev. Mr. Smithwhite, Acting Principal of the S.P.G. Theological Seminary, Madras; Mr. Alfred Dudley Stewart, third officer of the I.G.S. May Frere; Mr. P. A. S. Sheppard, Assistant Conservator of Forests, third grade, Coimbatore; Mr. C. J. Syer Wilkinson, barrister-at-law, Calcutta.

THE LATE GENERAL EARLE.—We are requested to state that it is proposed to place a memorial in the chapel, Wellington Barracks, to the late Major-General W. Earle, C.B., C.S.I., and that a committee has been formed to receive donations from those who have been connected with him in the Brigade of Guards. The committee consists of the following officers:—Colonel Lord William Seymour, Lieutenant-Colonel C. Birch Reynardsen, Lieutenant-Colonel George Gordon, Major the Hon. C. Eliot, and Mr. A. A. Wood, from whom any further particulars can be obtained.

THE Pioneer says:—The experiments in growing and storing fodder in certain cantonments in these provinces, which owe so much of their success to General Sir Herbert Macpherson, are now about to receive the personal attention of the Commissary-General. Colonel Hunt, C.B., may be expected in Allahabad on or about the 21st, and is likely to be met here by Lieutenant-Colonel Burlton and Major W. G. Smith, Deputy Commissaries-General of the Lower and Central Circles, and Lieutenant-Colonel Badcock, C.B., from Rawal Pindi. The result of the conference should be a considerable extension of the useful operations already carried out.

THE VOLUNTEERS IN INDIA.—The Indian Government has often been criticised, both on the score of expense and efficiency in being alone in keeping up an army on exactly the same footing in time of peace and in time of war. The late Army Commission, under Sir Ashley Eden, though it offered no direct suggestions for the creation of a reserve, laid much stress on the importance of developing the Volunteer movement. We are now able to announce that considerable measures towards this end have practically been adopted. The affiliation of part of the Volunteers as a Reserve to the Army will be stretched out, and the capitation fee will be increased for efficient. The Volunteer bodies are, moreover, to be placed more immediately under the control of the central military authorities, and uniformity of equipment is to be introduced. Nothing, however, seems possible in the way of Volunteer cavalry except that smart force, the Behar Mounted Rifles, which the planters furnish.—Home News.

THE KRISTO DAS PAL MEMORIAL.—A large and influential meeting was held on the 9th ult. at the British Indian Association for the purpose of appointing an executive committee. Sir Richard Garth having been voted to occupy the chair, the first resolution, "That the following gentlemen be requested to act as a sub-committee for the purpose of receiving subscriptions, and to carry out the objects of the resolution adopted at the general meeting," was moved by Sir Jotendro Mohun Tagore, and seconded by Mr. Monockjee Rustonjee. The second resolution, "That an account be opened at the Bank of Bengal in the name of Dr. R. C. Saunders and Rajah Poorno Chunder Singh," was moved by Maharajah Norendra Krishna Bahadur, and seconded by Nawab Abdool Luteef, Khan Bahadur. The following are the names of the gentlemen who form the executive committee of the Kristo Das Pal Memorial Fund:—The Hon. Sir Richard Garth, President; Mr. Horace A. Cockerell, Mr. H. L. Harrison, Maharajah Sir Jotendro Mohun Tagore, Dr. Rajendra Lala Mitra, LL.D., C.S.I.; Maharajah Norendra Krishna Bahadur, Baboo Joy Kissen Mookerjee, Baboo Doorga Churn Law, Hon. Peary Mohun Mookerjee, Rai Kunjoo Lall Banerjee, Baboo Jogendro Chunder Ghose, Mr. H. Bell, Mr. J. J. J. Keswick, Mr. Leeman, Prince Furrokh Shah, and Nawab Abdool Luteef, Khan Bahadur.

We understand that at the grand banquet to be given on the 25th to Lord Ripon by the National Liberal Club, the following menu (inscribed on a Wolseley carte blanche) will be provided:—

Afghanistan à la Russe.
Soudan Garrisons Steved in their own Juice.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, MARCH 10, 1885.

THE "COMPACT OFFICIAL MAJORITY" OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

IN the discussion on the Bengal Tenancy Bill, which is now being forced on in the Legislative Council of the Viceroy, one hundred and four amendments have been "disposed of" during the past week. And as to the manner in which they have been met by the Government of India, this is what the Calcutta correspondent of the Times tells us:—"Most of the amendments hitherto dismissed were either withdrawn, or defeated by the compact official majority voting according to order"! The italics are, of course, ours. We feel that no word of further comment is needed to illustrate the way we live now"—the way in which a so-called "Liberal" Government forces into law a measure, that is admitted to be hateful to all the persons and classes affected by it, and that can hardly be other than offensive to the moral sense of the individual members who are thus compelled to "vote according to order."

At this critical stage of the Bill, let us very briefly review the situation.

The Times correspondent says this week:—"It becomes daily more apparent that no one wants the measure in its present form, that the time spent on it is merely wasted, and that the best and most popular course would be to drop the Bill."

The only excuse that is offered for the indecent haste with which the Bill in its present form is being rushed through Council by the brute force of a "compact official majority" is, that the Viceroy and the Executive Council are anxious to get away from the heat of Calcutta to the breezy heights of Simla. That this excuse would be allowed by Lord Dufferin personally, we do not for one moment believe. In every public office that his Excellency has hitherto held, Lord Dufferin's devotion to duty has been most conspicuous; and it is absolutely incredible that he would allow a measure to be rushed into law without due public discussion—a measure that is of vital importance to the prosperity of a vast province, and to the fortunes of millions of loyal subjects—merely because its republication and circulation in the vernacular Gazettes would entail on the personnel of the Supreme Government a few weeks of that "grilling" which is annually the lot, for months together, of the High Court Judges and of the vast bulk of the local officials.

And is it in the slightest degree an exaggeration to speak of "the indecent haste" with which the measure is being forced through the Council? What are the facts? The Bill in its present form—admitted to be enormously altered—was only made known, even to the Viceroy's Council, on Friday, February 13th. Even if it had immediately been published in the vernacular Gazettes—and we believe that this has not yet been done—it would have been impossible for any knowledge of its provisions to have already reached the remoter districts of the country; and as matters stand, some weeks must still elapse before the all-important information can really be said to have been communicated to those who are most deeply concerned. Only a year or two ago Lord Ripon's Government issued a formal resolution pledging the Administration to give the Indian public an opportunity, not only of becoming acquainted with the details of proposed alterations in the laws, but also of discussing the merits and demerits of the proposals in the Press. It is impossible to imagine any measure more clearly demanding this frank and honest treatment on the part of the Government than that now under consideration. And when it is further remembered that the proposals of the Select Committee, on which the new Bill is founded, only commanded the assent of three members of that Committee out of eleven—when it is remembered that every non-official member of the Committee dissented from the report, and that the acknowledged representatives of the Native community on that committee condemn the Bill in toto—it seems absolutely clear that to force it into law at the point of the official bayonet, and in contemptuous defiance of the whole body of Bengal public opinion, would be an act of arbitrary high-handedness unparelled in the history of British Indian Administration.

THE LOYAL OFFERS OF OUR INDIAN FEUDATORIES.

THE vast inherent strength of an Empire that is based—whatever errors may occasionally have been committed, whatever blunders occasionally condoned—on the eternal foundations of truth, justice, and equity, has never been so conspicuously manifested as on the occasion of the existing difficulties into which the British Empire has been brought by the mistakes of its rulers and the industry of its enemies. The miserable story of the fall of Khartoum and the death of the heroic Gordon seemed to leave room for nothing but condemnation of the egregious folly that had brought about such a tragedy; and when it was known that the ever-wakeful "Divine Figure from the North" had seized the opportunity of an apparently hopeless British entanglement in Africa to deliver the blow invited by our Kandahar scuttle in Asia, it seemed as if nothing was wanting to complete the disastrous nature of the impasse into which we had been led. But where there is true strength and vitality, difficulties are turned into opportunities. Here at home, we have seen the old country closing up its ranks; and a loyal Opposition, spurning the teachings of Midlothian, has remembered that we are Englishmen first of all, and, so far from harassing, has forced a paralytic Government to do its duty. In the Colonies, the same spirit of ardent loyalty has burst forth; and has shown the world that the British empire can count on the aid of a nation in arms in every quarter of the globe. And nowhere have these loyal manifestations been more gratifying than in India, where loyalty has triumphed over differences of race and of creed, and where Muhammadans have vied with Hindus in giving practical effect to their proud boast, that in the hearts of her subjects Victoria is no less Empress of India than Queen of England. Their Highnesses the Nizam of Hyderabad, the Begum of Bhopal, the Maharajah of Patiala, and the Maharajah of Jhind, have taken the priority in tendering military aid, to which their rank and the amplitude of their resources entitle them; but we doubt not that their example would gladly be followed in every corner of India. We earnestly hope that the Government will respond to these loyal offers with the utmost heartiness, and that means will be found to gratify the honourable ambition of the Chiefs. In British India, too, as well as among the Feudatory States of the Empire, has been manifested that warm loyalty, the depth and the sincerity of which we have so often dwelt on in these columns. We entirely agree with the view which the Times correspondent tells us prevails in Calcutta, that the Russians will find, if they fancy that a "disparaged Government" is synonymous with a disunited Empire, that they have made a very great mistake.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE FAMOUS MEN OF BIHAR.*

This is a really good book of 312 demy pages, giving accounts of the famous men who have contributed to make history in the province of Bihar during the last two hundred years. The list of worthies comprise kings, ministers, nobles, scholars, poets, traders, and enterprising people of all kinds, whether Hindu, Mussulman, or Sikh. There are four-and-twenty men of fame included in the series, and that is a decidedly good number for a moderately sized district such as Bihar, more especially when we find that the only names included in the roll of honour are those of men who have rendered themselves remarkable by their learning, their piety, their skill, and by the benefits they have conferred on humanity. The mere conqueror and desolator of provinces is not thought worthy of a place among the truly great. This is a sufficiently remarkable circumstance, considering the havoc which war has made in Northern India during the last two or three centuries, and the necessarily great impression which these wars make on the ordinary mind. It shows an appreciation of the best province of history in a quarter where we should have least expected it; for it has many times been asserted that Indians have no esteem for real history. Another feature in this book is the care that has been taken to supply the date, the place of birth, and the immediate relationships of the subject of each notice. Thus it will be seen that the book is, on the whole, a very satisfactory performance, and does much credit to its author, Bābū Rāmādīn Singh. He has evidently taken a great deal of trouble, and has collected together much that is interesting not only to the inhabitants of Bihār, but also to the world at large. It is also pleasant to see that it is written in the Hindi language, and in a very good form of that language.

* "Bihār-Darpan; or, The Mirror of Bihār" (being a collection of biographical sketches of the famous men of the Province of Bihār), by Bābū Rāmādīn Singh. Patna, 1883.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA &c.

LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P., is making a brief stay with the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces at Allahabad.

DR. RAJENDRALAL MITTRA has been elected president of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, with which he has been connected for forty years.

THE NAWAB SALAR JUNG, Prime Minister of Hyderabad, has gone to Calcutta, where he has had an interview with the Viceroy.

A SEPOY of the 5th Punjab Infantry, who had sought the aid of the law in vain against the abductor of his wife, went to their house in Lahore City and murdered her paramour and severely wounded his wife. The sepoy was apprehended at once.

At a meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council at Calcutta on February 13th, the Hon. Sir Stuart Bayley presented the further report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Tenancy Bill. The report will be taken into consideration on the 27th instant.

THE REV. MR. HASTIE, who returned to India from England a few weeks ago, has been arrested in Calcutta in execution of the decree obtained against him by Miss Pigott.

THE hottest day in Calcutta during the month of January last was the 28th, when the thermometer rose to 83 degrees, and the coldest was the 7th, when it fell to 51°·8. The total rainfall of the month amounted to 42 of an inch, the average fall for the last 48 years being 43 inch. Rain fell only one day during the month, the average number of rainy days in the last 24 years being two.

MR. BUCKLAND'S HEALTH.—Mr. C. E. Buckland's health will necessitate his taking a somewhat extended period of leave very shortly. Mr. P. Nolan, the Magistrate Collector of Shahabad, will succeed Mr. Buckland as Junior Secretary of the Board of Revenue.—Englishman.

THE Viceroy has, it is stated, rejected the expensive scheme involving an outlay of fifteen lakhs for a new Government House on the Observatory Hill, at Simla, and has chosen a cheaper one for rebuilding Peterhoff in great part. This will cost four or five lakhs, and the Secretary of State has formally sanctioned it.

A MARINE COURT of Inquiry was held at Calcutta on Tuesday, the 17th ult., to investigate circumstances attending the destruction by fire of the light-ship Mermaid. A great deal of evidence was gone into, and the court adjourned for the purpose of obtaining the opinion of the Chemical Examiner to Government on some points connected with the combustibles stored on board.

THE Englishman understands that it is practically settled that Mr. E. Gay, Accountant-General of Bombay, will succeed Mr. Westland as Comptroller-General, and that Mr. Atkinson, Accountant-General of Bengal, will go to take Mr. Gay's place at Bombay. Mr. Rawlins, Accountant-General in the Punjab, has been offered the corresponding post in Bengal.

JUDICIAL PETULANCE.—On dit a learned judge of the Calcutta High Court, who is observed generally to use his tongue more freely than his better judgment, cried out to a European attorney the other day:—"Go out, sir; go out and finish your lunch outside the court." All this outburst of temper was elicited by this attorney in question being found picking his tooth after lunch. The attorney was rather taken aback, and thought the learned judge was addressing a coolie and not an officer of the court. Such fiery exhibition of temper is rather too common with the honourable gentleman.—Bengal Public Opinion.

A VISITOR TO ENGLAND.—On dit that there is a possibility of his Highness the Maharaja of Durbhunga visiting England this hot weather. This is an intention to be much applauded by reason of the Maharaja's pre-eminent position among the landed aristocracy of Bengal and membership of the Legislative Council of the Governor-General. Much practical good must result from his acquaintance with English politicians and statesmen, and his observation of things in general; and it may be confidently said that very much more good is possible of accomplishment by our Indian princes visiting England than by the visit to India of honourable personages who merely carry away impressions.—Englishman.

NOTES FROM AJMERE.—A correspondent writes:—"The transfer of Mr. Leslie S. Saunders to the Berars, to officiate for Mr. Henvey, is greatly regretted in Ajmere, where his services have been most meritorious. The name of his successor is not yet known. There is a rumour that Lord Dufferin will pay a flying visit to this city, and will open the Mayo College and distribute the prizes to the boys of the institution. His lordship will afterwards proceed to Jodhpore, the capital of Marwar, and open the Jodhpore Railway of fifty-four miles from Kharehi Station.—Pioneer.

THE LATE RAJAH SIR SAHIB DYAL.—The following notification appears in the Punjab Gazette:—"The Lieutenant-Governor has received with great regret information of the death of Raja Sir Sahib Dyal, K.C.S.I., which took place at Amritsar on Jan. 17, 1885. The British Government has thus lost a trusted friend, and the Province an eminent representative of the class of administrators who held office under the Sikh and British Governments in succession. Under both administrations the abilities and honesty of the Rajah were recognised by titles of distinction. A loyal and faithful counsellor, who from the first comprehended and supported the policy of the British Government, the Rajah enjoyed as a public man the confidence of the State, and in his private capacity the honourable and well-earned repute of benevolence and liberality.

MOFUSSIL NOTES.

(From the Indian Planter's Gazette)

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH, at Darjeeling, has been closed for repairs while the new organ is being put up.

THE services of a full squadron of the Behar Light Horse have been offered to Government for service in the Soudan.

THE usual Motihari meeting will take place in May, and will probably be open to all the world except Goruckpore.

MR. E. MACNAGHTEN will carry on the duties of the Behar Indigo Planters' Association Secretaryship during Mr. W. B. Hudson's six months' absence.

THE regiment is now doing the musketry course class-firing at all head-quarters of troops. On the 20th instant there will be the usual meeting at Mozufferpore to shoot for prizes.

WE learn that the rumour of Mr. Gwatkin Williams succeeding Colonel Money in the management of the Durbungah Raj is without foundation. No such arrangement is contemplated.

THERE was a capital pig-stick last week under the auspices of Messrs. Webb and Ruxton at Sukree, Mozufferpore, when Messrs. Jimmy Macleod, Rowland Hudson, Sims and a few other Behar Mahdis disposed of four pigs, one of which weighed 18st. 8lbs.

THAT learned savant, Professor Von Schrottky, recently mystified a meeting at the Mozufferpore club by a dissertation on his patent bottoms for "varts." At the end of the lecture he was asked to write the mysterious word. He spelt it "vats," and every one was relieved.

MADRAS.

THE Moplahs, who created the recent fatal disturbance at Maliapuram, have been disarmed.

PRIVATE BARRATT, 43rd O.L.I., has been recommended for the Victoria Cross for gallantry during the late Moplah disturbance at Maliapuram.

THE REV. J. SMITHWHITE and Mrs. Smithwhite have died suddenly at Madras from cholera.

THE F. COMPANY of the Madras Sappers and Miners, under the command of Captain Cockburn, have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness for active service in the Soudan.

THE BACHELORS' BALL.—Last night the bachelors gave their annual ball in the Banqueting Hall (by permission of H.E. the Governor) to the society of Madras. Greatly as they and their predecessors for many a long year have distinguished themselves on former occasions, it may be said that their ball of last night was picturesque beyond precedent.—Mail, Feb. 14.

CAMP OF EXERCISE.—The Madras Artillery Volunteers are to have a camp of exercise during the whole of March next. Captain Branson, the commandant, and sixty-eight rank and file, will live in camp during the month, and the men will be rationed in accordance with the rules in force among European troops.—Bangalore Spectator.

SIR F. ROBERTS has prepared a scheme for encouraging the employment of pensioned sepoys in civil life. In a circular to commanding officers, he orders the adoption of a system of registering the opinion of invaliding medical committees as to the kind of work a sepoy is fit for after discharge. Registers are to be kept by commanding officers, and also by the officials in the district in which the sepoy wishes to obtain employment. The Adjutant-General will communicate with the heads of Government Departments and mercantile firms, with the view to obtaining employment for reliable men.

MRS. GRANT DUFF's fancy dress ball at Madras on Monday, Feb. 16, was a most brilliant success. It was given at the banquet hall, the entrance to which had been made to represent the Ghauts, with Sholah covered with ferns and palms. About 250 guests, all in fancy costume, assembled. Mrs. Grant Duff represented Ann of Austria, and Mr. Grant Duff the Duke of Buckingham, while the Government House party represented various members of that illustrious court, all got up with great historical accuracy. The Hon. H. E. Sullivan was the sailor of Pinafore. All the leading members of Madras society were present, the usual characters affected in fancy dress balls being represented. Their Serene Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Baron Rosenberg were also present. The former only arrived in Madras in time for the ball. Doctor Furnell, surgeon-general, as a silent monk, was the character of the evening.

THE LATE REV. C. E. KENNET, D.D.—At the last Clerical Conference it was decided that the memory of the late Dr. Kennet should be perpetuated in some tangible form, in consideration of the great work he had done in connection with the Tamil Mission in Southern India, of his great theological attainments, and of his personal piety. A sub-committee was accordingly formed, consisting of the Archdeacon and the Rev. Messrs. Gibson, Clarke, and Smith white, and it was resolved that the memorial take the form of a theological library, Dr. Kennet's library being purchased for this purpose, and that a scholarship in his name be established at Sullivan's Gardens Seminary, of which he was the Principal for so long a time. To carry out this proposal it is estimated that a sum of Rs. 4,000 will be required, and the sub-committee have been authorised to appeal to the clergy and such of the laity as may give pecuniary aid towards the proposal.—Mail.

CEYLON.

(Ceylon Times, Feb. 14th.)

DURING the past week the Governor returned from his tour through the Southern Province by way of the Mission Station of Baddegama. Since his return there have been two sittings of the Legislature on successive days. At the first of these, Thursday, 12th, a rather protracted discussion arose as to the right of clerks in Government employ to petition the Council, in regard to their promotion into other departments, in short, as to their right to approach the legislature on any subject. The Tamil member maintained the right. The Governor and the Colonial Secretary, whilst admitting the right of the community at large, as the public to approach the Council by petition, denied the right and the propriety of any part of that public to do so in their capacity of Government servants drawing Government pay, and so it was ruled with good reason. The Customs Amendment Ordinance was read a first and second time by the suspension of the "standing orders." The Attorney-General introduced a bill for the institution of Reformatory Schools. The Church of England Bill was reconsidered in Committee, and the Bill was read a third time and passed, and also was the Ordinance for appropriating unexpended balances of the Loan Board. The report on the Prædial Products Protection Bill was brought up, and the Council went into Committee on it, the power to inflict lashes by magistrates being given; and the Bill was referred to the Law Officers of the Crown. The report of the Sub-Committee on the Forests Ordinance was brought up, its consideration being taken up on the following day, when it was passed without any further amendment. On the next day, in reply to the question of the member for the mercantile community, as to whether the Government propose to continue the construction of the Ruwanwella-Bulatkopitiya road, the Hon. the Government Agent, W.P., on behalf of the Acting Colonial Secretary, entered very fully into the history of the road, and explained the reason why it was not continued this year, the reason being that, in the opinion of the Government Agent, W.P., the road from Ratnapura to Nambapane at Panadura was a more pressing one, and this road had consequently to yield precedence to it. The Hon. R. A. Bosanquet remarked that his question had not been answered. H.E. the Governor replied that the Government certainly proposed to continue the road, but could not say when they would begin to do so. Hon. P. Rama Nathan called attention to the memorial of the clerks of the General Post Office, and moved that in the opinion of this Council the claims of the memorialists to promotion in other branches of the clerical service deserve the consideration of the Government, if increased emoluments on pension cannot be given them by way of compensation. In doing so the hon. gentleman challenged the statement of the Hon. the Acting Colonial Secretary, that it was a grave breach of discipline for the clerks to present such a petition, and quoted three precedents in which similar petitions have been presented: one in 1842 by the Colonial Secretary; another in 1843 by an unofficial member; and another in 1858 by Mr. George Wall. He contended that the clerks had a right to receive an answer to their prayer. Hon. A. L. de Alwis seconded. The Hon. the Acting Colonial Secretary, on behalf of the Government, replied that the Government declined to enter into any of the questions touched on in the memorial, or to take any notice whatever of the memorial, as it was a grave breach of discipline for the clerks of the Post Office to memorialise the Council in the manner they had done. He confessed the precedents quoted by the hon. member took him by surprise, but attempted to explain them away. A lively discussion ensued on this, in which Hons. R. A. Bosanquet, P. Rama Nathan, J. Van Langenberg and the Governor took part. The Hon. P. Rama Nathan pressing his motion to a division, His Excellency the Governor moved the previous question, in order that no opinion should be given on the claims of the memorialists. The Hon. the Acting Colonial Secretary seconded. Hon. P. Rama Nathan appealed to the rule which said that, when a motion has been made and seconded, and the debate thereon concluded, the question shall thereupon be put to the vote by the presiding member. His Excellency, after referring to the rules, confessed he saw nothing about the "previous" question there, and suggested to the Colonial Secretary that he should move the adjournment of the debate sine die, which he accordingly did. The motion being seconded, the Council divided on the question—ayes, 6; noes, 5. The debate was therefore adjourned sine die. All the unofficials voted together. The remaining items on the order of the day were then proceeded with, the principal one being the reading of the Forest Ordinance in Committee. The Ordinance was passed through committee without much discussion. The Hon. the Acting Colonial Secretary gave notice that at the next sitting he would bring in a bill for making provision for inquiries into deaths in connection with the New Code. The Council then adjourned to Thursday, the 19th inst.

THE Annual General Meeting of the Planters' Association was to be held to-day, the 17th instant, when, in addition to the election of a Chairman in place of Mr. Wall, who retires, several important subjects will be brought before the members—amongst other topics a proposal to offer a prize of Rs.500 "for the best plan of a Tea Factory for a garden of 300 acres in a district where the rainfall averages 120 inches," and a resolution to be proposed by Mr. Cross, "that one meeting of the Planters' Association be held in Nuwara Eliya annually, with a view to benefiting more directly the Eastern Planting districts." But of still greater significance is one to be brought forward by the outgoing Chairman, Mr. Wall, "to invite the attention of members to the general feeling of dissatisfaction prevailing in Her Majesty's colonies, especially in Ceylon, with the present system of administering Colonial affairs from Downing-street, and to move for a sub-committee to consider and report upon the best means of promoting the transference of the functions of the Secretary of State for the Colonies to an Imperial Council, whose proceedings should be conducted publicly like those of Parliament, and in which all the colonies should be represented." There is just now a very strong feeling of dissatisfaction among colonists as to the mode in which our affairs are mismanaged and muddled in Downing street, and it is to register that dissatisfaction that the present movement is on foot.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

INDIAN TEA.—Messrs. G. White and Co. report as follows on the Tea Market, from Feb. 26 to March 5:—The sales have been larger than those of last week, as some importers were evidently keeping back their teas until after the February figures were published. The deliveries for the month were 640,000lbs. in excess of the corresponding period of 1884 (which comprised 29 days against 28 days this year), whilst the stock on the 1st inst. stands about 500,000lbs. less than on March 1, 1884. There has been a good demand for all useful descriptions, full prices having been obtained for fine and finest, whilst the improved inquiry noticed last week for good Souchongs, Pekoe Souchongs, and Broken Teas has further developed, and an advance of about ½d. per lb. may be quoted on these descriptions. Ceylon.—Only a small quantity has been offered, but the desirable parcels have met with good competition and realised full prices. The quality of some of the well-known marks is at present disappointing, as is often the case early in the season, and it is to be hoped that later shipments will show considerable improvement.

Notes of the Week.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, February 27th; Madras and Allahabad, February 25th; Calcutta, February 24th; Ceylon, February 22nd.

THAT mysterious thing which Mr. Gladstone at first called "an agreement," and now calls "an arrangement," between the English and Russian Governments, has been the subject of telegrams between Lord Granville and our Ambassador at St. Petersburg. Mr. Gladstone having called the thing an "agreement" in the House of Commons, Lord Granville subsequently telegraphed to St. Petersburg to ask the Russians whether they were graciously pleased to assent to this use of an English term by an English Minister in an English House of Commons! Could chicanery and "fumbling" go beyond this? If there was certainly an agreement, why, in Heaven's name, should we ask Russia's permission to call a spade a spade?—and if there was an uncertainty about the matter, why did Mr. Gladstone, at a moment of intense political excitement, undertake to drug the public anxiety by using phrases for which he could not produce adequate guarantees?

DOUBTLESS Russia will be only too delighted to assure us that the agreement is not only binding, but also permanent. For, in the first place, soft words cost nothing, and give time for the moving-up of troops; and, in the second place, this precious arrangement, which by Russian favour we are to be allowed to call an agreement, actually records our surrender to Russia—at least, for the moment—of all that Afghan territory which she has been forcibly seizing during the decrepit administration of Lord Ripon! We say "for the moment;" and Mr. Gladstone—who seems to look on the affair with that cœur léger with which Napoleon III. set out for Berlin or Sedan—raised a good laugh in the House of Commons by saying that the agreement would be held valid as long as it was convenient. But it may be doubted whether the Afghans—or, for that matter, the Russians—will look on this surrender as the merely ephemeral make-believe which the sophistry of the Prime Minister now represents it to be. We think that this quasi-acknowledgment of the Russian status quo, a position that has been obtained partly by violence and partly by the criminal negligence of Lord Ripon's Government, is a disgrace to English statesmanship and English honour. If it is not, indeed, an abject and absolutely fatal surrender to the Russians, it is deceitful to them, treacherous to the Afghans, and degrading to ourselves as a Christian Power bound to "be just and fear not."

AND the results of this dishonesty already justify the maxim that honesty is the best policy; for it is now stated authoritatively that M. de Lessar and the Russians are now resolutely determined to insist on the Afghan surrender of the all-important position of Penjdeh. Mr. Gladstone would doubtless give it them, merely because they are determined to have it—just as he would give them Bombay, for the same reason, as a material guarantee for our humility and inoffensiveness. But will the Afghans be equally subservient? We fear that sound Liberal principles have not yet "permeated" the Afghan mind sufficiently to induce that unregenerate race to kiss the rod and fawn on the foot that kicks them.

THE Maharajah Narendra Krishna, one of the most deservedly revered noblemen in Bengal, and the President of the Central Committee of Bengal Landholders, has sent the following telegram to the leading London papers on this iniquitous Bengal Tenancy Bill:—

the Tenancy Bill, not only as a manifest violation of the zemindar's rights, but also of the solemn and repeated pledges of the British Crown to respect and perpetuate these rights, and, in particular, of the promises made by Her Majesty to her subjects in the Proclamation of 1858. They protest that the Bill is founded upon assumptions which are wholly untrue, and as to which the zemindars have, in vain, demanded an inquiry. They protest against the Bill, further, as assuming that the zemindars have been a rackrenting and oppressive landlord; whereas the public know that he has asserted his rights with conspicuous moderation. They further protest against the Bill becoming law, because, while it deprives the zemindar of his estate and rights under the permanent settlement, it will reduce the actual cultivator to a cottier-tenant, rack-rented by middleman users, as in the Deccan. They protest further that the Bill will fill the country with litigation. They protest that the Bill has been passed by members who have no interest in its provisions, forcing it upon a community of sixty millions of people deeply interested in land and who are opposed to it, and have presented innumerable petitions against it. They further protest that the Amendments were disposed of in Council in a most unsatisfactory way. Out of twenty members of the Council, fifteen are in the service of Government; and in most cases, when the members in charge declined to accept an Amendment, the whole official majority ranged themselves against it, and it was rejected. They protest, finally, that out of two hundred and twenty-eight sections of the original Bill, forty-five sections were omitted, fourteen new sections added, and twenty-two wholly recast in the Select Committee; and, notwithstanding these changes, the Bill passed without being republished and translated into the vernacular languages. On all these grounds, they protest against the Bill, and make their humble appeal to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen not to allow it to be placed upon the Statute-book.

WE ask our readers to compare the striking language and statements of this most important telegram, from the acknowledged leader of Calcutta Native Society and a nobleman eminently representative of Bengal Hinduism, with the remarkable speech in Council and the telegrams of the Maharajah of Darbhanga, the chief hereditary Prince of Behar and the representative of a line of chiefs who were powers in the country in Mogul times—and again with the telegram of the Hon. A. B. Miller, who entirely represents the non-official Englishmen of the country. Can any chain of evidence be more complete, that this wicked and cruel measure is loathed by every honest mind in Bengal, and is driving the most loyal and the most munificent class in India into ruin and consequent disaffection? Is Lord Ripon's mad frenzy so contagious that it has infected even his successor, the English statesman who, of all others, would have been thought by his countrymen least likely to be bitten by that wretched gad-fly.

LORD WEMYSS, Sir Herbert Maxwell, and the other English politicians who have so nobly taken up this far-off question—surely a question that ought to be treated by conscientious Englishmen with all the more scrupulous care because it is far-off—deserve the warmest thanks, not only of Indians, but of every friend of the Empire and of English honour. But why does not every honourable Englishman boldly come forward to join in demanding justice, and a withdrawal of this persecution, for our fellow-subjects in the East? Well, the answer is, that few, alas, very few Englishmen know anything whatever about Indian matters; and fewer still will take the trouble to investigate the merits of a legislative proposal that only affects the happiness and well-being of some sixty millions of our Indian fellow-subjects.

THEN, too, the fatal twist given to Liberal opinion in England on all Indian topics by the supposed necessity of defending Lord Ripon's incapacity and folly has rendered it almost hopeless to expect a fair judgment from any section of the English Liberal Press. Even the Pall Mall Gazette, usually superior to these paltry considerations of party, speaks of the Bill as "a tardy measure of justice meted out to the silent and unrepresented millions." It absolutely ignores the fact that everyone, without a single exception, who has any shadow of a claim to speak on behalf of the "silent and unrepresented millions"—take, for instance, the ultra-Radical (but honest) Indian Statesman and Friend of India—declares emphatically that the Act will cause the ruin of Bengal and the enslavement of the ryots!

LORD RIPON has given the word that the measure is "too much in favour of the zemindars;" and, of course, the Echo is at once to be found in the army of preachers on this most stimulating text. An Act that confessedly presumes every tenant-at-will to have been in possession of his holding twelve years (and, therefore, vested with the valuable rights of fixed occupancy, transferred from the zemindar without compensation)—a presumption which Mr. Justice Field and every other Indian judicial authority tell the Government will very rarely be capable of being legally rebutted by the zemindar, however good his case may be—is actually thought by Lord Ripon to be "too much in favour" of the zemindar! It would be interesting to know whether even this concession, which Lord Ripon considers so inadequate, has been made to his lordship's Yorkshire tenants at Studley. But surely this haste to sound the trumpet for further attacks on the now well-nigh ruined zemindars ought to warn Lord Dufferin of the hypocrisy that pretended that this incendiary legislation was dictated by benevolent motives, and was intended to make things quieter between the landlords and the tenants of Bengal. The Act had hardly passed a day—and the money-lenders and landsharks of Bengal had hardly had time to whet their knives in anticipation of the rich spoil awaiting them under its provisions—when the author of all the mischief begins to cry out for more!

THE Echo says that "it"—that is, the Bengal Tenancy Act—had, according to the Viceroy's telegram, "been twice translated into the vernacular." We confess that this seems to be the plain meaning of Lord Dufferin's words (see our Parliamentary report). On reading this distinctly false statement, will Lord Dufferin order the immediate dismissal of the unworthy official (we know not and care not who he may be) who has done such despite to the honour of a nobleman who is not only Her Majesty's representative, but of whom, we think, it might truly be said that he is sans peur et sans reproche?

It is difficult, even, to imagine what Bill was meant by this official Jesuit. Was it the Bill as amended by the suggestions of the Bengal Government in October last?—that is, the Bill as it virtually was when it came into the hands of the Select Committee in November last. Or was it the Bill as it left the hands of the Select Committee on February 13, just a month ago? We pause for a reply. And we may pause—we shall not get one; for it certainly was neither of these Bills, but some long forgotten phase of this Bill, a phase months ago as dead as Julius Cæsar, of which the draftsman of Lord Dufferin's telegram speaks as if it were identical with the Bill now in question!

THE Bill, in its original form of 1877, was a measure, avowedly, to enable zemindars more easily to recover their rents. Does the Government depend on the translation of this phase of the Bill into the vernacular as their excuse for not translating the Bill of 1885 before passing it?

AND the beauty of it all is, that this good, worthy, honest Government only in December, 1882, by the lips of Mr. Ilbert in the Council, and by a letter of the Legislative Department to local Administrations, solemnly pledged itself, not only to the publication, but actually to the circulation and discussion of legislative proposals before enactment! Nobody had asked for this gushing declaration of virtuous intentions; it was simply the outcome of that itching desire for popularity that was always moving Lord Ripon's Government to go up and proclaim its amazing virtues from the housetops. And now, when the time comes for performances, in place of promises, the Native community learns the practical value of Lord Ripon's "bray without ceasing."

THE Radical papers further make a great point out of the statement contained in the same telegram, that "the Bill passed without division after seven days' debate." Now, we appeal to anyone who knows anything whatever of the circumstances of the passing of the Bill, and the hatred with which it is regarded by all classes—is this an honest description of the circumstances? The Echo, the paper that specially supports Mr. Lalmohun Ghose's candidature, says on this:—"In a word, Sir Herbert had been as good as hoaxed by the Maharajah of Durbhunga"! And the reason given is:—"It (the Bill) had been passed by the Legislative Council without a division after seven days' debate; it had been twice translated into the vernacular."

Is this English fair-play.

EVEN the Spectator, whose honesty is, we believe, beyond suspicion, is deceived by the amazing tissues of misrepresentations that have been put about by the supporters of the Bill. It astounds the informed reader, and misleads the ninety-nine uninformed, by the outrageous statement that "after; at least, thirty years' of discussion and deliberation Lord Lytton, in 1877, ordered an inquiry into the grievances of the Bengal peasantry, who complain that they have gradually been deprived of their ancient fixity of tenure."

OF course all the Conservative papers of England take a fairer view of the misfortunes of our Bengal fellow-subjects, in being made the corpus vile on which Mr. Chamberlain's famous "ransom" theory has first been tried. But in a question of spoliation and confiscation such as this, the Conservatives are as the "just men who need no repentance." It is, however, satisfactory to observe that the Morning Post, the St. James's Gazette, and the Globe, have fairly put before the public the enormity of the crime that is being perpetrated in Bengal under the pretence of philanthropy. But the Radicals virtually say to the Government, "John, have you ruined the loyal zemindars? Have you fattened the usurers and the pettifoggers? Have you effectually enslaved the helpless and voiceless ryots? Then, John, come to prayers!"

"THE Storehouses of the King, by Mrs. Jane Van Gelder, which was announced some time since, is, we learn, now ready for issue by Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. The authoress (who is a lady well known in Calcutta) claims to have discovered the purposes for which the pyramids of Egypt were built, and the work should, therefore, prove of interest to Egyptologists. We shall hope to review the book at length in an early number.

THE Times of India has the following obituary till the departure of the mail, February 27:—

Ram Sing, the Kooka leader; Rev. Father John Esseiva, S.J., chaplain of the Parell Convent, Bombay; Lieutenant Leicester Seward, South Lancashire Regiment (wing officer 9th Bengal N.I.); Captain E. Hanstock, Paymaster East Yorkshire Regiment, Bombay.

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY.—An address was forwarded by the Council of the East India Association to Lord Reay on Wednesday last, prior to his departure to assume the Governorship of Bombay. In congratulating his lordship on his appointment the association draw attention to the great commercial interests of Bombay which result in considerable profit to this country, and urge "that it should equally be rendered advantageous to the producers and traders of Western India. To this end two main conditions are needed—namely, that communications shall be rendered as effective and cheap as possible, and that the water supply shall be stored and distributed so as to serve the wants of agriculture and protect the people against droughts." Attention is also drawn to the economic condition of the peasantry of Western India and to the promotion of the revival or introduction of indigenous mechanical arts, "so that the masses of the people may not, as now, be almost entirely dependent on agriculture and its attendant precarious labour." In conclusion the address refers to the position and prospect of the numerous native States in Western India, and to the many signal instances they have given of their loyalty to the Crown and their willingness to accept the guidance of the Bombay Government.

Telegraphic Intelligence.

The following is the usual weekly telegram from the Times correspondent at Calcutta, dated March 15:—

"Lord Randolph Churchill arrived at Hyderabad to-day, and is staying at the British Residency.

"An affray which recently occurred at Hyderabad gaol, and which ended in the shooting and bayoneting of several prisoners, has attracted some attention. A commission of inquiry has been appointed to investigate the facts.

"The reports of the tea and indigo districts are somewhat unfavourable, owing to the want of rain.

"The Central Asian crisis absorbs public attention, and the telegrams describing the progress of the negotiations and the state of feeling in England are anxiously awaited. Several more or less wild rumours have been current during the past week. These generally take the form of a positive assertion that war has been actually declared against Russia, or that a collision has occurred between the Afghans and the Russians. The first statement is, of course, unfounded, while the other is less open to doubt. The Government is reticent regarding its news from the frontier; but I have reason to believe that up to Thursday evening it had not received authentic intelligence of any actual collision. Still, it is by no means unlikely that shots have been exchanged between the outposts.

"It seems highly probable, too, that Russia is availing herself of every day's delay to push troops towards the frontier—not, perhaps, so much along the Sarakhs-Herat line, where their advance would speedily be noticed, as from Tashkend and Samarcand towards Kilif, on the Oxus, and Kolab, if not actually to Balkh and Faizabad. Such a movement might be carried on for some time before any news of it could reach Cabul, and it is a movement which has perhaps greater elements of danger than that on Herat. It would, therefore, seem to be clearly our interest not to let the negotiations drag, but to insist that Russia should state at once whether she means peace or war.

"Should she elect for the latter, then, in India at least no apprehension will be felt as to the result. The Government is quietly but vigorously pushing on its preparations. Lord Dufferin commands the entire confidence of all classes, and is known to be in complete accord with his military advisers. The public may rest assured that he and they are fully alive to the gravity of the situation, and that they are leaving nothing undone in order to be ready at every point, whether for offence or for defence. The spirit of the native army is admirable. The native newspapers, of every shade of opinion, vie with their English contemporaries in the loyalty of their tone, and from all parts of the country are received the accounts of men well qualified to judge of the temper of the people agreeing in this, that in this matter the Press faithfully represents the public feeling. The educated classes in quiet times often grumble concerning the shortcomings of the British Raj, but they know well that any change of masters would be a change for the worse; while the people occupy themselves little with politics, but have a childlike faith in the Government, and believe that it will win in any case.

"While, however, the public look to the future without apprehension, and with full confidence in Lord Dufferin, they do not fail to recognise how greatly his difficulties were increased by his predecessor's apathy in this Afghan frontier question. Without going back to the period of the evacuation of Candahar, it is a fact that at least a year ago Lord Ripon was warned in the clearest terms by his military advisers. But he would never allow the smallest precautions to be taken. If, instead of shirking the question, he had boldly faced the situation, even so recently as last summer, the chances are that Russia would never have ventured to put forward her present preposterous claim. It is right that the British public should know where to fix the responsibility for the difficulties and dangers that may arise.

"The preparations for the Rawul Pindi durbar are proceeding rapidly, although it is still doubtful whether the event will take place at all, as if war should break out the Ameer would not leave Afghanistan. According to his present plans, he will start from Cabul about the 23rd instant, crossing the frontier on the 26th. He will be met at Lundikhana by the Commissioner of Peshawar and a cavalry escort. On his arrival at Rawul Pindi the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab will receive him. The festivities will last about four days, and will present every circumstance of military pomp. A number of the Punjab princes will attend with large followings, and representatives of the native nobility from all parts of the Empire will also be present. The Nizam has offered to send a high noble, with a fitting retinue.

"It is understood that among the presents to be given to the Ameer will be the very appropriate ones of one heavy and one mountain battery, completely equipped, 5,000 Sniders, and 250 rounds of ammunition per rifle. It may also be mentioned that the corps d'armée at Rawul Pindi will be equipped so as to be ready to take the field at any moment. The entire Headquarters Staff, as well as the Commanders-in-Chief of Madras and Bombay, will be present, so that Lord Dufferin will have all his military advisers around him."

The Times correspondent with the Afghan frontier commission telegraphs the following from Gulran, dated March 8:—

"Affairs remain very much in statu quo, but, if anything, they look brighter.

"The statement current that our escort numbers 1,400 men, with artillery, should be contradicted. Its actual strength is 200 lances and 200 bayonets.

"Mails despatched from Meshed are now received in three days.

"Captain Yate left yesterday to join Colonel Ridgeway at Pendjeh.

"LATER.

"The tidings of the concentration of troops on the north-western Indian frontier and of the warlike preparations in England have just been received, and have evoked much enthusiasm."

Imperial Parliament.

DEBATE ON THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

The Earl of WEMYSS said he desired to put a question to the noble earl the Secretary of State for India (the Earl of Kimberley) with reference to the Bengal Tenancy Bill now under discussion before the Council of the Viceroy of India. The noble earl was proceeding to explain that the measure was one practically to extend to Bengal what was known as Irish land legislation, when

The Earl of KIMBERLEY rose to order, and said that he was quite ready to answer any question on the subject, but the Bill was one of a difficult and complicated character, and it was out of order to discuss it without notice.

The Marquis of SALISBURY thought that the course the noble earl (the Earl of Weyss) proposed to take was a very common one, and pointed out that the question whether the subject was difficult and complicated depended very much on the knowledge of noble lords.

Earl GRANVILLE contended that as this was a question asked after giving private notice, it would be out of order to discuss it. If the question would lead to discussion notice should be placed on the minutes, not for the benefit of the Government, but for the benefit of noble lords who might be interested in the subject.

The Earl of WEMYSS then said that as objection had been taken to the course proposed, he would put his question on the paper for Thursday next.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY, MARCH 10th.

Sir H. MAXWELL asked the Under Secretary for India whether it was true, as stated in the Indian Statesman of February 3, that, whilst the average total incidence of rent, (including the Government Revenue demand) in Bengal is only two rupees per acre, the Government revenue demand alone in the North-Western Provinces amounts to three rupees per acre, in addition to a rental of three rupees more; and whether it was true, as stated by the same paper, that Lord Dufferin has received "instructions from home" to pass the Bengal Tenancy Bill.

Mr. J. K. CROSS—The average rate of Government revenue per acre in the North-West Provinces is one rupee, two annas, three pies, as the hon. member will see on reference to page 197 of the Indian Statistical Abstract, No. 15. It is impossible to say what is the average rate per acre in Bengal. Neither the area cultivated, nor the amount of rent realised from that area is known with accuracy. But detailed inquiries made in several districts in 1883 tend to show that the average rent rate considerably exceeds two rupees per acre. Her Majesty's Government would see with satisfaction the passing of a measure on the subject of Bengal Tenancy during the present session of the Legislative Council at Calcutta, but no instructions from home have been given to Lord Dufferin to pass the Bill.

Sir H. MAXWELL—I will ask the hon. gentleman whether he can confirm or contradict the statement contained in the following private telegram from a native member of the Viceroy's council:—"Motion for republication of bill in the vernacular, and delay for three weeks not carried. Opposed on the ground that Executive Council wished to go to Simla. If delay allowed bill would have to be discussed;" and whether this bill is being pressed forward with such urgency in consequence of the Viceroy feeling it convenient to go to a cooler climate.

Mr. J. K. CROSS—The hon. member asks me a question on a subject of which I am ignorant. If he will give me notice of the question, and allow me time in which to receive a reply, I shall be able to answer him.—(hear, hear).

Sir H. MAXWELL—In consequence of the extreme urgency of this question—the Bill being within three days of being passed—I beg to give notice that before proceeding with public business, I shall ask leave to discuss the matter on a motion for the adjournment of the House.—(hear, hear).

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

Sir H. MAXWELL asked leave to move the adjournment of the House in order to discuss a matter of urgent public importance—viz., “the proceeding of the Viceroy and Council in Calcutta in pressing forward the Bengal Tenancy Bill without giving time for the due consideration and the translation thereof into the vernacular.”

The SPEAKER.—The question is that leave be given. (Ministerialeries of “No, no”). Is the hon. member supported by forty members?

A large number of members on the Opposition side and a few Irish members rose, whereupon

Sir H. MAXWELL said that at first sight it might appear presumptuous on the part of a private member to interrupt the course of public business for the purpose of discussing so grave a matter as the policy of the Viceroy of India and his Council; but right hon. gentlemen on the front benches would naturally hesitate to adopt the course which he had taken, as they would be unwilling to run the risk of interfering with the policy which commended itself to Her Majesty's Viceroy. He had already read to the House part of a telegram which he had received from the Maharajah of Durbhunga, one of the native members of the Council. That message concluded with these words:—“We, however, hold that a Liberal Government like the present ought first to consult the convenience of the nation instead of their own. They wish to rush the Bill through next week. Kindly put the matter before Parliament”—(hear, hear). The Bill was introduced into the Council only a fortnight ago, and it was understood to be radically different in many important details from the Bengal Tenancy Bills which had previously been introduced and withdrawn. The complaint of the zemindars of Bengal was that the present measure had not been long enough before the country, and that its provisions were not sufficiently known. At home due time was always allowed for deliberating upon and discussing measures, and if such time were ever refused by the Government, the nation would insist upon it being given. But what power had the zemindars of Bengal to insist upon delay? The only power they could exercise was through their representatives in the Council, and when those representatives were overridden by the compact Government majority no course was open to them except to appeal to public opinion at home.—(hear, hear). In the Times of Monday a dispatch had appeared containing an account of the manner in which the Opposition in the Council were being met. It said that most of the amendments to the Bill were either withdrawn or defeated by the compact official majority voting to order. This matter was urgent, because if things were allowed to take their course, the Bill would be passed in three days' time. It was also important, because vast interests would be affected by the measure. He did not say that a Bill which dealt with the whole question of land-ownership was not called for; in fact, he believed that in many respects the “permanent” settlement effected by Lord Cornwallis was unsatisfactory. But as that settlement was intended to be permanent, surely any proposal to alter it should be approached with due deliberation.—(hear, hear). This was not a time when it would be wise to alienate from us the affections of the landowners of Bengal, who resembled in every respect the loyal landowners of Ireland. Recent legislation had done much to alienate the loyal classes in Ireland from the Liberal party, and it was possible that the zemindars of Bengal might similarly be alienated from the Imperial Government. Being unwilling to delay further the progress of the Redistribution Bill, he would conclude by asking the Under Secretary of State for India for some assurance that the measure before the Viceroy's Council would not be passed with undue haste.—(hear, hear). He trusted that the reason why sufficient time in which to translate the measure into the native language had not as yet been given, was not that the Viceroy and his Council were in a hurry to get to Simla. He begged to move the adjournment of the debate.

Sir G. CAMPBELL objected strongly to the course taken by the hon. member. The House knew nothing of the merits of the question to which the hon. member had drawn attention, and the hon. member knew nothing about the matter himself—(some cries of “Oh”). He did not himself understand the question—(“hear, hear” and laughter). This, however, he did know—that the subject had not been hurried over. On the contrary, what Bengal had reason to complain of was the delay that had taken place, although the question had been made the subject of mischievous agitation for years. It was a matter of enormous public importance that the question should be settled. Since 1793 the rights of the zemindars had been limited by law, and this Bill was wanted to define the exact limits of those rights. The zemindars of Bengal were mostly good and loyal subjects of the British Crown, and it was, he trusted, unnecessary to be unjust to any other class in order to secure their affection. The hon. member was wrong in contending that the Bill ought to be delayed for some considerable time. He agreed, however, with the hon. member in condemning the growing tendency of the members of the Indian Council to hurry Bills on in order that they might leave Calcutta. He remembered the time when the Council were obliged to remain in Calcutta all the year round, and yet managed to thrive pretty well—(laughter). He objected to the unsettlement of the Government, which resulted in a constant tendency on the part of the members of the Government to hurry Bills on. An important measure of this kind should not be indecently hurried through because members of Council were anxious to get away to Simla—(hear, hear). He hoped the Bill would be well settled, and if there were any difficulty in settling it in a few days he thought the members of Council ought to remain a few days in Calcutta for the purpose.

Mr. MACFARLANE said that some of the statements of the hon. baronet, if left uncontradicted, were calculated to mislead the public. The hon. baronet had said that this Bill was brought before the Council only a fortnight ago, whereas the fact was that the Bill, or one very like it, had been before the Council for years and years, and was the result of a Commission upon this very subject. Then the hon. baronet said the Bill was to be passed in a foreign language; but unless Bills for India were passed in a great number of languages they must be foreign to some of the people they affected. After all, this Bill was merely an extension of an Act passed in 1859 against which the zemindars made exactly the same outcry. The hon. baronet also said that the zemindars of Bengal were a formidable body, and that they ought to be conciliated; but the hon. baronet evidently did not understand the object of the Bill, which was not to conciliate the zemindars, but to conciliate 70,000,000 of their tenants. Which of the two classes, he should like to know, was best worth conciliating. He did not pledge himself to the details of this Bill, but, as to the principles, in his opinion they were nothing more than justice.

Mr. CROSS did not intend to enter into the merits or demerits of the Bill, but he thought he should explain to the House the mode in which the matter was brought before him by the hon. baronet. That night when he came down to the House he received a notice from the hon. baronet saying that unless the answer he gave to the hon. baronet was perfectly satisfactory the latter would bring the question before the House. He told the hon. baronet practically the answer he was going to give, and the hon. baronet said he would consider whether it was sufficient. What was the question the hon. baronet asked? He asked whether he (Mr. Cross) was aware that this Bill, which had only been before the Council a fortnight, had not been translated into the vernacular, and told him at the same time that an eminent gentleman in Bengal had sent a telegram stating that the Bill had not been translated and wished for the intervention of Parliament. That was an astonishing statement to him. If the hon. baronet would give him time he would telegraph to India and get the facts of the case and place them in his hands. He did not see that he could do anything more—(hear, hear). He could only say that if, instead of sending him a note at half-past five o'clock that evening, the hon. baronet had called upon him any time during the day and asked his attention to a question of this importance, he would have been glad to place himself in communication with India at once on the subject. He hoped the hon. baronet would accept this explanation and withdraw his motion for adjournment.—(hear, hear).

Mr. J. LOWTHER said that nothing could be fairer than the speech of the hon. gentleman the Under-Secretary, but at the same time he never knew a case in which it was more reasonable and desirable for a private member to avail himself of the Standing Orders of the House and bring them into requisition than on this occasion. He would remind hon. gentlemen opposite, including some members of the Government who were conspicuous for their disorderly interruptions, that the House of Commons discharged the functions of a Senate as well as those of a vestry; and if the House was to vindicate its claims to be the great council of the nation and to attend to the affairs of the whole British Empire, it must be occasionally content, at the risk of spending a few moments, to withdraw itself from merely domestic and party political affairs in order to give attention to the vital and important interests of our Indian Empire—(hear, hear). This Bill was simply an adaptation to Hindostan of the principles which had had such an unenviable notoriety in connection with land legislation in Ireland. That property guaranteed by previous legislation should be summarily taken away at a few days' notice without those primarily affected by it having a legitimate opportunity of making themselves acquainted with the contents of the Bill, was, in his humble judgment, a monstrous and outrageous act of despotism, which the House should be slow to sanction.—(hear, hear). He hoped the Government would allow the House clearly to understand, not that three or four days after the Bill was passed his hon. friend would be privileged with an interview at the India Office and be told that the Government had ascertained that the Bill had passed and that they could not pursue the subject further, but that the assurance of the Under-Secretary was a bonâ fide one—namely, that Her Majesty's Government would communicate by telegraph with the Government in India and would ensure that due deliberation was observed, in order that the persons interested in the Bill might be made acquainted with the contents of the Bill and have a legitimate time to consider so important a measure before it became law—(hear, hear).

Mr. GLADSTONE.—The right hon. gentleman, with his usual moderation of language, relies upon the stock of knowledge that he possesses for the statement he makes that there is now being perpetrated in India a monstrous and outrageous act of despotism. The violent language which the right hon. gentleman uses both here and elsewhere does not tend to carry conviction to the minds of candid gentlemen. The hon. baronet opposite by his motion appears to me to ask for time. The right hon. gentleman has supported the motion, but he wants no time, because he says this act is an act of plunder, and what is the use of demanding time for an act of plunder?—(hear, hear). He has full knowledge of it already, and if he has had time to acquire that knowledge which he declares he possesses, surely those who are in India, and who have been discussing it and hearing of it for two or three years, must have an adequate knowledge of it also. The right hon. gentleman says that this is a very fortunate and happy use of the forty members rule. I am bound to express an entirely opposite opinion—(hear, hear). The right hon. gentleman is under a mistake in bringing this matter forward as one of urgent public importance without having previously done his best to obtain information as to the actual state of the case—(hear, hear). No opportunity has been given to us of obtaining a knowledge of the actual state of the case by telegraphic communication. What is the state of knowledge with which the House is now called upon to discuss this matter? We have heard a telegram once read by the hon. baronet—we have not got that telegram before us, and it is difficult to recollect its exact terms—and upon the mere strength of that telegram Her Majesty's Government are desired to interfere with the proceedings of the Council of India. In one thing I sympathise very much with the hon. baronet—namely, in the weight he is disposed to attach to the opinion of native members of Council—(hear, hear). I believe the telegram states that the Bill has been passed by an official majority. Do I understand him to say that none but official members voted for the Bill?

Sir H. MAXWELL said he had only the information contained in that telegram, which he again read.

Mr. GLADSTONE.—I do not find that there is any statement in the telegram that the Bill was carried by an official majority.

Sir H. MAXWELL.—That was in the telegram in the Times.

Mr. GLADSTONE.—Well, I want to know whether the hon. baronet has any knowledge as to what is exactly meant by carrying the Bill by an official majority. Was there any statement in the Times on that subject? These words are often very loosely used. I should like to know what course was taken by the other native members of the Council—(hear, hear). It has been stated by the Under-Secretary that this Bill is in substance the same as has been before the Council in former years, and it is within my own knowledge that Lord Ripon considered that he was handing over to Lord Dufferin substantially the same Bill—(“oh”). We have no evidence of its being a Bill of a different character. Is the House ready to say that upon the statement sent in a telegram by one member of Council the House is to be called upon, by means of the forty members rule, and in derogation of the ordinary course of business, distinctly to interfere with the regular action of the Legislative Council? It appears to me that this is a very questionable and inconvenient mode of proceeding—(hear, hear). I know there have been cases of scandalous rapidity—I need not quote them—in passing Bills through the Legislative Council, but I have not heard of any such under the management of Lord Dufferin or Lord Ripon—(hear, hear). Whenever such a case occurs it will be a very proper matter for the investigation of this House; but as the right hon. gentleman thinks this is a most appropriate manner of using the forty members rule—I must say that a statement conveyed upon such grounds as have been recited, with such a total want of particularity—without any application to the official organ of the Indian Department to improve our knowledge of the case, does not warrant a demand that this House should use its influence with the Executive Government for the purpose of interfering with the course of business in the Legislative Council—(hear, hear). We must have some confidence in the Governor-General and Executive Council until some grounds have been laid before us for presuming that they have acted wrongly—(hear, hear); and I submit that no grounds have been shown which ought to overbear that general confidence and to induce us to do that which has a tendency to weaken the authority of the Legislative Council—(hear, hear).

The right hon. gentleman has asked whether the assurance of my hon. friend the Under-Secretary was bonâ fide.

Mr. J. LOWTHER.—I assumed that it was.

Mr. GLADSTONE.—Having assumed that it was bonâ fide, the right hon. gentleman gave a construction of it metamorphosing it into something totally different, and, of course, reserving to himself, with his usual discernment and moderation—(a laugh)—the right of coming down and accusing my friend the Under-Secretary of not having acted up to his assurance. I do not think there is any doubt as to the bonâ fide of my hon. friend the Under-Secretary, and I think the House will do well to allow my hon. friend—who, I believe, is at present so occupied—to endeavour to ascertain the real facts of the case—(cheers).

Sir S. NORTHGOTE, who was received with cheers, said,—I am always very reluctant to bring questions under the consideration of this House by resorting to a motion for adjournment, and if the step taken by my hon. friend was for the purpose of discussing the merits of this Bill, I should feel considerable hesitation in approving of it—(hear). But the question raised by my hon. friend does not relate so much to the character of the Bill as to the course of proceeding which we shall take. He, it appears, has, as a member of Parliament, been asked by an eminent native member of the Legislative Council to bring the matter before Parliament, and ask for time for the consideration of this Bill. Under such circumstances, it is not unreasonable that an inquiry should be made as to the correctness of the statements of the native gentleman to whom reference has been made—(hear, hear). The right hon. gentleman, however, gets up and finds fault with my hon. friend for making use of this particular opportunity of moving the adjournment in order to bring the case before Parliament, and he says that it is highly inconvenient and unfair that the course of public business should be thus interrupted. We are told that we should not now have raised this question at all, though it is one of great urgency, because it infringes on the time to be devoted to a matter of great internal importance, but which does not press in the same way from day to day. There is a parallel between what is going on here and at the other side of the world, for while this is the answer we are given here, in India it is answered that it is necessary for the Governor-General and his Council to go to Simla without delay. But neither of these answers touches the root of the matter—namely, that time ought to be given for the consideration of this Bill—(hear, hear). The subtle distinctions raised by the Prime Minister are really not quite worthy of the occasion—(hear, hear). My hon. friend says that he has been informed by a member of the Governor-General's Council that such and such feelings are entertained on this subject, and the right hon. gentleman meets this by asking “Do you know what the other members think?” I do not see that it was necessary or possible for my hon. friend to know that—(hear, hear). Then the right hon. gentleman asks as to the opinions of the official members on this subject. It is easy for the Under-Secretary to obtain that information in a very short time. In an hour or two he will probably obtain information which will set all these matters at rest. He has shown no disinclination to give that information, and I shall be perfectly satisfied with his answer—(hear). Had it not been for the rebuke which the Prime Minister has given to my hon. friend, and which, I think, under the circumstances, was hardly called for, I might not have thought it necessary to rise—(hear, hear).

After a few words from Mr. BIGGAR,

Sir H. MAXWELL asked leave to withdraw his motion.

Leave was, however, refused, and the motion was negatived without a division, and the House then went into Committee.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY, MARCH 12th.

THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

The Earl of WEMYSS, who had given notice of his intention to put the following question to the Secretary for India—Whether he would use his influence to cause the Bengal Tenancy Bill to be published and circulated as amended by the Committee of the Council in India before it was passed into law, so as to enable those interested in the measure, whether zemindars, middlemen, or ryots, to have an opportunity of becoming acquainted with its provisions—said that he found that he stood somewhat in the position of the man who locked his stable door after his steed was stolen, because he had read in the Times of that morning a telegram to the effect that the Bill had passed. This announcement had come upon those interested in the matter by surprise, and he trusted, therefore, that their lordships would permit him to say a few words with regard to this measure, so as to explain the nature of the question he was about to put to Her Majesty's Government in reference to it. In his view this Bengal Tenancy Bill was intended to extend to India the principles of the Irish Land Act—(hear, hear). The history of this Bill was a somewhat curious one. A Bill had been introduced in 1877 of a totally different character, but in 1883 the measure referred to in his question had been introduced, and it contained the principle of the three F's—namely, fixity of tenure, free sale, and fair rent, as well as that of compensation for disturbance. In the summer of 1884 the measure was referred to a Select Committee. The object of himself and all those for whom he spoke was that some time should have been given—for it was now a matter that was past—for the consideration of the amended Bill, in which great and marked changes had been made. Instead of time being given the Bill had been rushed through. More time to consider it and the republication of the Bill in the vernacular were all that was asked for. But the Viceroy had to meet—and he was glad of it—the Ameer of Afghanistan on the 27th, and it was held that this Bill had to pass before the departure of the Viceroy. He could not but think that this matter had been followed up and pressed with undue—that was, unwise—haste. But the Bill would not become law until it received the sanction of the Secretary of State, and what he asked was that the noble lord would not give his assent to this Bill until there was a full opportunity of ascertaining what was the opinion of the public with regard to it—(hear, hear).

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH wished to point out that the means of circulating information in India were not so good as in England.

The Earl of KIMBERLEY thought he had better read copies of telegrams which had passed between himself and the Viceroy. He telegraphed to the Viceroy as follows:—

“From Secretary of State, 10th March, 1885.

“Statement telegraphed by Durbhunga made in Parliament that you are pressing through Rent Bill without giving time for translation into vernacular; reason given that you must go to Simla. What shall I reply?”

He received the following reply:—

“Your telegram 10th. Statement absolutely unfounded. Bill already twice translated into vernacular. Select Committee held sixty-four meetings. Of these, twenty-eight held in Calcutta within last few days. Maharajah attended only seven. Committee consisted of eleven members, of whom only two go to Simla, and decided vernacular republication unnecessary, because almost all alterations were excisions favourable to zemindars and not new clauses. After Bill reported fortnight elapsed before considered by Legislative Council. First motion in Council was for suspension by zemindar representative, which was lost by majority of eighteen to two. Two native members who do not go to Simla had voted before members of Executive Council were called upon to vote. Members representing ryots' interests voted in majority. Bill passed to-day without division, after seven days' debate”—(hear, hear).

He thought it was clear this matter had received an extraordinary amount of deliberation. In 1877 there was a Bill introduced. This Bill was directed to giving more facilities for the recovery of rents, but it was considered it was impossible to deal with one branch of the subject only. The result was that it was thought desirable by the Viceroy of that time, not his noble friend (the Marquis of Ripon), that there should be an inquiry into the whole subject of Bengal tenancy. In 1880 the Commission reported, their report occupying about 500 pages. A Bill was brought forward in 1881. In March, 1882, the Indian Government sent home the report of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and the report of a Commission founded upon it. On August 17 the matter was considered by the Secretary of State and a despatch sent, stating the opinion of the Secretary of State in Council that the necessity for legislation had been established, and going into the matter, as would be seen from the papers which would shortly be presented to Parliament. After the receipt of the despatch, the Bill was printed by the Legislative Department of the Government of India, and, in conformity with the views of Lord Hartington, a Bill was introduced into the Legislative Council on March 12, 1883, and referred to a Select Committee on the 13th, being then published in English and three vernacular languages. The Bill was then fully examined and criticised. An amended Bill was prepared, which was published in the early part of 1884. The Select Committee having expressed a wish for further information, reports, opinions, and criticisms were obtained from a vast number of officials and other persons. Upon the consideration of all this evidence, the Bengal Government again referred the matter to a Select Committee. On February 12, 1885, the Select Committee reported, stating that the measure was not so altered as to require to be republished, and recommending that it should be passed as amended.

The EARL OF WEMYSS.—How many said that?

The Earl of KIMBERLEY said that he did not know, as he had not the numbers. The Select Committee consisted of six official and five non-official members, three natives, and eight Europeans. The Government of India followed their recommendations. The important question was whether it was desirable to delay this legislation any further, and whether the alterations were of such a nature as to render it absolutely necessary there should be such delay. As he was informed, the alterations were not of a very serious or substantial character, and were, at all events, principally in the interests of the zemindars, who now complained of undue haste. So far as he could judge, the Government of India had acted perfectly right in not postponing this legislation for another session, as the matter was pressing and had been under consideration a number of years. Information had reached him from India to the effect that the zemindars considered the legislation extremely unfair as regarded them, and that the ryots also looked upon the legislation as unfair towards them. Therefore, he thought there was a strong presumption that the whole question had been treated in a fair and impartial manner. The noble earl had spoken of the Bill as an attempt to introduce the three F's into India.

The Earl of WEMYSS observed that he only said that it proceeded on the lines of the Irish legislation of Her Majesty's Government.

The Earl of KIMBERLEY said the Bill was prepared by gentlemen versed in Indian affairs, but who had nothing to do with Ireland. The Government had acted in the matter entirely upon Indian principles, and in accordance with Indian precedents. If the Indian legislation had any resemblance to Irish legislation it was merely a coincidence, as it was never intended to apply the same principles in countries so utterly dissimilar. He had only to make one further observation in answer to a remark by the noble earl that the Bill, although passed, was not yet law. He believed that the Bill would not come into operation for a certain time, but whenever it did operate, according to its own clauses, it would require no assent from the Crown, for an Act passed by the Legislative Council of India took effect from the time of passing. Of course, it was open to the Secretary of State to advise Her Majesty to disallow the Bill—(hear, hear). It would not be desirable that he should anticipate the result of a careful examination of the Bill when it came before him officially. At the same time he thought it his duty at once to state that this legislation had in principle the full approbation of Her Majesty's Government, and therefore it was extremely improbable that he should advise Her Majesty to disallow the Bill.
